"The relations between Britain, France, and the United States to-day are so close, their aims so similar, their territories and fields of operation so clearly defined and so different, that these powers might properly unite in inviting other nations to consider the question of such a league as has been sketched. It is a subject well worthy the attention of their rulers, for of all the modes of hastening the end of war this appears the easiest and the best.

"We have no reason to doubt that arbitration in its present optional form will continue its rapid progress, and that it in itself contains the elements required finally to lead us to peace, for it conquers wherever it is tried, but it is none the less gratifying to know that there is in reserve a drastic mode of enforcement, if needed, which would promptly banish war."

CHRISTIANITY AGAINST WAR.

Mr. Carnegie's address was devoted entirely to the desirability, necessity, and possibility of putting an end to war. He said in part:

"Nothing can be clearer than that the leaders of Christianity immediately succeeding Christ, from whom authentic expressions of doctrines have come down to us, were well assured that their Master had forbidden to the Christian the killing of men in war or enlisting in the legions. We may well wonder that Christian priests accompany the armies of our day, and even dare to approach the Unknown, beseeching His protection and favor for soldiers in their heinous work. Future ages are to pronounce all this blasphemous. There are those of to-day who deplore it deeply.

"Much has man accomplished in his upward march from savagery, but the indelible mark of war still remains to stain the earth and discredit our claim to civilization. But I ask your attention for a few minutes to many bright rays, piercing the dark cloud, which encourage us. Consider for a moment what war was in days past. It knew no laws, had no restrictions. Poison and assassination of opposing rulers and Generals, arranged by private bargain and deceptive agreements, were legitimate weapons. Prisoners were massacred or enslaved. No quarter was given. Enemies were tortured and mutilated. Women, children, and non-combatants were not spared. Wells were poisoned. Private property was not respected. Pillage was the rule. Privateering and private war were allowed. Neutral rights at sea were almost unknown.

"One deplorable exception exists to the march of improvement. A new stain has recently crept into the rules of war, as foul as any that war has been forced by public sentiment to discard. To-day it is held that a formal declaration of war is not indispensable, and that war can exist without it. Here is the only step backward to be met with in the steady progress of mollifying the rules of war. It proclaims that any party to a dispute can first in his right hand carry gentle peace, sitting in friendly conference, ostensibly engaged in finding a peaceful solution of differences, while with the left he grasps, concealed, the assassin's dagger.

"It is to be hoped that the coming conference will stamp this treachery as contrary to the rules of war, and thus return to the ancient and more chivalrous idea of attack only after notice.

VALUE OF HAGUE TRIBUNAL.

"At last there is no excuse for war. A tribunal is now at hand to judge wisely and deliver righteous judgment between nations. It has made an auspicious start. A number of disputes have already been settled by it. The Hague Tribunal has nothing compulsory about it. Peace wins her way not by force; her appeal is to reason and the conscience of man. The greatest step forward in this direction is that Denmark and The Netherlands and Chile and Argentina have just concluded treaties agreeing to submit to arbitration all disputes, making no exception whatever. Norway and Sweden closely follow. What our race should now do is to follow the example set and conclude such a treaty, operative within the wide boundaries of English speakers, empire and republic. Less than this were derogatory to our past as pioneers of progress. We cannot long permit these six small nations to march in advance.

"Signs of action in favor of universal peace abound. Should the proposed periodic congress be established we shall have the germ of the Council of Nations, which is coming to keep the peace of the world, judging between nations as the Supreme Court of the United States Judges to-day between States embracing an area larger than Europe. It will be no novelty, but merely an extension of an agency already proved upon a smaller scale."

DEGREES FOR FIVE AMERICANS.

At the close of Mr. Carnegie's address degrees were conferred on the five Americans and on four Scotchmen. The Dean in introducing Bishop Potter and Ambassador Reid said they were both distinguished citizens of the Lord Rector's adopted country. Bishop Potter was probably more widely known in Great Britain than any other American churchman.

Bishop Potter, who replied briefly, was received with great applause.

In presenting Mr. Reid the Dean was specially eulogistic. He said Mr. Reid's services and career were well worthy of his ancestry. In the course of his speech the Dean made a happy allusion to President Roosevelt, whose name was loudly cheered.

Mr. Reid, in replying, thanked the Dean for the hearty and kindly reception in the name of "our gallant and spirited Colonel of Rough Riders," who had also earned the Rector's praise for his practical diplomacy in the direction of peace between two great nations.

The Dean next presented Ambassador Tower, and described him as a man whose career spoke of everything that was best in mental and moral culture and in the highest of human aspirations.

All the Americans were received most enthusiastically.

WEAVER GAINS A LEADER.

Ward Committee and Councilmen Follow Klang Into Mayor's Camp.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 17.—A new feature in political campaigning in Philadelphia was the appointment to-day by William T. Tilden, Chairman of the City Party Campaign Committee, of twenty-nine women, wives of prominent citizens, to make a special effort to get out the stay-at-homes.

John Klang, Republican leader of the Twelfth Ward, one of the organization's strongholds, in a statement to-day said he would stand by Weaver's administration. Twenty-eight members of the Ward Committee and the Common Councilmen from the ward followed Klang's action.

Bullets Pierce a Destroyer's Funnel—Perdicaris Says a Punitive Expedition Is Needed.

LONDON, Wednesday, Oct. 18.—The correspondent of The Daily Mail at Madrid says that, fearing an attack by a British torpedo boat, the bandits of the Anjera tribe who captured the British officers, Capt. Crowther and Lieut. Hatton, have released them.

The two officers have arrived at Ceuta.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES

TANGIER, Oct. 17.—Capt. Crowther and Lieut. Hatton of the Marines, who had taken life-saving apparatus from Gibraltar to the spot where H. M. ship Assistance is ashore near Tetuan, have been captured by Anjera tribesmen and carried into the mountains.

Owing to the boisterous weather they had proceeded via Ceuta and thence overland. It was on the return journey to Ceuta that their capture was effected.

The tribesmen who committeed the outrage are relatives of the famous brigand nicknamed Valiente, who was arrested a few months ago at the instigation of several legations, and is in prison at Tangier. His relatives have put into effect a threat they have been making for some time to capture Europeans in order to obtain his release. They say they will hold the two British officers until Valiente has been set free. This was the outcome of a demand made upon them thie afternoon for the restoration to liberty of their captives.

The prisoners are held within sight of Gibraltar and the Atlantic fleet, to which they are attached. The incident causee little astonishment here, seeing that no steps whatever were taken to punish the perpetrators of similar outrages which have recently occurred.

Valiente was imprisoned by order of the Spanish Government. It now remains for that Government to consent to his release before the Moors will let him go.

TANGIER, Oct. 17.—Capt. Crowther and Lieut. Hatton had an escort of twenty-one Riff tribesmen, and were attacked by half a dozen Anjeras under a brother of Valiente. The Riffs fled and the two officers were overpowered. The same band lately assassinated the Governor of Ceuta and his son.

The Minister of Foreign Affairs, Mohammed el Torres, dispatched couriers to ascertain the whereabouts of the captured officers and open negotiations with their captors.

Late to-day communication was effected with the captives. The brigand chief demanded as the terms for their release the freedom of Valiente.

GIBRALTAR, Oct. 17.—The British torpedo boat destroyer Cherwell reports that yesterday evening while anchored between Ceuta and Ceree she was fired at by Moors, whose bullets pierced her funnel.

The Cherwell threw her searchlight on the assailants.

There were no casualities.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Ion Perdicaris said to-night that had not the Anjera tribesmen got scared and released Capt. Crowther and Lieut. Hatton it would have been almost impossible to compel them to give up their captives. He added:

"These Anjeras are rough fellows and their chief, Duas, is an ignorant peasant, a very different kind of a man from Raisulli. They can retire into the mountains, which are almost perfect natural fortresses, and where they know every foot of the ground. A party sent after them would be hampered by ignorance of the country as well as its natural difficulties.

"The situation there seems to be steadily growing worse. This is the fourth case since my own. When I was released I went to Paris specially to lay the matter before the Government, but it was impossible to awaken the authorities to a sense of the seriousness of the affair or to accomplish anything. Pressure on the chief of tribes accomplishes little, because there is absolutely no cohesion among the tribesmen. They obey a chief as long as they wish, and when they get tired of him be can do nothing to hold them.

"But, difficult as it may be, it will only be by a strong punitive expedition that the tribesmen can be made to behave."

Forty Striking Printers Injured—Mob Fires at Cossacks.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 17.—In an encounter between the police and striking printers at the Government Bureau of Printing and Engraving this afternoon forty persons were injured, but none seriously. The printers attempted to hold a meeting against the command of Minister of Finance Kokovsoff, who requisitioned police, and the strikers were driven from the building.

There was shooting to-day at the Pahl Cotton Mill in the eastern suburb of the city. The workmen in the Nevsky works on the Schlusselburg Road, dissatisfied with the exclusion of the working classes from the Douma, struck to-day and forced the men in the Pahl Cotton Mill and other concerns to join them. The strikers attacked a street car and injured one woman.

A regiment of Cossacks, with sappers and infantry, were called out and were fired on by the strikers and stoned. The troops had been instructed not to fire on the strikers and they retired after firing in the air. A Cossack officer and two Cossacks were wounded and a horse was killed.

Two wagon loads of vodka were seized by the strikers.

CHAUFFEUR TOOK A NAP.

While He Slumbered His Machine Hit an Elevated Pillar.

Asleep at the wheel of a big French touring car running at a speed of ten miles an hour, Joseph Romano, the chauffeur, and two fashionably dressed women dozing in the tonneau were rudely awakened yesterday morning by the machine crashing into an elevated pillar at 125th Street and Eighth Avenue.

Romano was thrown out of the machine and was picked up on the car tracks in a dazed condition. The women were thrown in a heap in the corner of the tonneau, but were not hurt.

The car belonged to Leo Oppenheimer of 316 West 101st Street. Mr. Oppenheimer said that Romano took the machine without his consent, and that he had no idea who the two women were.

MISS ROOSEVELT TO PAY $25,000 DUTY ON GIFTS

Presents from Oriental Rulers Embarrassing on Her Return.

DEBATE IN CONGRESS FEARED

Appeal for Relief from Customs Is Unlikely—Secretary Shaw Calls It a Hardship.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Miss Alice Roosevelt has cause to regret the munificence of the people she met abroad, according to Secretary Shaw. He said to-day that she would have to pay an enormous duty, probably as much as $25,000, on her presents. Wherever she went gifts were lavished upon her by foreign rulers, who did it to show their good feeling to the United States. They had no idea their gifts were costing her so much money.

One hardship of the situation, Secretary Shaw points out, is that these gifts were entirely unsought. If Miss Roosevelt had wanted to pay out $25,000 in customs duties she probably would have preferred to make her own choice of the articles she was to bring back with her. It would not be hazarding a great deal to say that a good many of the gifts were not only unsought but undesired. But the law recognizes no exception save for members of the Diplomatic Corps.

The probability is that the Roosevelt family will feel this loss. They are not rich, and are spending a great deal of money yearly in keeping up the necessary social life at the White House. A few foreign trips by Miss Alice might turn out to be a serious matter.

Miss Roosevelt, of course, cannot return the gifts any more than she could have rejected them. There is some talk about Mr. Shaw's reporting the circumstances to leading Congressmen and their recommending refund of the duties. Such a proceeding is regarded generally as unlikely to be taken in view of the kind of debate which would follow in Congress.

THE VALUE OF TIME

Lies in making use of it. Not a day passes without bringing up some general problem connected with your business or profession, or with your home life, the solving of which will add materially to your understanding of life and your better equipment for your life's problem.

Do you make it a point to master these questions?

THE PROFIT OF MULTIPLICATION

Comes to him who lets no question pass. Thus he multiplies knowledge. A young lawyer became so absorbed in his profession that he often arose in the midst of the night to return to his library, working there until morning. That young lawyer became afterwards the acknowledged leader of the West Virginia bar. Are YOU putting forth that kind of effort?

THE NEW INTERNATIONAL ENCYCLOPÆDIA

Is a practical aid to the business or professional man, to the club woman or to the student in school. It embodies the fruit of 200 years' observation of the faults and merits of encyclopædias. It is an evolution--a near approach to perfection. It is the most recent work of the kind in existence, and hence embodies a fuller view of the world and its history and the progress of science and civilization. It is the only encyclopædia published in language that fascinates with interest--that burns impressions on the memory and invites reading and study.

MORE INFORMATION.

The New International's 67,097 articles, embracing 100,000 related subjects in 100 distinct Departments of Knowledge (almost everything you can think of from 5,000 B. C. down to the present day), cover more information than is found in any other encyclopædia.

MORE ILLUSTRATIONS.

The 200 rich photogravure reproductions of portraits of famous persons, paintings, landscapes, statuary, and noted buildings and the hundreds of beautiful colored plates and duotints make the volumes rare as a work of art, while the multitudinous cuts, charts, diagrams and maps of countries, states and cities—all illuming the text, form a collection that, bound separately, would fill a volume larger than Webster's Unabridged Dictionary.

MORE SOLID SATISFACTION.

The graphic, stirring style--literature in itself—the complete survey of the World and its progress through all times, the ease with which everything is found—makes the New International more satisfying than all others combined.

Hundreds of noted men, each an authority in his line, contributed original material to the volumes and each article so secured was tested and proven by other authorities before its final acceptance. Every article is unbiased fact—not prejudiced opinion.

The New International presents only the TRUTH, pure and unbiased, on every subject in the language. It presents ALL the truth on EVERY subject.

Noted Men and Women---Leaders in All Lines---Find It a Necessity.

VICE PRES. CHAS. W. FAIRBANKS says: "I find the New International Encyclopaedia most valuable, and prepared with great care. It is a pleasure to commend such a work."

SENATOR CULLOM says: "I take pleasure in commending the New International Encyclopaedia. It is a great work, and ought to be in the libraries of every man who has occasion to use an encyclopaedia."

REV. CHAS. PARKHURST makes daily use of the New International. Has come to know it by using it and considers it indispensable.

LEWIS SAYER BURCHARD, Attorney and Counsellor, New York, says: "The arrival of your New International in our house has afforded my daughter, who is just growing into the habit of using books, and myself real pleasure. I have already had occasion to employ in my professional work three or four of your articles on technical subjects. You are to be congratulated on having produced such a substantial and interesting contribution to the Home Library."

REV. R. S. MACARTHUR says: "No Encyclopaedia now offered to the public is superior to the New International."

AMELIA E. BARR says: "The New Encyclopaedia is a working library in itself; a family reference book of the highest order, and no one desiring to keep abreast of the times can afford to be without it."

MRS. FRANCIS W. GRAHAM, Pres. N. Y. State W. C. T. U., says: "I am glad to give a word of testimony for the New International Encyclopaedia. I rejoice in the possession of this valuable addition to my library, as it fills a place which no other work possibly could fill."

REV. WASHINGTON GLADDEN says: "The New International Encyclopaedia surpasses all others as a book of general reference."

A WISE EMPEROR.

Americans have listened neither patiently nor with credence to the story that Mr. ROOSEVELT acted on the suggestion of another when he invited Russia and Japan to compose their differences. The President's title of peacemaker is established on the very highest authority by this passage from the imperial rescript issued in Tokio with the official copy of the treaty bearing the Mikado's acceptance and ratification:

> When the President of the United States, in the interests of peace and humanity, suggested that the Governments of Japan and Russia should arrange terms of peace, fully appreciating his kindness and good-will, we accepted the suggestion and at the proper moment appointed plenipotentiaries to confer with those of Russia.

The piety of the Mikado has the interesting quality of being practical. "Trust in GOD and keep your powder dry" is an admonition with which English-speaking people have been familiar for several centuries. The success of the Japanese arms in maintaining the prestige and dignity of the empire, says the Mikado, was "due in a large measure to the benign spirits of our ancestors." But he added that "devotion to duty of our civil and military officers, and the self-denying patriotism of all our people" had a good deal to do with bringing about the result. The Mikado also does a little something in his own way to lay deeper the foundation of the national faith. He wants to give posterity something substantial for which it can thank the benign spirits of its ancestors. Accordingly, he bids every loyal Jap to go to work. "An earnest endeavor should be made," he says, "to attain success in peaceful pursuits, so that in equal measure with its power the prosperity of the country may be maintained and its permanent progress assured." He warns his subjects against "manifestations of vainglorious pride," and commands them to go about their lawful affairs and "do all that lies in their power to strengthen the empire."

This is sage counsel, the best and wisest any sovereign can give his people when war's destructive fury is past and the works of peace should again engage the people's energy. At Appomattox GRANT told LEE his men should keep their horses—they would need them for the Spring plowing. If the Mikado's subjects take his advice they will presently be heard from in the markets of the world. It has been a costly war for Japan. She has a great debt to be paid. The waste and the loss must be made up. It can be made up by the industry of the people, by their skill in manufacture, and their genius for trade. The natural resources of the island empire are not great—that is, her debt cannot be paid out of the products of her mines, her forests, and her soil, as our great war debt was paid. But the Japanese have skill and taste and artistic sense that are capable of being capitalized, as COLBERT capitalized the taste and skill and artistic sense of the French people more than two hundred years ago. The Japanese work cheaply—that will give them a great advantage in those Far Eastern markets for which all the manufacturing nations are eagerly competing. The Mikado's empire has asserted and won a controlling position in the east of Asia. The alliance with England supplies a new and important element of strength. Japan is at peace, and the continuance of peace is pretty well assured. Her industrial and commercial advancement ought to be rapid enough to astonish the world.

RIGHT IMMIGRATION TO THE SOUTH

The conference on immigration and quarantine for the South which will meet at Chattanooga on the 9th and 10th of next month ought to be an important and influential body. The call for it is signed by the Governors of thirteen Southern States, all, in fact, save those of Alabama and Arkansas, and by commercial bodies in those two States. As to quarantine it is probable that the conference will take action in favor of turning that matter over to the Federal Government, the intense inconvenience and mischief of State and municipal quarantine having been shown plainly in the recent experience with yellow fever. As to immigration the tone of the discussion preceding the conference indicates that the policy of greater restriction will be strongly urged.

Opposition to the encouragement of immigration in the South springs from a number of sources. Recently it has been stimulated by the fact that the yellow fever in New Orleans was largely originated and spread among newly arrived Italians. Apart from such specific influences there is the feeling in the South that the actual race and labor problems are serious enough, and a strong apprehension that they will be increased in number and made harder to deal with by immigration. It is, therefore, likely that the tone of the conference will incline to further limitation of immigration and to "protection" for the entire Nation against "undesirables." Apparently the Southern sentiment at the present time is adverse to immigration of all except those who can be relied on to become tillers of the soil.

We trust, however, that the conference will not confine itself to purely negative action, and that there will be found among the delegates some able and ready to discuss the serious question how really desirable immigrants can be attracted to the South. It is the opinion of those in a position to form an intelligent opinion that large numbers of immigrants now arrive in the Northern ports who with proper instruction and guidance would go to the South, settle there, and contribute substantially to its progress and prosperity, and that this number could be steadily increased. Unquestionably there is a need for increased population of the right sort in the South. That section has very large and varied undeveloped resources; neither in agriculture and manufacturing nor in the trades connected therewith are the capabilities of the South worked more than superficially. The immense progress it has made in the last thirty years is very striking and valuable, but it is the merest fraction of what surely awaits development, and the prime condition of development is active human labor. Frankly, we do not think that the best interests of the South will be served nearly as much by greater restriction of general immigration as by some rational system for the encouragement of the best immigration and for directing it where it is most needed. As the call for the conference especially designates as delegates Commissioners of Agriculture and the General Immigration Agents of the railroads, together with a representative of each university in the South, this view of the problem ought to receive intelligent attention.

"TOO MUCH GOLD."

A little while ago some theoretical financiers were complaining that there was too much gold in the world. An 8 per cent. money market here and a worldwide rise of interest has supplied an answer to them. Now an esteemed St. Louis contemporary makes the more specific complaint that "there is too much gold in the Treasury," to wit, on the day of complaint, "nearly $800,000,000." It is necessary to admit it, but our Republican friends ought to be ashamed of the partisan use to which they put the fact. They know that whatever gold is idle in the Treasury is as useless as though buried. They know that the aggregation of gold is very different from a large surplus. So far as the Treasury surplus was large it was proof of extravagant taxation, and now that the surplus is dwindling it is proof of extravagant expenditure. Our Republican friends do not need to be told that $522,464,969 of this gold is in the trust funds, earmarked for a use beyond the control of the Treasury. Of gold coin and certificates together only $119,000,000 is in the general fund, and $150,000,000 is devoted to securing the redemption of the greenbacks.

In the sense that any excess of gold in the Treasury above necessity is objectionable, the criticism is well founded. But the Treasury has such compelling uses for the bulk of its gold that we would be ashamed to make the same partisan use of the facts as the Republicans who taunt the Democrats with inability to keep gold in the Treasury under the drain imposed by Republican statutes during CLEVELAND'S Administration.

We think it a fair question, however, to ask our Republican friends how it happens under such a plethora of gold the gold in our currency is only 44.9 per cent., while in Great Britain it is 70 per cent., in France 62.12 per cent., in Germany 66.10 per cent., in Russia 87.71 per cent., and in Austria-Hungary 68.90 per cent. The percentages are good Republican calculations, being Treasurer ROBERTS'S. The answer we suggest is that there is too much gold in the Treasury and too little in circulation, because the Treasury is in the banking business, and holds much gold which would perform similar duties more usefully and economically if it were in banking reserves or in people's pockets. The Republican system makes Wall Street hang upon the Secretary of the Treasury, and makes him wait upon Wall Street, in a manner demoralizing to both. There should be no politics in finance, and then politics would be free from much which now degrades it. There is too much gold in the Treasury, not because it contains nearly $800,000,000, but because the Treasury is discharging some functions which do not belong to it.

RAILROADS AND WALL STREET.

It was announced yesterday that the Pennsylvania Railroad is placing its largest equipment order, a matter of $21,000,000 expenditure. Sapient Wall Street could see only the outlay, and the stock has moved heavily with the market. There is never any use quarreling with the market, but it is always well to remember that it turns upon many things which are of no concern to those chiefly interested in values. The true worth of Pennsylvania, for instance, is in no sort of relation to the moment's demand for capital. The price of Pennsylvania, or any other security, to-day is involved in the world's auction for the floating gold supply. If gold comes here credit will be enlarged and Pennsylvania will sell higher, although worth no more. If France in preparation for the Russian loan keeps its gold until a more convenient season for sparing it, the money market will lack that relief and the average of prices may recede.

Such considerations are apart from factors affecting permanent increments of value, such as now is attested by numerous instances. The other day it was the Southern Railway which announced a large increase of investment and immigration along its lines. Yesterday St. Louis and San Francisco, a constituent of the Rock Island system, reported: "During the fiscal year our industrial department has located 368 new industries which have been completed and put in operation on the track of the system lines. The estimated cost of such new plants is $10,538,000, and the number of men employed therein is 9,939." And Pennsylvania is ordering locomotives by the hundred and cars by the thousand because it has no alternative. At Buffalo 4,000,000 bushels of grain are awaiting movement, and the carriage of coal is impeded by lack of rolling stock. Those who know how to take advantage of market humors neglect such facts, but those who attach greater weight to them than to price movements are indifferent to daily fluctuations, knowing that while the surface waves may be ruffled their ups and downs afford no clue to whether the tide of values is rising or falling. There will be a sign that it is failing when railways find they have a surplus of equipment. True values are rising so long as traffic exceeds the means of carrying it.

IT IS UP TO US.

Mr. JEROME has put his candidacy on precisely the right ground. You all know, he says to his fellow-citizens, what kind of District Attorney I have been. If that is the kind you want, it is your business and not mine to see me put in office again.

That is perfectly true. And it is true that it is all the more our business since Mr. JEROME has been an honest and courageous District Attorney doing his duty, as we all know that he has done it, without fear or favor. And all the more, again, because he has done it so well that not one of the organizations which have "use" for a District Attorney to come down with tremendous severity on some class of malefactors and to connive at and ignore the malefactions of some other class has ventured to renominate the man whom they all know that none of them can use.

All the more that puts it up to the people whether they will allow a faithful public servant to be deprived of the chance of serving them again because he has served them too faithfully already. That is the most important question by far which is to come before the people of New York County at the coming election. It is not Mr. JEROME, it is the people of the county who are on trial.

MR. GIBSON'S CHOICE.

We yesterday gave an account of how Mr. CHARLES DANA GIBSON, already famous and fortunate as the creator of "the Gibson girl" and the leading "black and white man" in his line in the United States, had given up a certainty of $65,000 a year to go to Europe and study art. Perhaps he wishes mainly to amuse himself. Perhaps he wishes mainly to "show a besotted world," especially a besotted art world, that Mr. GIBSON is a painter as well as a moralist and a satirist and a man who can draw more or less. To be "the American Du Maurier" is not enough for him. Why should it be? To be the Anglo-French Du Maurier was not good enough for his original, who, when elderly and half blind, abandoned draughtsmanship for fiction, and wrote the novel of its season, and of several seasons thereafter.

Very possibly, but not quite probably, DU MAURIER'S primary object in betaking himself to fiction was to show that he could write as well as draw with such popular acceptance as to increase his income. More probably it was simply to show, for the satisfaction of his friends, and particularly for the satisfaction of himself, that he could write as well as draw. In short, it amused him to write "Peter Ibbetson" and "Trilby" and "The Martian," and that was why he did it. We authentically know that it amuses Mr. GIBSON to prove that he can paint as well as draw, or at least to find out to his own satisfaction whether he can or not. Finding himself in a position to afford to prosecute this amusing research, he determines to prosecute it.

Where is the wonder, which it is so wonderful to hear expressed at this determination? That wonder should be expressed at the fact that a man gives up a certainty of $65,000 a year in order to do something which he likes better than to do the work by which he gains that income is a depressing proof of the hold which the "mercantile standard" has taken on the popular mind. Why should a man desire money? Obviously in order to be secure, in order to be independent, in order to be free to do what he likes. There are men who find their greatest interest in the pursuits by which they are enabled to gain most money, and who derive their amusement from the acquisition. Happy men! There are others who serve for years at what they do not like in order to be able to do what they do like. To say that they shall continue the most lucrative exercise of their faculties is to make them the slaves of their money, instead of the masters of it. Of what use is it to them? Surely it does protect them from material cares. But the very purpose of being protected from material cares is to be free to devote one's self to intellectual ambitions, literary, artistic, or otherwise, or even to "hobbies." We cannot all be Russell Sages. If we could, it would be a very bad lookout for us as a community. In that case, as the poet has remarked, the world

> One sink of level avarice would lie,
> And scholars, poets, Kings, unhonored die.

Another poet, HOMER as translated by POPE, has reminded us that the day that makes a man a slave takes half his worth away. There is no more excuse for a man's making himself a slave to his income, when he has enough of income assured for his requirements, than for making a slave of himself to a fellow-man. He is a fool for doing it, if he has anything more attractive to do, and finds he can afford to do that. Mr. GIBSON has simply made the decision of a sensible man bent upon getting the best and utmost out of his life. That his decision should be rated as eccentric simply shows an eccentricity of the standards of those who thus rate it, and who show such a preposterous persistence in putting the cart before the horse.

If Mr. JEROME had given no other evidence of his possession of the courage and candor needed in his and in all public offices, his talk to the members of the Board of Building Trades was convincing enough. In substance he told them that while he believed in most of the professed doctrines of the trades unionists, he had dealt with offenders against the law from among trades unionists as he had dealt with others from other classes. But in the matter of SAM PARKS he had been "bitter."

I was bitter, and I'll tell you why. Great big men, men who could have broken me in two with their hands, came down to my Rutgers Street house late at night—afraid as though they were to be caught and punished for it—and cried like children when they told me of the sufferings which were imposed on them by PARKS—PARKS who kept them from work, not for their own good, but in the cruel greed which made him ruthless of them when he was filling his own pockets with graft. And I would have been a sneak and a whits-livered hound if I had not been bitter.

Talk like that does more to clear the minds of labor men from cant and confusion than volumes of political economy. In this case the audience responded to it with hearty applause. They may not vote for Mr. JEROME; like many better-schooled men, they do not always vote their convictions; but they know what sort of man he is and they know better than they did at least one danger to which the unions are exposed.

Secretary SHAW finally took his burden to the President and told him about it.

"There is only one thing to do," replied Mr. ROOSEVELT. "That is to treat my daughter's baggage as you would the baggage of any other private person. She will pay duty on everything that is dutiable."—News Dispatch.

If this report be true, then our State Malvolio—the Honorable the Secretary of the Treasury, self-styled—has qualified himself gloriously for an increase of title. Let him be named the Admirable the Flunky of the Cabinet.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Heroism and Its Rewarding.

Reading the listsd awards of medals and money made by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission, one is struck by ths fact that of the ten who won recognition as worthy to wear the very large—and, if the truth must be told, rather burdensome—name of "hero," nine earned it by saving the life of somebody who was in danger of drowning. The other was a man who rescued a companion from asphyxiation in the shaft of a coal mine, and that, too, is a form of drowning. If one were ready to admit—which several more than one ars not—that these Commissioners have, or could have, selected for recognition and reward the ten most heroic acts that were performed in this large country in 1904, one would also be ready to admit that in modern life the opportunities to be heroic are all of this one kind and that anybody who doesn't happen to be present when somebody else falls into the water can sigh in vain for a chance to reveal the quality of self-sacrificing courage which is, of all human qualities, that which every one of us, whether we are capable of showing it or not, admire most warmly and most sincerely. And this is reduction to an absurdity with a vengeance. We have no slightest desire to detract from the credit of the gallant ten who have received the Carnegie largess, and almost as little to decrease the self-satisfaction of the Commissioners. The ten did that more than duty which is the essence of heroism in its latter-day meaning, and the Commissioners have doubtless performed a difficult task as well as they could. We half suspect, however, that the element of true nobility in the life savers does not vibrate with unmixed joy as a result of this public definition, and that in their hearts the members of the board realize that they have been engaged in a ceremony which, despite its solemnity, is just a little absurd—which escapes being more absurd than it is only because of universal recognition that everybody concerned acted with the very best of intentions. The one fitting reward for heroism is apotheosis—a placing among the gods. Medals and money are irrelevant to it and incongruous with it, though they work in very well, sometimes, as extremely minor incidents. When they are all there is to the thing the situation becomes a hit pathetic—or would if it were not so provocative of impatience. We have no doubt that 500 people were saved from drowning in this country last year, and we admire the rescuers as much as do the most emotional of our contemporaries, but when it comes to picking out 10 of the 500 and saying that these are the Nation's heroes—oh, say, now!

A Wild Night in Philadelphia.

That was indeed a noble manifestation of civic virtue that took place in Philadelphia Monday evening. Gov. FOLK had made a speech in a public hall, expressing with energy the sentiments of any honest man when confronted with shameless corruption long continued, but what there was in his remarks to excite the Philadelphians we can't for the life of us see. Most of the facts to which the Governor referred have been perfectly well known to them for many years—not in quite as full detail as now, to be sure, and yet in a way far beyond doubt or question—and through all those years the Philadelphians endured the situation created by those facts and the reflection cast upon themselves by the situation with almost no signs of discontent or anxiety. What they have allowed to be done—or to be begun—for them this year they could have done for themselves much more thoroughly in any one of the preceding years, and they did nothing at all. The situation exactly suited no small number of them, and the rest liked it better than the trouble—the not very great trouble—it would have taken to sweep their brigands out of power and into jail. And now comes an eloquent gentleman from Missouri, tells the familiar story for the hundredth time, informs them that stealing is on the whole reprehensible, and at once they assemble in vast throngs, march through the streets to the Durham and McNichol residences, and threaten to do dreadful things with ropes and torches! Note well that these mad rioters don't do any of the dreadful things; they only bellow and yammer for a while and then go home under the apparent impression that they have been taking part in a most desperate proceeding and that the forces of municipal evil have at last got what they deserve. Of course, we do not regret that the lampposts of Philadelphia remained undecorated, but it cannot be denied that the fact that they did so remain after all the hullabaloo does add the finishing touch of futility to a picture already sufficiently ridiculous. It hardly needed this proof, however, to convince the rest of the country that Philadelphia is still far from sure that it wants to get rid of misrule.

That "Class in Vivisection."

Despite the care with which we hastened to explain the error in a recent dispatch of ours that announced the formation of a "class in vivisection" at the University of Chicago, we are receiving a large number of letters proclaiming vehement horror at—what has not occurred. Let us again assure these troubled ones that there is no "class in vivisection" in Chicago, and none anywhere else so far as we know. Surely, even for the anti-vivisectionists, proud as they are that reason and argument from experience have no weight with them, there must be a large difference between a "class in vivisection" and a class to which certain physiological facts are taught in the only way those facts can be taught effectively—by practical demonstration on the living but unconscious animal. Some excuse exists for believing that there have been a few criminals posing as scientists to whom vivisection became an end instead of a means, but we cannot ourselves see what more that deplorable phenomenon has to do with this great source of priceless knowledge than the murders which have been committed with breadknives have to do with the question whether a respectable family should supply itself with that utensil and employ the same for its legitimate purpose.

TO BE OR NOT TO BE IRISH.

A Question That Seems to Agitate a Number of Persons.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In reference to the letter of "Crom-a-boo" of this date in your issue, I would ask him, Why pander to the ignorance of the few?

We have the Irishmen of the bogs and the Irishmen of the colleges. Those who cannot see the difference are not worth considering.

"Don't say you are Irish," was the advice given to me when I came to this country first. I have not followed it. Whenever I could I have proclaimed the fact of my Irish birth from the housetops, and I have never found it injurious.

ALEXANDER McARTHUR.
New York, Oct. 16, 1905.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I, too, am an Irishman, and like both Messrs. "Erle" and "Crom-a-boo," I don't quite like to be mixed up with some of the persons in New York City who pose as Irishmen. I might also mention that "Crom-a-boo" is my native place, and I am proud of it.

I noticed that a Mr. McCormack calls Mr. "Erle" (and I suppose I can include myself and all other Irishmen, whose greatest desire is to keep the flag flying) nothing else but reptiles. Now, when we speak of persons as being reptiles we mean that they are contemptible; now who is the more contemptible, Mr. "Erle," who upholds the flag he was born under, or Mr. McCormack?

FAUGH-A-BALLAUGH.
New York, Oct. 16, 1905.

The writer, like "Erle," came from Dublin. My ancestors, as his did, emigrated from England, and like thousands of their countrymen, "became more Irish than the Irish themselves." My ancestors for two generations fought under the Union Jack and participated in European and American wars in defense of that flag.

A man whose ancestors lived for centuries in a land that has fought an unequal battle for hundreds of years "for life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness," and boasts of his willingness to spill the "last drop of his blood" to rivet the chains of the oppressor against his country must be an Ishmaelite indeed. A country, too, that has earned the respect and admiration of every lover of liberty the world over. "I am an American," proud of my Irish blood—and also that of my English—but at the same time I abhor the bloody record of the British Government in its treatment of one of the bravest and most chivalrous people on God's footstool.

MANWARING OF DUBLIN.
Sandy Hill, N. Y., Oct. 16, 1905.

Lamentable.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Ye gods and little fishes! THE TIMES, that I have all along placed on a grammatical pedestal beside The Sun and The Post, talking editorially about a "widow woman"!

M. T. R.

You are unobservant, and see only half your case. THE TIMES said: "A Widow Woman whose husband was Dead." That shows ignorance of grammar and of a lot of other things, doesn't it?—ED. TIMES.

"What is your idea of a true patriot?"

"A true patriot," answered Senator Sorghum, "is a man whose country rewards his services with a statue instead of a bank account."

ALL EYES ON NEW YORK.

The Whole Country Watching the Outcome of Jerome's Candidacy.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The citizens of New York should realize that the entire country is looking with anxious interest at the result of the election for District Attorney in New York County. Self-owning men everywhere throughout this broad land have seen a real popular movement launched to re-elect William Travers Jerome, and they hope and pray for its success.

Not a fusion with its resulting confusion and its alliance with a lesser machine against a greater machine both equally corrupt, but a straight-out fight against all machines, against political corruption of all kinds; against the "organization" control that stifles manliness and individual freedom of action.

An appeal to the people direct, for political progress, for democracy, for the perpetuation of republican institutions. A return to first principles. A new Declaration of Independence. The issue is clearly drawn. If you elect Jerome you serve notice on every convention manipulator and bargainer of offices that he may as well go out of business; that the people have realized democracy and have no further need for their services.

You serve notice on campaign contributors, individual and corporate, who to secure "special favors" furnish the machines with corruption funds that they better find some other use for their money.

You have a strong man, with a strong purpose, who is willing to make this fight for you. Lead the way, New York. Give hope and courage to us all. Elect Jerome.

GEORGE STEWART BROWN.
Baltimore, Oct. 17, 1905.

Hard Fighting Necessary.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Now that the two political parties in this county have, at the dictation of the bosses, turned down the present District Attorney, the question is put directly to the voters: What are you going to do about it? Will you allow the two machines, suspected of acting in concert, to defeat an honest, able, incorruptible official, or will you rise up in your might, and proclaim to the world that New York will never turn its back on a man who has done his duty?

With all the machines against him, Mr. Jerome undoubtedly has a rough road to travel; he can never be re-elected except by the hardest kind of work. I think that an organization should be formed in this county, with branches in every election district, having for its sole object the re-election of the present District Attorney. Each member should be absolutely free to vote as he pleases for the remaining offices, but he should pledge himself to use every honorable means to continue in office the man who has proved himself to be the inveterate foe of graft and corruption.

IN THE "GOOD OLD DAYS" I

Exception Taken to the Recent Lamentations of Sir Edward Fry.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I read with a good deal of interest in to-day's TIMES the letter of your London correspondent giving a report of Sir Edward Fry's lecture before the Birbeck College. Like nearly all old gentlemen, Sir Edward laments the passing away of the good old times, when life, anyhow in the upper circle to which he belongs, was of a much more refined and intellectual type than it is to-day. But what most arouses his wrath is the sight of the vulgar reaching after a pernicious kind of education, and sham culture, among the great mass of the people, who, to his thinking, would be better and happier if they had remained as they were in the good old days when they were content with their ignorance, and had no vulgar aspirations after a mode of life they could neither appreciate nor enjoy.

The present writer is nearly as old as Sir Edward himself, and can remember a time when there were no free schools in England, or free libraries, or free suffrage, and but little free speech, or even free thought.

I can remember hearing a trial when I was a lad where a body of men, workers in an iron foundry, were tried for conspiracy, convicted, and sent to prison for daring to strike for higher wages! I thank God we are a long way from that state of affairs now. I remember when wages were not half what they are to-day, and the great majority of mechanics could not read or write. I remember when the lowest priced newspaper was threepence sterling, say, six cents, and entirely beyond the reach of the working classes. The only method they had of learning what was going on in the world was by a united subscription, and having one of their number who knew how to read take the paper and read it aloud. I remember a time when the hours of labor were four hours greater on the average than they are to-day, and all there was in life for the workers were days of hopeless drudgery relieved by nights of drunkenness! I remember when it was considered a sin to question the tenets of the Established Church, and such wickedness was punished by being shunned by the society of decent people!

Oh, the good old times were perhaps more chivalric and romantic for the favored few than they are to-day, but I fear the great mass of the people were in lamentable discomfort and woeful ignorance, and were not in a position to enjoy them. Our social condition is far from being perfect yet, but I think we are on the right road, and I am glad to see education broadening, if it is not so profound as it might be. T. G.

Are Women Teachers Favored?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

That the Department of Education is one of the cleanest departments in the city; that the men who constitute that department are guided in their actions by the good and welfare of the community, few will deny. Yet a little dark cloud in the clear sky throws a shadow on that department. That dark cloud is the treatment the men with License No. 1 on the eligible list receive.

It is hard to explain why men, after spending years in preparation for teaching, after passing a difficult professional examination, should be forced to wait for an appointment one year, two years, three years, and longer, while the women who pass the same examination at a lower standard are appointed immediately. Why are the men compelled to wait? Aren't the men desirable teachers? Once on the eligible list, they ought to be treated fairly.

The policy of the present board is anything but fair. It does not take into consideration the fact that these men are self-supporting; that these men are ambitious; that a year wasted is a year lost—and who can waste a year at this time of life?—that it is a crime to take from them the opportunity which is theirs by years of hard study. ANXIOUS.

New York, Oct. 16, 1905.

Not Lynched.

From The Columbia State.

A negro that was charged with an attempted assault upon a little white girl has just been convicted in Edgefield and sentenced to twelve years in the State Penitentiary. There was no lynching; the law was allowed to take its course. It is not more than a few weeks since there was a similar case in Darlington, and there, too, the process of the law was not disregarded. These are encouraging tokens. They emphasize the good effects of the campaign which has been waged in this State in behalf of the law. The lynching spirit is being quelled. The cause of civilization is growing in strength. South Carolina is doing well.

MEN AS DOMESTIC SERVANTS.

How Is This as a Solution of the Housekeeping Problem?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

You have had lately two or three sensible articles on the servant help question and have shown us the disinclination of even recently imported immigrant girls to do general housework.

Now, cannot we look the facts in the face and realize that "a condition and not a theory confronts us"? Our small home life, so happy in its memories and realizations, is rapidly becoming a thing of the past, and by hundreds small families are being driven to the boarding house or the flat because of the utter impossibility of procuring help in the house at a figure to be reached by the moderate income. If there has been one thing sacred in the Anglo-Saxon life it has been the Anglo-Saxon home; and our children will miss its influences in the formation of their character. Is it worth making any attempt to preserve? If so, the thing can be done by a rearrangement of forces. The same papers that tell us of the scarcity of girls for general housework tell us of the vast numbers of starving unemployed in our large and small cities. In Robert Hunter's book on "Poverty" I read of "39 per cent. of male workers unemployed in New York," of "27 per cent. in Massachusetts being idle some portion of the year," and "29 per cent. being irregularly employed," of "the average earnings of the Italians amounting to less than $6 a week," of "unskilled labor in the North receiving less than $460 a year and in the South less than $300" wherewith to keep a family.

Now if the girls through false pride or caste feeling will not work for from $3 to $6 per week and "all found," cannot some of these men be found to take their places? If women insist on doing men's work, cannot some men do what has hitherto been considered woman's work? It is surely not any more infra dig to make fires, prepare food, wait on table, clean the house and attend to the needs of a family than to dig drains, mend roads, and make railroads. It is all a matter of that same "caste" which makes life in India almost unlivable, and which will be an equal curse to this country if allowed to spread. Nay, is it not as great a curse already? For in India the caste lines are drawn on some distinctions which can be dimly recognized as sensible, but in Kansas City, where the writer lived for many years, the girls would prefer to work for less wages among all the muck and scum of the packing houses rather than take the many decent, respectable situations which were open to them on every hand at higher rates of wages, shorter hours, and more liberty in the many families of the city.

On the Pacific Coast the work of the house is done and well done by the Chinese and Japanese. Are they the only male people in the world capable of rendering such service? Surely a syndicate or agency for the supply of such servants could be formed on the Atlantic Coast!

Two or three things, however, must be clearly understood. A man must not expect the full union wages of a skilled artisan. He must be content with about what the girls are now getting, which, in these days of life assurance salary grabbers and of gigantic trusts is all the moderate householder is able to pay.

Then there must also be some guarantees of honesty, cleanliness, sobriety, and capability, which the agency should be able to furnish, as well as the ordinary help agency does now with the other sex.

Clad in clean linen and able to do the housework upstairs and down, with appreciative employers and living wages, the lot of many a poor fellow now on the streets vainly seeking a job would be vastly improved, and in a very short time the factory and store girls would envy him his position.

If women desire men's work, let them have their way and do it. They will have their way anyhow. But let some of the men do the women's work. Turn and turn about is but fair play!

Crimes That Must Be Suppressed.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial in THE TIMES of yesterday ought to arouse the people of New York to some action.

The cruel work of the Black Hand Society, with their threatening letters, their cruel way of enforcing their demands, certainly calls for a more thorough investigation by the police of the city.

Our detectives are either not doing their best to bring criminals to justice or they are not capable men, and it is high time we put an end to the lawlessness which seems now to be the order of the day. A woman is not safe on the streets by day, and by night it is highly dangerous.

Only yesterday a young girl was dragged into a stable and assaulted by fourteen men. Each of these brutes should be punished to the fullest extent of the law. Mr. Wormser, in whose employ the girl is, will, I am sure, help to convict these men. We seem to be living in the Dark Ages instead of the new twentieth century. The question is, How can we arouse the Judges, the police, and the community at large? There seems only one way, and that is to form a league all over the city and go back to the old California way of dealing with these culprits. I. M.

Vulgar Souvenir Cards on Sale.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

When Mr. Anthony Comstock has a leisure afternoon he may employ it very profitably in an examination of the souvenir postal cards which are on sale in Broadway. A few days ago I went with my little granddaughter to buy postal cards. I found that there are exposed for sale on the sidewalk, where passing children can scarcely avoid seeing them, cards bearing pictures of the most vulgarly suggestive sort.

I can keep my granddaughter from reading Shaw and from attending physical culture exhibitions, but I cannot prevent her seeing these disgusting and offensive post cards, even when she walks with me in a supposedly respectable shopping district. Can Mr. Comstock not spare the time to make sidewalk displays reasonably decent? If he cannot, is there no law in New York for the protection of young girls against such sights?

The Safe Way to Vote This Year.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The complications of the present campaign make it almost impossible for an intelligent person to vote a straight ticket, and it is surprising how few comparatively know how to vote a mixed ticket. This all comes from the party emblems, and I think the best way is to ignore them altogether and mark each name voted. If the voters could be educated up to doing this the days of the party boss would be numbered. J. D. McJILTON.

JEROME K. JEROME TALKS ON WOMEN

Humorist Says Pretty Ones Will Have a Hard Time.

NO PLAIN GIRLS FOR CONTRAST

"Some Ladies Like to Look Intelligent," He Says, "Others to Look Pleasant."

Jerome K. Jerome shares the misfortune of most men who write humorous matter. He is funnier to read than to hear. But notwithstanding this fact a large audience, mostly feminine, grew genuinely enthusiastic over his stories and anecdotes at the Empire Theatre yesterday afternoon, when he made his first bow—in person—before the American public.

Almost everybody knows by now just what Jerome K. Jerome looks like, so to dilate upon his rosy personality, his twinkling eye, and his bald spot would be labor wasted. He reads agreeably with no special effort at any sort of elocutionary effect. And that is something to be thankful for.

"Pretty women," he began—"I notice most of you look up—are going to have a hard time later on. In future there will be no pretty women because there will be no plain girls to contrast them with."

Mr. Jerome explained that he had come to this conclusion after reading the advertisements in ladies' journals. "And," he added, "I am sure there is hope for all of you just so you have no feature absolutely missing. Some ladies like to look intelligent. [Laughter.] Others like to look pleasant."

The humorist then described the future method of beauty selection.

"The professor," he said, "will quietly offer you your choice of eyes. Delicate blue—one of those useful blues—is best for most purposes. It goes with anything. Here you get depth, passion, intensity—they cost a little more, but pay in the end." So he went on with regard to the other features.

Mr. Jerome then told his story of the sparrows who stole the swallow's nest, and read his description of Uncle Podger's attempt to hang a picture. This familiar specimen of his humor was greeted with much laughter. Then he related some of his amusing experiences in Germany, and added a sentimental touch to his programme in a dissertation on love, his conclusion being "there is only one reason for loving a woman—you want to and you don't know why."

An anecdote or two, another bit of sentiment, and a few pages from one of his books completed the programme.

FOR BELIEVERS IN FAIRIES.

Maude Adams Presents "Peter Pan" —Some Folk Are Mystified.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Maude Adams was warmly received by a crowded house to-night at the National Theatre, where she presented J. M. Barrie's five-act play, "Peter Pan." Her success was unmistakable, and a large part of the audience was wildly enthusiastic, but so peculiar and unconventional is Mr. Barrie's play that another portion of the audience sat silent and mystified, and went out, audibly declaring they could not understand what it was about.

The reason for this mixed verdict is that Mr. Barrie has moved so entirely out of conventional lines. He calls on his hearers to place themselves in the mental attitude they occupied when children. It is not a fairy play, a children's play; it is a play which the auditor is compelled to accept a wild riot of imagination as natural and reasonable.

In Never-Never Land, a dreamy region, live the boys who were lost from home when they were babies. They know the fairies and their leaders in Peter Pan, the only one among them who returns to earth. None of them has known a mother's love, and Peter finds and brings them a little girl, who is to be their mother. She cares for them, but finally returns to the old home with her brother and sister, who have accompanied her.

But mixed in with this are encounters with pirates, battles with Indians, and it is this which confuses the prosaic minded. Mr. Barrie presents not the pirate and Indian of grown-up fiction, but the creations seen by childish eyes.

How daring the experiment was and how it succeeded was shown when Tinker Bell, the fairy, was dying. The only thing that could save her was for grown people to believe in fairies. Peter Pan (Miss Adams) turned to the audience, wrought up as it was by the fairy's danger, and begged them with outstretched hands to save Tinker by waving their handkerchiefs or clapping their hands in token that they believed in fairies. The slightest hesitation would have destroyed the scene, but the audience responded to this risky challenge with a storm of handclapping.

Mildred Morris played the Little Mother and Ernest Law Ford the pirate chief, and both made hits.

MANAGER RAYMOND BANKRUPT

Some of His Road Companies, However, Are Earning Large Profits.

Judge Holt of the United States District Court has appointed Lucien L. Bonheur receiver in bankruptcy of the assets of Melville B. Raymond, theatrical manager, of 110 West Thirty-fourth Street, who filed a petition in bankruptcy on July 12, with liabilities of $194,545. The bond of the receiver was fixed at $10,000, and he is authorized to continue the business in his discretion, but not exceeding twenty days without further order or notice to creditors. The assets consist of producing rights of plays, and their value consists of the profits from the production. There are four companies on the road playing "Buster Brown," one company playing "Arizona," and one company playing "The Seminary Girl."

Mr. Raymond said that the companies now on the road are earning large profits, and if the tours are interrupted or the royalties not paid his rights in "Buster Brown" are forfeited. He stated that some time ago he lost $100,000 on three plays, $78,000 of which was on "The Man from China" and the balance on "The Night Before Christmas" and "Tess of the D'Urbervilles."

KAFIR BAND IN JAIL, AND MIGHTY GLAD, TOO

Clothes the Only Hardship They See in Prison Life.

MAROONED AT BRIGHTON

When the Boer Spectacle Closed They Went Into Camp—Police and Keepers Unhappy.

A doleful chant in guttural rolled down the corridors of the Raymond Street Jail yesterday:

Oom baawaa shimhasi koom
Karaar gota (cluck) ram (click)

"It's that fellow Segota that get's 'em started," growled Deputy Warden Wilson. "How long's that jungle op-ry goin' t' last? This must be where the heroine dies."

"No," said Warden Gale. "She died two weeks ago. They resurrected her last Sunday and they lived happy ever afterward. This thing, Segota says, is the story, musically speaking, of the bunch's adventures since the Boer war show broke up."

At the time of the St. Louis Exposition (upon the horn of the tenth moon, says Segota, twelve Kafirs were brought to this country from South Africa as part of the Boer War exhibit. Later the show opened at Coney Island, and later still there were disasters in the sun. The kilties counted the money in their sporrans and steered for Surf Avenue; the Boers went West, and the managers of the show gathered up the fragments and also departed. But the Kafirs, who had never realized the value of money and the necessity of buying clothing for a Winter which was a mere word to them, settled down in the middle of the arena of the Boer War inclosure and were happy. They seemed to think they were in Africa, not understanding that scenery was a one-sided affair.

One day a Coney Island policeman surmised that there was a misunderstanding. He reported to his Captain, who was then unknown in the Tenderloin. Dooley said:

"They're just vagrants, then. Why didn't you bring 'em along?"

The policeman whispered in his ear. Dooley raised his eyebrows.

"O-o-oh!" he murmured.

Later the policeman returned to the Boer War inclosure with twelve suits of cast-off clothing.

"British Guv-ment'll pay," said Dooley. "They're all British subjects, by right of conquest."

When the twelve British subjects were lined up before Dooley, the Captain was impressed. They were 4 feet odd inches tall; their foreheads struck off at an angle of 45 degrees from the eyebrows; their cheek bones threatened to eclipse their eyes, and all seemed unhappy in their borrowed raiment. One had a Norfolk suit, the knickerbocker straps of which came beneath his ankles; another wore an old suit of evening clothes, the coattails of which made him look like an unhappy cockroach. The most ludicrous object was a Kafir—the only one in the twelve who had received a tie. He was wearing a four-in-hand around his waist.

"Anyhow, they're British subjects," said Dooley. "Take them to Sir Percy Sanderson."

Sir Percy, who is an expert on things of the empire, hemmed and hawed. Finally he decided that they really could not be British subjects. He recommended the Charities Department. The Charities Department unanimously chorused:

"Whether they're British or not, they don't look like true born Americans. The Immigration Department ought to deport them."

Off went the policeman to Commissioner Watchorn with the twelve Kafirs—"Hottentots," the police insisted on calling them—stringing along behind, Segota clinging to Shimbasi's coat tail, Karanoena to Segota's, Molibana to Karanoena's, and so on, all clicking, clucking, and com-baaing.

Commissioner Watchorn shook his head. He suggested a Magistrate and a charge of vagrancy. The policeman jumped at a chance to get rid of the "Hottentots." He went back to Coney Island and appeared before Magistrate Tighe.

"I'll think over the situation," said the Magistrate. "In the meantime I'll commit 'em to Raymond Street Jail."

The Kafirs had not been in the jail an hour before they had taken their clothes off and started a jungle opera. Wilson and Gale were interested at first, then bored, then annoyed, then angry, then frantic.

Three times did Deputy Warden Wilson send them to Coney Island, and three times different Magistrates, having no previous knowledge of the case, remanded them to the Raymond Street Jail.

"But, thank goodness!" said Wilson yesterday, "this is the last of it. Let 'em howl. They're going back to the Coney Island Court; then it'll be up to the Consul or the immigration or charity."

Just then the telephone bell rang. A voice, which said it was at Coney Island, announced that Magistrate Naumer had postponed the "Hottentot" case until Saturday.

Wilson hung up the receiver and broke the news to Gale. Down the corridor in the silence succeeding came the dismal chant:

Taan gloon mabaara (cluck) toork
Choga gimbe zoom—baa!

"Go feed 'em, Tom," said Wilson, feebly.

FISH TOO BIG FOR PELKA.

Struggling with It He Fell and Fractured a Leg.

When Mark Twain said of fishing that it was the next thing to doing nothing he knew not of Joseph Pelka. Pelka, a young German baker of 703 Ninth Avenue and a votary of the Waltonian brand of sport, lies in Roosevelt Hospital to-day, painful proof of the fact that there are violence and excitement even in the gentle art of catching fish.

Pelka, equipped with rod, reel, and bait, passed Patrolman Schaffer at Fifty-sixth Street and Ninth Avenue yesterday morning.

"I go py der pier to take fish der river owld," he told Schaffer with a grin.

"Look out, Joe," admonished Schaffer, "and don't fall overboard."

"Me und mine brudder fish side by each for ten year. We kedge 'em owld, but never der river in do we get wed."

Pelka cast his line from the pier at Fifty-sixth Street. He sat there for two hours without even a symptom of a bite. Finally there was a tug at his line. He began to pull, but pull as he might he couldn't stop the line. Finally he cried for assistance.

"Hel-lup! Hel-lup!" he cried. "I hoog a sharg und he runs py der river. Hel-lup!"

Two loungers ran to Joseph's assistance, and they grabbed his pole. The big fish continued to jerk the line. Finally the pole broke and the two men fell on their backs on the pier. Pelka fell the other way. The lighter Graylock intervened before he reached the river. He sustained a fractured leg, and an ambulance took him to the hospital.

Pelka vows he will fish no more.

U. S. LOSES ON ONE DOG $4.75.

His Board Bill Was $36.75 and He Brings $32 at Auction.

The United States Government was $4.75 out when the auctioneer at the Appraisers' Stores, near the foot of Christopher Street, announced "Gone!" yesterday in the case of a package marked "perishable express." The package happened to be a well-behaved, well-fed, full-blooded French bulldog. Since Aug. 28 the Government has had the dog on its hands, and the bill for keeping him up to noon yesterday totaled exactly $36.75. The dog was bid in for $32 by H. C. Miner.

It was on the Hamburg-American liner Pennsylvania that the dog crossed the Atlantic. He was shipped at Boulogne-sur-Mer, and on the box which imprisoned him was a name, presumably that of the consignee. When the liner reached New York the consignee's name was missing from the box, and the bill of lading failed to clear up the mystery of the dog's destination.

The upshot was that the Government had to take charge of the dog, which was sent to Hexemer's Riding Academy in Hoboken for safe-keeping, the Government agreeing to pay for the dog's board at the rate of 75 cents a day. The dog had to be kept tied all the time, for it would have caused no end of trouble had he escaped, but this did not keep everybody connected with the academy from petting and feeding him. The dog received more attention than has fallen to the lot of any other dog in the history of Hoboken, and Hoboken be it remembered is the American headquarters of at least one-fourth of all the dachshunde on this side of the Atlantic. The other three-fourths are in Cincinnati, St. Louis, and Milwaukee.

Yesterday the Hexemer Company gave out a statement showing what it cost to keep the dog. A little Hobukenite, Fritz Schelleheimer by name, received 25 cents a day to exercise the dog. His bill was $12.25. The beefsteak bill totaled for the period they had him $7.65, and the dog-biscuit bill amounted to $5.10, making the total cost of keeping the dog $25. The profit to the Riding Academy was therefore $11.75.

EVANGELIST LOCKED UP.

Was "Dilatory" in Showing His Permit, Said the Policeman.

Because he was "dilatory" in showing his permit to preach in the street, Samuel Luback, a minister living at 146 West Thirty-sixth Street, was arrested last night by Policeman Seager at the command of Inspector Schmittberger, while preaching at Thirty-sixth Street and Broadway, by the side of the Hotel Marlborough.

Schmittberger, with several detectives, was inspecting the district, when at Thirty-sixth Street a man standing in the crowd about the minister shouted that some one had taken his watch.

"Arrest that minister," said Schmittberger to Seager. Seager went to the minister and asked:

"Where's your permit!"

Mr. Luback produced the paper, holding fast to one end of it. Then the policeman arrested the minister amid the indignation of the crowd.

"What did this man do?" inquired Sergt. Dooley when Seager arraigned his prisoner in the station house.

"Well, he was disorderly and caused a crowd to collect and he was a little dilatory in showing me his permit," said the policeman.

"I held the edge of the permit," said the minister, "because I cannot believe an unbeliever."

The minister, a slightly built man, was disheveled. His coat was ripped down his back, and he looked as if he had been roughly handled.

"Well, we will send for your friends," said the Sergeant, as he entered the charge.

"You need not send for any friends for me," replied the minister indignantly. "I can stay in a cell all night, if need be. My arrest is an outrage."

Half a dozen men, who of the hundreds outside had forced their way into the station, voiced his sentiments.

SEEK NEW TREATY WITH US.

Cuban Associations Start a Movement —Commission to See Palma.

HAVANA, Oct. 17.—The seven commercial, industrial, and agricultural associations of Cuba held a joint meeting here to-day and unanimously passed a resolution to the effect that the great commercial need of Cuba is a new and if possible a permanent commercial treaty with the United States. The meeting elected a commission to initiate a movement toward the arrangement of such a treaty.

The meeting directed the members of the commission to visit President Palma and the members of the Cabinet and acquaint them with the purpose of the movement. They will be received by the President to-morrow.

The merchants, manufacturers, and planters desire a treaty covering not only reciprocity but also general commercial relations. It is said that the movement incidentally presages the certain death of the Anglo-Cuban commercial treaty. Business interests are awakened to the fear of retaliation by the United States if such a treaty is allowed to become effective.

ESCAPING GIRL INJURED.

Trying to Climb Out of a Window, She Fell Forty-five Feet.

Bertha Leftwich, 14 years old, was seriously hurt yesterday evening while attempting to escape from the rooms of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children at 105 Schermerhorn Street, Brooklyn. The girl's home was with her widowed mother, Mrs. Jacob Leftwich of 124 Third Avenue, Brooklyn. Two weeks ago she was charged with petty larceny, and was put in the care of the society.

Last night she pried open a window screen, and in attempting to escape she fell forty-five feet to the pavement. Miss Nellie Daly who lives next door, heard groans in the yard, and, going out, found the injured girl. The girl was taken to the Brooklyn Hospital, where it was said last night that she was suffering from skull fracture and internal injuries.

He was 63 years old.

KAISER'S HAND GUIDED PEACE, STONE SAYS

Declares Emperor William Was Appealed To from Portsmouth.

SPEECH TO THE QUILL CLUB

General Manager of the Associated Press Tells of a Talk He Had with M. Witte.

After the first Quill Club dinner of the season was served to two or three hundred members at the Hotel St. Denis, Broadway and Eleventh Street, last night, the subject which had been chosen by the speakers of the evening, "The Peace of Portsmouth," was discussed.

The principal speaker was Melville E. Stone, general manager of The Associated Press, who threw some interesting light upon the influences which led to the Treaty of Portsmouth.

"I wish to say that which has not been dwelt upon before in all the comment aroused by the accomplishment of the peace at Portsmouth," said he. "Perhaps few people have realized how much Emperor William had to do with that happy ending to an unhappy war. Next to Theodore Roosevelt, Emperor William did the most to conciliate Japan and Russia.

"I have personal knowledge that at the meeting of the German Emperor and the Czar of Russia on the deck of a vessel in the Baltic Sea the former urged the latter most strongly to bring about peace. I believe that the urgent plea which Emperor William put forward then had much to do with the result of the conference at Portsmouth.

"I have also personal knowledge that in the darkest hour of the conference, when it seemed that peace was an utter impossibility, Emperor William was appealed to."

Mr. Stone did not say by whom this appeal was made, but went on to say:

"And I have personal knowledge that at no part of the negotiations did Great Britain raise a hand to stay the war.

"So far," continued Mr. Stone, "all of the acclamation in the war has gone to Japan. The Japanese victories have been hailed by the United States as if they had been victories of our own country; but there is something which I personally would like to point out to you.

"Since the history of this country began, Russia has been one of our stanchest friends. She was a friend when we needed friends, and only indifferent when we did not need a friend. I am tired of hearing that the United States has only one friend on the other side of the Atlantic. It seems to have escaped some minds that in the early days of this country America had only one friend abroad, and that was John Quincy Adams in the court at St. Petersburg. And in the darkest hour of the civil war our best and most reliable friend was Russia.

"Although in this recent war Japan got all the glory and Russia all the humiliation, I assure you that Japan was the more anxious of the two for peace. I have heard with amusement that Russia was in straightened circumstances. I can tell you that Japan was anxious for peace for that very reason on her own side.

"While Mr. Witte was in New York I had a talk with him. He told me that Russia was able to carry on the war for three years longer. When I asked him about Russia's finances, he looked at me and said: 'This from you, who carried on the civil war on a paper currency which rose to $2.85 on the gold dollar? What is to hinder Russia doing the same thing?'

"Speaking of M. Witte, there was no man came here in a more embarrassing position. When he was appointed envoy after the refusal of M. Muravieff his enemies said he was riding to a fall. I tell you that if M. Witte had failed he would be better off to-day in Russia. It was meant that he should fail.

"The fact that he did not; the fact that all Russia arose in revolt against what was considered a disgraceful peace; the fact that there were riots all over Japan over the terms—are to me the crowning of an impression that it was a pretty fair peace treaty that could do that."

Prof. Steiner, a Russian, who is Professor of Christian Ethics at the Iowa College, took the other side of the question. He said that in his opinion the "little yellow men from Japan were worth ninety-five of such men as Witte, who shouted 'Not a kopeck' when peace was proclaimed, and gave no thought to the husbands who might now return to their wives and children.

"Every defeat that Russia suffered was, of course, a pang to us, for it meant the passing away of dear friends. But I cannot agree that Japan was an exhausted enemy when its ships were upon the sea while Russia's were at the bottom, and I cannot agree that Japan was an exhausted enemy when its men were on the field ready to do what they had done before. True, Japan had no money, but she had men. Russia had plenty of money, but had no men who would serve.

"Rather than do so they revolted, and many committed suicide in the villages when the call to the front was received. Oh," cried Prof. Steiner, dramatically, "I love the Russian people, but I hate"—and he shouted the word—"the Russian Government!

"Of this Witte let me say a word. A Russian diplomatist can do three things: Talk French, talk nothing, talk lies. I think the press of this country was hypnotized by the last qualification."

Another speaker was Prof. John Bassatt Moore of Columbia University. He spoke of the rise of Japan since the Chinese war of 1894. The treaty of Portsmouth, he said, was buttressed by, if not a result of, the renewal of the alliance between Japan and Great Britain signed on Aug. 12. The Far Eastern question, he said, widened accordingly, for Japan was pledged to aid Britain in India, while Britain was pledged to aid Japan in Eastern Asia.

FIREWORKS EXPLOSION SUITS.

Verdict for Boy Hurt in Hearst's Madison Square Celebration.

Several suits for damages growing out of personal injuries received by men, women and children in the explosion of fireworks in Madison Square on election night in 1902 in the celebration over William R. Hearst's return to Congress have been brought in the Supreme Court. In each of these suits the city and the Pain Fireworks Company are named as defendants. The city in each case put in an answer denying liability, but the Appellate Division has rejected the contention.

Yesterday, in the Supreme Court, Edward Doyle, Jr., got a verdict for $400 and to his father was awarded $100 to reimburse him for doctors' bills.

The trial of the suit of George F. Vogel and his wife Florence, both of whom were injured in the explosions, began before Justice Giegerich and a jury yesterday.

While the meeting was in progress a dispatch came from the textile workers of Lynn, Mass., stating that the manufacturers, fearing that the convention might order a strike, had granted an increase of 5 per cent. in wages.

BELLE STROME BEAT KEATOR FOR STAKES

Sydney Paget's Filly Cleverly Took the Huntington.

FAVORITES WON FOUR RACES

Grenade, at 10 to 1, in the Selling Contest, Was the Only Long-Chance Winner at Jamaica.

Good Luck, winning favorite in the last race at the Jamaica track yesterday, brought to a finish an afternoon's sport that spread good luck lavishly among racegoers, the only element among the attendance that did not share in the benefits being the bookmakers.

Backers made no real mistakes in the course of the entire programme, and though two actual post favorites were beaten, one of these, Frank Farrell's Keator, at 5 to 2 on, tempted no public support, while the other, Memories, in the selling mile and a sixteenth, cost her stable the price of her favoritism, as the popular support was fairly well split up among half a dozen of the thirteen starters, and the winner, Grenade, at 10 to 1, the longest chance horse to get home first in the course of the day, was one of the number backed. In other races three positive post favorites won, while in a fourth race, two equal favorites finished first and second.

The presence of Keator in the stake feature frightened out ten of the fourteen entries, and left what seemed to be a sure thing for that horse. It probably was with a view to securing a better price in the betting that Keator's stable put up the apprentice rider McIntyre, but even at that, Keator was held by the layers at never better than 1 to 2, though backers generally declined to take even that top figure against the uncertain animal. Belle Strome, the second choice, was much the better backed horse, and even the sure thing bettors preferred her chance for second place to Keator's chance to win.

Of the four runners, Keator was the next to last to leave the post, Czaraphine breaking first, with Belle Strome second, and the order being the same to the turn into the stretch, where Czaraphine, after having opened a gap of three lengths, began to tire, and Belle Strome and Keator went on after her together. As soon as the horses straightened out in the stretch, Belle Strome went to the front, and at the last furlong pole led by a length, with Czaraphine a similar distance before Keator. From there on to the winning post Belle Strome was ridden out, and finished first two lengths away from Keator, which got up into second place a head before Czaraphine, only because the filly stopped badly in the final strides.

In the race of second importance on the card, the mile and a sixteenth handicap, A. J. Joyner, trainer of Belle Strome, again saddled the winner, Ormonde's Right, the Carter Handicap winner of last Spring, which made his reappearance in racing after retirement since last May. Ormonde's Right, like Belle Strome, carried the jacket of Sydney Paget, and started favorite at a shade better than even money in a field of five, Ananias being the second choice. To Palette's lead off, Ananias went out and made the running into the middle of the backstretch, after which Ormonde's Right took the lead and galloped there to the end, winning under a pull, just clear of the outsider Louie H., which closed in the last quarter and beat Palette for the place, while Ananias stopped on the last turn and was beaten away off.

In the opening race, Oak Duke, which colt cost H. K. Knapp's Oneck stable a sum said to have been $15,000 at Saratoga, won his first race for his new owner, and returned the winner's share of $700 on his purchase price.

A tremendous tip was out on Brush Up for the fifth race, a selling sprint for three-year-olds, and Brush Up, after being backed from 7 to 5 down to 4 to 5, justified the support by racing out of the crowd in the first half furlong and galloping in front for the remainder of the distance, winning easily well off before the long chance Yada, which, after being backed from 100 to 1 down to 30 to 1, got second place a head before Water Mirror.

The long chance Peeping Tom, a cast-off from the Keene stable, led for nearly five furlongs in the closing race, six furlongs, for maidens two years old, the favorite, Good Luck, then moving up to him and winning cleverly in the last furlong. Summary:

WIRE TAPPING AT JAMAICA.

Pinkerton Policemen Busy Checking Alleged Poolroom Swindlers.

Pinkerton policemen were busy at the Jamaica race course yesterday with efforts to frustrate the plans of supposedly real wire tappers—meaning by that men who really do tap wires leading to poolrooms, or who by quick telephone messages to confederates send results of races in advance of regular race reports in order that the confederates may bet on races that already have been run.

The first action of the Pinkerton policemen was to seize two men who had been under surveillance through the early part of the afternoon, and who finally were detected signaling to other men outside the race course, by displaying numbered cards after each race. The numbers were said to convey to the watchers outside knowledge of what horses had won, and it was alleged by the Pinkerton men that the information was sent on by telephone to confederates stationed near poolrooms, who used it to swindle the poolroom keepers.

The men were detained in the police quarters at the track, where they said they were Louis Wingerrott of Middletown, N. Y., and Fred Miller of Goshen, N. Y. The charge against them was disorderly conduct.

The second case which engaged the attention of the Pinkertons was a wire in plain view from the grand stand, connecting a cottage opposite the first turn of the track with the wires strung on telephone poles between Jamaica and Long Island City and Brooklyn. The police made no effort to disturb the connection, as they supposed wire tapping or private line was not in their jurisdiction, but it was said that the cottage was occupied by a veteran poolroom swindler, who has maintained quarters adjacent to the race track for many years, and has made big income by transmitting advance information to confederates who did the betting.

MORRIS PARK'S 'CHASES.

Saturday the First of a Three Days' Meeting on the Historic Course.

Historic Morris Park will on Saturday once more be gay with racing colors and resound to the shouts of the partisans of the thoroughbred when the United Hunts Rracing Association will hold its inaugural 'steeplechase meeting. The meeting, which will be held under the sanction of the National Steeplechase and Hunt Association, marks the beginning of an effort to be made by an influential and wealthy group of men to interest the general public in steeplechasing and, if the response of the public is generous, to establish the timber-topping sport on a firm and permanent basis.

The success attending the two small meetings held previously on Long Island has encouraged the promoters of the meeting, which is to be a three-day affair, on Saturday next and the following Wednesday and Saturday, to hope that steeplechasing on a larger scale will find sufficient support to make its continuance possible. The movement had its origin about a year ago, and last Spring the United Hunts Racing Association was formed and incorporated, 100 men contributing $100 each to assure the expenses of the opening meeting. Perry Belmont is its President, Howard N. Potter its Vice President, Ralph N. Ellis its Treasurer, and Belmont Purdy, upon whose shoulders many of the details of organization have fallen, is Secretary.

The meeting offers $10,000 in stakes and purses as a starter, and there will be six races on each of the three days, all of them over the jumps. The principal features of the first day will be the Westchester Hunt Steeplechase Handicap, with $1,000 added money, and the Clark Cup, a three-mile steeplechase for bona fide hunters, the cup, valued at $500, being the gift of F. Ambrose Clark, who is a familiar figure to racegoers as a rider in steeplechases open to gentlemen riders. Wednesday's features is the Middlesex Cup, a steeplechase of two and a half miles, also for genuine hunters, two rail fences and a stone wall being substituted for the Liverpools and the water jump. The Great United Hunts Steeplechase, with $2,500 added, and the Military Steeplechase will be the principal events of the third and last day.

In the Military Steeplechase the association offers a genuine novelty. The 'chase is open to horses owned and ridden by an officer of the United States Army, Squadrons A and C of New York and Brooklyn, Squadron A of Baltimore, the First Philadelphia Troop, and the West Point Cadet Corps. This race has the distinction of having elicited from the Governmental authorities at Washington the only approval of racing ever vouchsafed from any of its departments. The War Department, through Gen. Fred Grant, has expressed its approval of the Military Steeplechase and offered to do everything in its power to enable army officers to take part. The race will gain in picturesqueness from the fact that the officers will be required to ride in uniform. Entries have already been received from officers of the Fifteenth Cavalry at Fort Ethan Allen, Squadrons A and C, Troop A of Baltimore, and the First Philadelphia Troop.

Whatever the support received from the general public, it appears certain that society, for whom the racing season usually closes with the last day of the Fall meeting at Belmont Park, will take great interest in the meeting. Nor will there be any conflict with the regular racing at Jamaica, for Jamaica has no steeplechase course. The members of the hunting and coaching sets, in particular, are likely to turn out in large numbers, as many of their most prominent associates are among the members of the association, as well as others identified importantly with the Horse Show contingent.

It is intended to make it a distinctly high-class affair in every way, and the prices will, it appears, be in keeping with this determination. Clubhouse badges for one day will cost $10, or $20 for the three days of the meeting. Grand stand badges will cost $3 daily, and $1.50 for women. Admission to the excellent field stand, however, will cost only 50 cents. The Pinkertons will be in charge of the police arrangements, as they are at the regular tracks, which means undoubtedly that the opportunities for speculating on the races will be ample.

The Stewards of the meeting will be J. E. Widener, A. Butler Duncan, and H. J. Morris. William P. Riggs of Baltimore will act as judge, and E. C. La Montagne as starter.

Morris Park has been left thus far in the same state of perfection with which every racegoer is familiar—quite, in fact, as it was on the day the last races were held there last Autumn. Supt. Gorman of Belmont Park has worked hard to get the course into first-class shape, and announces that it will be as fit as ever it was. The races themselves will be, in a way, a step backward, since a return is made to long distances and heavy weights—in other words, to real steeplechasing. Both gentlemen riders and professionals will be seen in the saddle, and the jumps have been made stronger and higher than ever they were. The entry list is generous and includes many jumpers that have been seen in public this season. The list of members of the new association includes such well-known names as those of R. Livingston Beeckman, August Belmont, Perry Belmont, Frederick C. Bishop, W. Gould Brokaw, W. Scott Cameron, Richard F. Carman, F. Ambrose Clark, P. F. Collier, J. W. Colt, John C. Cowdin, H. B. Duryea, Ralph N. Ellis, W. A. Engeman, Peter G. Gerry, Robert L. Gerry, Robert Goelet, George J. Gould, E. H. Harriman, J. Borden Harriman, A. Henry Higginson, Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., Brayton Ives, Bradish G. Johnson, William Littauer, W. Goadby Loew, Pierre Lorillard, Clarence H. Mackay, William H. Moore, Clarence Moore, Edward Morrell, H. S. Page, F. K. Pendleton, Charles Pfizer, Jr., E. Clarkson Potter, R. H. McCarter Potter, Eugene S. Reynal, Marion Story, R. D. Van Cortlandt, Alfred G. Vanderbilt, William K. Vanderbilt, and Howard Willets.

FISHER TO CAPTAIN COLUMBIA'S ELEVEN

Election of Thorp's Successor Was a Surprise to Students.

SECRET PRACTICE FOR TEAM

Blue and White Man Refuses to Play Against Amherst Negroes—Light Work on College Gridirons.

John Fisher was elected Captain of the Columbia University football team last night to succeed "Tom" Thorp, who was recently disqualified. The selection of Fisher was a surprise, as it was thought that the Captaincy would go to Duncan Brown, who was declared eligible a few days ago. Fisher has played on the 'Varsity eleven for three years, and for two years previous to 1902 was playing on the scrub. He has had experience in every one of the back field positions, and has the reputation of being one of the hardest line buckers on the Blue and White team. In the Williams game almost every one of his plunges resulted in good gains. In defensive play he is also a valuable man.

The gates at American League Park were closed to spectators yesterday afternoon, and secret practice for the Amherst game was started. It will continue during the remainder of the week. A number of the students who were unaware that the practice was to be secret journeyed to American League Park, and on finding the gates shut occupied a hill just north of the grounds and viewed the operations from this point.

An interesting complication which Columbia has never before been called upon to face arises from the fact that Amherst has two negroes on her eleven. Fisher, one of the local ends, draws the color line, and will not play on Saturday. His loss will be severely felt in the contest, as the Blue and White is short of men for the wing positions. Fisher was with difficulty induced to play against Williams as the Middletown men had a negro on their eleven.

There was a rumor yesterday that Thorp, the ex-Captain, would enter Cornell. His case will probably not be reconsidered by the Columbia Faculty with a view to giving him another chance in the School of Applied Science. Amherst is apparently very confident of defeating Columbia on Saturday, as the supporters of the eleven are willing to wager odds of 8 to 5 on the contest. The Columbia men are willing to accept any offers of this sort, and all that can be found are quickly covered by the Morningside collegians.

Only six of the Princeton regulars appeared in the 'Varsity line yesterday, while the other players watched the practice. The coaches are paying special attention to the physical condition of their material this season, giving an occasional let-up to each player to avoid the possibility of his advancing too rapidly and getting stale. Sam Carothers has recovered from the injury to his knee, and was in again in the line-up at centre, but Dillon remained on the bench. Tenney, the quarter back, is also out of the game for a short while on account of a game leg, and will not be in condition for the contest with Lafayette. McCormick was kept busy the entire afternoon under the direction of Coach Baird, who is drilling the full back in the art of punting. He is showing improvement, but is not yet as sure a kicker as Baird.

The announcement was made at the Princeton training quarters last night that the Tigers would be without a regular trainer until after the Columbia game, Saturday, Oct. 28. "Jim" Robinson, who has had the full direction at the 'Varsity field house, for the past five years, has been ordered to go South, as he is greatly in need of rest and a little recreation. During the Summer Robinson suffered for some time as the result of a sunstroke. During his absence the training will fall into the hands of Prof. J. B. Fine, Dr. J. M. Carnochan, and the regular coaches.

The return of several Harvard veterans to he scrimmage on Soldiers' Field yesterday was productive of one of the most spirited and interesting practices which have been seen this year. The feature of the day was the work of Don Nichols, Nesmith, and Hanley. The former two showed their eagerness to begin work by tearing the scrub line to pieces. Nesmith also played brilliantly, and just before the practice ended made one of the most sensational runs seen this season. It was on the return of a kick off, and although he was tackled time after time he succeeded in gaining nearly 40 yards. Two touchdowns were scored as the result of smashing gains through the tackles and around the ends.

At Cornell Coach Warner continues his peculiar tactics of not allowing any of his regular 'Varsity players to get into a scrimmage. It is ten days now since the Cornell eleven has had a game, and during all that time the 'Varsity eleven has not had a scrimmage. Just now Coach Warner is occupied with the five end candidates who are still fighting for the two wing positions. In the absence of 'varsity scrimmages the work of the freshman eleven is attracting attention.

The Yale 'Varsity lined up for an hour's full drill behind closed gates yesterday in the complicated plays to be worked off against Pennsylvania State on Saturday. Most of the 'Varsity players rested during the open practice, as several of the men have been rushed so hard that they are showing signs of staleness. Forbes, the brilliant left tackle, is to be laid off more or less for several weeks, as is Tripp at right guard. Zimowski, the former Brown full back, who was trying for that place on the Yale eleven, cannot play this season because of his studies.

West Point was unable to get enough sound men out yesterday for a line-up, the work being confined to tackling the dummy and signal practice. Each man took several tackles at the dummy, and the team spent about thirty minutes walking through signal practice. Smith was out following the team, but could not do anything. Erwin, Weeks, and Wilhelm were able to run through the plays. Philoon is still in the hospital. Beavers was in Smith's place at left half back. The team will have a practice game to-day, and it will be made as strenuous as practicable. West Point's maximum hope is to be able to make a respectable showing against Harvard. If all the cripples can be gotten in condition, hopes may be realized, but at present army supporters are rather gloomy.

Secret practice was in order at Franklin Field, Philadelphia, yesterday. Punting and catching punts occupied some time, Coach George Brooke and ex-Capt. Reynolds giving special instruction in these features. There was a long signal drill and several new plays were executed. The 'Varsity scrimmaged with the scrubs until darkness put a stop to proceedings. The work showed that the 'Varsity is still rather ragged and play cannot yet be termed encouraging.

Ziegler's absence continues quite apparent in the weakness of the line. At the university hospital his condition is reported as unchanged.

Incentive for Princeton Shooters.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 17.—The championship Princeton gun team will start work this week to prepare for the intercollegiate shoot, and as an incentive for the men to work hard O. D. Munn, 1906, Captain of the team, has offered a handsome silver loving cup to be competed for in a handicap shoot. The shoot will be held on Oct. 20 and 24, and will be for 100 targets in all. Of last year's championship team, besides Capt. Munn, but one man, W. B. McIlvaine, is now in college, still there is no lack of good material here. The following men are the most likely candidates for the team: S. Morton, 1906; A. M. Throckmorton, 1906; C. H. Latimer, 1909, and S. Hayes, 1909.

NEW FOOTBALL LEAGUE PLANNED FOR COLLEGES

Committee Appointed to Aid in Introducing Association Game.

CHAMPIONSHIP CUP OFFERED

Sir Ernest Cecil Cochrane Donor of Trophy for Competition — Metropolitan League's Project.

The visit of the English Pilgrim Association football team to America to introduce the Association game to colleges and leading athletic clubs in this country has received a big impetus from the Metropolitan Association Football League, which organization has elected a committee to advance the game in all of the prominent Eastern colleges, with the ultimate object of establishing a big intercollegiate league. The project will be under the patronage of the British Ambassador, Sir Mortimer Durand, who is a keen football player and cricketer. The members of the committee are D. R. James, Princeton; Everett J. Wendell, Harvard; G. T. Kirby, Columbia; Julian W. Curtiss, Yale; George W. Orton, University of Pennsylvania; John G. Van Wormser, New York Athletic Club, and James E. Sullivan, Secretary of the Amateur Athletic Union.

During the past decade many plans were formulated to introduce Association football in American colleges. Up to two years ago very little headway was made, and it was not until Dr. J. A. Lester and George W. Orton organized football teams at the University of Pennsylvania and Haverford College that any real recognition was accorded to the game. The leading Philadelphia cricket clubs took up the sport, and an inter-club league was formed. Harvard followed the example of Pennsylvania and Haverford, and a triangular league was organized. Swarthmore College was admitted to membership in 1904. Cornell was added this year. With these five colleges as a nucleus, it is the intention of the promoters of the English "socker" game to include Yale, Princeton, and Columbia, and play a series of games annually for the intercollegiate Association football championship.

The efforts of the Metropolitan Football League are not to be confined to colleges, but will include the New York Athletic Club, Crescent Athletic Club, and other prominent athletic organizations in the East, and with this object John G. Van Wormser and James E. Sullivan were added to the committee. With the growing demand for the elimination of the objectionable features of the American college game, it is felt that the time is opportune to interest the athletic advisory boards of the big collegiate institutions.

During the visit of the Englishmen to Boston they were the guests of President Eliot of Harvard, to whom Capt. Milnes explained the principles of the association game. The leader of the English team is now in Washington trying to secure President Roosevelt's attendance at Saturday's game at the Polo Grounds. Failing this the Britisher will offer to take the visiting eleven to Washington and play an exhibition game before the President. If the latter offer be accepted the team to meet the Englishmen will in all probability be selected from the Metropolitan Association Football League. If this is accomplished it is felt that the game will appeal to Mr. Roosevelt and the advocates of the "socker" game will secure a strong supporter.

With the organization of an Intercollegiate Association League, international contests would quickly follow. Sir Ernest Cecil Cochrane, who is the donor of an international trophy for competition between the college teams of England, America, and Canada, has offered a silver championship cup valued at 100 guineas ($625) for competition between college teams. The trophy will be known as the Intercollegiate Association Football Cup, and must be won three times before becoming the absolute property of the winner. Sir Ernest Cochrane, who sails for England this morning, made the offer last night. He is very much encouraged with the progress of association football in this country, and predicts a great future for it. He expects to return to America in a few weeks.

Columbia Freshmen Beaten.

Newark High School defeated the Columbia freshman football team yesterday afternoon at Newark by a score of 12 to 5. The freshmen made the only tally in the first half, Gascoyne going over for a touch-down. In the second period of play the high school eleven braced and twice carried the ball over the Columbia goal line.

TWO BIG HORSE SHIPMENTS.

Plans for Moving J. B. Haggin and C. H. Mackay Stock.

The arrangements for two extraordinary shipments of thoroughbred horses, the movement of the entire lot of breeding stock from J. B. Haggin's Rancho Del Paso Stud in California, to New York for sale, and the movement of the stallions and brood mares of Clarence H. Mackay from Silver Brook Farm at Red Bank, N. J., to the Kingston Stud at Lexington, Ky., have been completed. The first shipment will be that of Mr. Mackay's horses on Oct. 30, when on a special train of ten cars the sixty head that make up the establishment that Mr. Mackay has maintained on the leased Silver Brook Farm, owned by L. O. Appleby, will leave to be domiciled for the future on the Kingston Stud Farm, leased by Mr. Mackay for a long term from Baker and Gentry. The notable animals of the Mackay stud are the English bred stallion Meddler, bought at the dispersal of the W. C. Whitney stud for $60,000; Banastar, a Brooklyn Handicap winner and winner of the Metropolitan Handicap in Mr. Mackay's colors, and the mares Kamara and Trigger, both of which Mr. Mackay raced.

The Haggin shipment, which will be the largest shipment of thoroughbred horses ever made, will be under the direction of Mr. Haggin's stud manager, John Mackey, who in the last week of November will load the 600 stallions and brood mares that have been kept at Rancho Del Paso and start them to New York, their arrival being timed for about Dec. 1, as the dates of the sale have been fixed for Dec. 4, 5, 6, and 7 at the sales establishment of Van Tassell & Kearney, in East Thirteenth Street.

Picked Up from the Diamond.

As a climax to its barnstorming tour the champion New York team, now under the captaincy of "Christy" Mathewson, will play at Olympic Field on Sunday either with the Athletics of Philadelphia or a picked team, among which will be Willie Keeler of the Greater New Yorks. On Thursday the New Yorks will play at Scranton, Penn.; on Friday at Wilkesbarre, and on Saturday with the Young Men's Christian Association team of Trenton again.

When Manager McGraw was asked yesterday whether he intended to branch out as a club owner, and purchase an interest in the New York Club, he replied: "I know nothing about that, and, furthermore, it is a matter I do not care to talk about."

"I would just like to have the opportunity of taking my pitchers through the American League circuit," said Manager McGraw yesterday, "and they would come pretty near making a record equal to Mathewson's in the world's series."

In the opinion of Manager McGraw, it is just as well for "Rube" Waddell that he did not pitch in the world's series, for, according to the champions' leader, he would have been batted easier than either Plank or Bender, as his delivery is much faster than either of his associates.

First Baseman Chase of the Greater New Yorks is now on his way to his home in San Jose, Cal.

Secretary Nahan of the Greater New Yorks has received word from Frank Delehanty, who sprained his ankle in a game shortly after joining the local Americans in the West, that he is rapidly recovering from the injury.

During the National League season Mathewson was taken out of the box five times, and was substituted for another pitcher six times.

Hoffman of the Athletics led the base runners of the American League during the season just closed, with "Dave" Fultz of the Greater New Yorks second. In the National League Maloney and Chance of the Chicagos were first and second.

Falkenburg, the Washington Club's new pitching recruit, participated in eight games and lost only one.

WINDING UP FEVER REGIME.

New Orleans to Discontinue Emergency Hospital—Homeward Rush.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 17.—The Marine Hospital authorities to-day announced that no further yellow fever patients would be received in the emergency hospital. The services of eleven assistant surgeons, recruited from New Orleans physicians, were dispensed with to-day.

The rush of New Orleans people to their homes continues, partly induced by the fact that danger from fever is regarded as over and partly by the coming visit of President Roosevelt. Country towns which are lifting the quarantines are crowded with mechanics, laborers, and others interested in the sugar industry.

Five new cases of yellow fever were reported to-day at Natchez, Miss., and one at Vicksburg.

HILL'S CHICAGO TERMINAL.

Definite Announcement That He Has the Transfer Company.

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—James J. Hill, it was definitely stated to-day, has obtained control of the Chicago Terminal Transfer Railway Company, and soon will use the Grand Central Passenger Station as a terminus for the Burlington system. Official announcement to that effect is expected to-morrow.

The change of terminus of the Burlington from the Union Station to the Grand Central Station will add ninety-two trains daily at the Grand Central Station.

PARRY'S RATE LAW PLAN.

He Proposes a Transportation Bureau and a New Court.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 17.—D. M. Parry, President of the National Association of Manufacturers, is mailing to shippers and manufacturers resolutions favoring a bureau of inter-State transportation in the Department of Commerce and Labor, the Commissioner of which shall have in charge all differences arising between shippers and the railroads.

If he cannot adjust them the issues shall be taken to a special court of transportation.

New Automobile Garage Opened.

Hundreds of women and automobile enthusiasts inspected every feature of interest in the new garage and automobile salesroom of Smith & Mabley, Incorporated, which was formally opened yesterday. The new building occupies half of the Broadway block on the corner of Fifty-sixth Street. It is three stories in height, and these floors, with the basement, will accommodate about 500 automobiles. The garage is one of the most perfect ever erected in this city, and it is said to be the largest in the world.

John B. Warden's Mercedes racing car that he drove in the recent Vanderbilt Cup race was among the attractions, and it was surrounded by a curious crowd the greater part of the day. Mr. Warden himself was present, and a number of foreign drivers took especial interest in studying the conveniences in the repair shops, the electrical storage department, the chauffeurs' waiting room, and the big elevator for carrying automobiles to the upper floors. This elevator is the largest of its kind in the city. It is 19 feet square and is equipped with a turn table, so that a car entering from the street can be turned readily in any direction before leaving the elevator.

Music and refreshments were provided for the guests, a distinct novelty in an automobile garage. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., Robert Graves, and Commodore Morton F. Plant were among the large number present.

Notes of the Thoroughbreds.

Czaraphine, running in the colors of State Senator P. H. McCarren, was kicked at the post before the start of the fourth race at Jamaica yesterday by Pelham, and though she went on and ran a fair race, was lame when she returned to the stand after pulling up.

The two stakes run for so far at the Jamaica meeting, the Pierrepont Handicap and the Huntington, were won by the full sisters, Eugenia Burch and Belle Strome, by Ben Strome-The Humber.

Entries in excess of the number that the width of the Jamaica track will permit to start were received for two races to be run to-day, both events being for two-year-olds, and nine horses were thrown out of the second race and two out of the fifth.

Comparatively new boys among the riders in the East carried away the riding honors at the Jamaica track yesterday, when W. Buchanan and the apprentice Wiley each rode two winners, Buchanan having the mounts on Grenade and Good Luck and Wiley the mounts on Brush Up and Belle Strome. Knapp and Davis rode the other winners.

The rule inaugurated at Belmont Park, requiring jockeys to be kept apart from the crowd and forbidding them to hold communication with persons other than the owners and trainers employing them, is in force at Jamaica, and as the jockeys' quarters there are in the paddock, in a building opening into the inclosure, a wire screen has been built about a small yard and the riders are confined within this.

Newton Bennington has decided to send a stable of horses to New Orleans for the Winter meeting, with Trainer Wishard in charge, and with that view has made entries to the Crescent City Derby, which it is his special purpose to win, his entries, three in number, including Jerry Wernberg, which in the Spring was regarded as one of the best two-year-olds of the East.

M. J. Daly arrived at the Jamaica track yesterday from the Canadian circuit, on which he has been racing. He brought a stable of nine horses, including Claude, winner of many Derby races; Elliott, St. Joseph, Roseaway, and Prince Brutus.

COLLEGE GOLF TEAMS IN CHAMPIONSHIP PLAY

Yale and Princeton Will Decide the Honors To-day.

HARVARD MAKES STIFF FIGHT

Columbia and Pennsylvania Fall Easy Victims on Garden City Links—Double Victory for Partridge.

Princeton and Yale will meet to-day on the links of the Garden City Golf Club to determine the team championship for the coming year of the Intercollegiate Golf Association. The preliminary rounds in the team contest that marked the opening of the annual intercollegiate golf championship yesterday at Garden City brought out five university teams—Yale, Princeton, Columbia, Harvard, and Pennsylvania. Each team was composed of six players, and the scoring was on the intercollegiate system, which allows one point for the match plus one-half the number of holes won. Each game, therefore, is played out.

Columbia and Yale started the sport, but although the local golfers had made great efforts to get out a team that would make a stiff fight, grievous disappointment was in store for them. The Yale men outplayed their rivals at all points and won by the one-sided score of 21 holes to 0. Dwight Partridge, who has just entered Yale, and who won the interscholastic championship last Spring, led the New Haven forces. He beat the Columbia leader, C. F. H. Jackson, by 4 holes, playing the long 18 hole course in the excellent score of 80. The team results are:

YALE.		COLUMBIA.
Dwight Partridge	3	C. F. H. Jackson	0
Mason E. Phelps	5	C. H. Blake, Jr.	0
W. E. Clow, Jr.	2	A. B. Palmer	0
Bruce D. Smith	4	R. Miller	0
Ellis Knowles	5	A. E. Stevens	0
Robert Abbott	2	P. D. Bogus	0
Total	21	Total	0

The meeting between the Princeton and Harvard forces was the snappiest of the day. Harvard won the team championship last year and also the individual honors, A. L. White being the present intercollegiate champion. Owing to delinquency in his studies the Harvard Faculty refused to allow White to represent the university. This cost Harvard one of its strongest players. By graduation the Cambridge team has lost the two Egans, including H. Chandler Egan, last year's National champion. Notwithstanding these changes, Harvard sent a good team to Garden City, headed by Malcolm McBurney. He did not appear at his best, and was beaten handily by Duncan Laird, the long driving Canadian, who was placed first on the Princeton team. Laird got a big lead of four holes over McBurney on the ninth green and won the match by 5 up and 4 to play, but led by six on the home green.

With this exception, the other matches in the Harvard-Princeton contest were hotly contested. Ralph Peters, Jr., added 1½ points to the Princeton score and D. W. Barrows added the same number. Briggs was the only Harvard golfer to win, and he only beat W. T. West by one hole. H. J. Gee and P. Gilbert had one of the closest games. Gee led his Harvard opponents by two holes on the ninth green. Gilbert, by admirable approaching, tied the match on the fourteenth green. Gee won the next hole, but a long put gave Gilbert the sixteenth and the final two were halved. Each played in 81 strokes.

The team results in the afternoon were:

YALE.		PENNSYLVANIA.
Dwight Partridge	2	J. A. McCurdy	0
M. E. Phelps	2	J. W. Watson	0
W. E. Clow, Jr.	4	Allan Mills	0
Bruce D. Smith	4	W. B. Topping	0

The qualifying round for the individual championship will be played to-morrow.

CHARGE BY CARTER'S LAWYER.

He Says Hundreds of Letters Were Opened While in Transit.

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—Unwarranted methods in seeking evidence against ex-Capt. Oberlin M. Carter are alleged by Horace G. Stone, Carter's counsel.

Mr. Stone openly charges that hundreds of letters were opened while in transit. In some instances, he says, decoy letters containing fictitious but apparently highly important evidence were never delivered to him. Mr. Stone in making these charges says they do not involve Special Assistant Attorney General Marion Erwin and Special Examiner Johnson, who for several years have been pushing the prosecution of the case.

About 100 letters which, Mr. Stone declared, had been tampered with were placed in the hands of Post Office Inspector James E. Stuart, and he submitted them to an expert. The report returned to Mr. Stone was that the letters had not been opened.

WOULD ARREST POLICEMEN.

Magistrate Threatens Warrants for Makers of Unsupported Charges.

Police Magistrate Voorhees of Brooklyn, sitting in the Myrtle Avenue Court, threatened yesterday to issue warrants for the arrest of policemen who made arrests without warrants.

Last Saturday Policemen Thompson and Whitaker of the Bergen Street Police Station arrested three men in Atlantic Avenue and charged them with bookmaking. The three men were promptly discharged by the Magistrate yesterday. Magistrate Voorhees said:

"This is outrageous. The policemen are becoming more foolish every day. If any officer brings a prisoner before me again under the same circumstances I will issue a warrant for the arrest of the officer."

LEGISLATORS TESTING ROADS.

They Are in Autos and Will Tour Three States.

A party of automobilists, including five State Senators and four Assemblymen, left the Murray Hill Hotel yesterday morning on a tour to study the road conditions of Massachusetts, Connecticut, and Rhode Island. Robert Lee Morrell, Chairman of the Vanderbilt Cup Commission, led the tourists, and others who supplied automobiles were Col. A. A. Pope, Robert E. Fulton, Walter White, and A. W. Church.

The Senators were Allds of Norwich, Keenan of Long Island City, Malby of Ogdensburg, Grady of Manhattan, and Warnick of Amsterdam, while the Assemblymen were Hooker of Le Roy, Moreland of Van Etten, Cooke of Albany, and Merritt of Potsdam, all members of the Joint Committee on Good Roads. Senator W. W. Armstrong, who is Chairman of the committee, could not go owing to his duties in the insurance investigating committee, but hopes to join the party in Hartford on Friday and return with them on Saturday. State Engineer Van Alstyne was also present.

The main object of the tour is to inspect the road systems of the three New England States so that a suitable report may be presented to the New York Legislature at the coming session. At the next election the plan of bonding the State for $50,000,000 for fifty years will be presented to the people for their sanction. If the vote is favorable a certain yearly amount of this fund will be devoted to the improvement and building of good roads throughout the State. Particularly in the upper part of the State are good roads needed. The tourists will go to Lenox, Worcester, Boston, Providence, Hartford, New Haven, and then home by way of Bridgeport, Stamford, and Greenwich.

EVICTED WOMAN DIES.

Thrust Into the Street, Mrs. Rose Lives Only a Short Time.

Ill and friendless, just evicted from the home she had lived in for more than five years, haunted by a fear that she would be sent to a public hospital, Mrs. Theresa Rose died while making a last confession to Father O'Connor of St. Stephen's Church yesterday afternoon, breathing her last in front of the door out of which the law a few hours previously had thrust her. Mrs. Rose was 50 years old, and until two months ago lived with her husband, Dominic Rose, who when she became ill and lost her place as a cook, the neighbors say, disappeared.

Last Saturday Mrs. Rose's rent was six weeks overdue, and the owner of the flat sent her word that she would have to pay. On Tuesday Mrs. Rose was evicted.

A Marshal called at the apartment Monday and saw the sick woman. He told her it was "pay up or get out," and he gave her twenty-four hours to get the money. Tuesday he called, and the sick woman begged for another day's grace. This time the Marshal refused to accede, and began to remove her shabby belongings. In fifteen minutes the flat was bare, and the woman was in the street. The Marshal locked the door and went away.

It soon became evident that Mrs. Rose was desperately ill. An ambulance call was sent in to Bellevue Hospital, and a messenger sent to St. Stephen's Church. The priest arrived first, and was administering the last rites to the woman when the ambulance arrived. Mrs. Rose died just as the surgeon took hold of her wrist.

INSPECT LONG ISLAND R. R.

W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., and Others Tour the New Electric System.

President Ralph Peters of the Long Island Railroad took a large party of railroad men and electricians yesterday afternoon on a trip of inspection of the new third rail electric system of the road. The party started from the Flatbush Avenue Station in Brooklyn at 2:30 o'clock in a special electric train, inspecting the Atlantic Avenue Division on the way out to Jamaica. From Jamaica they went to Belmont Park, returning to Woodhaven Junction and going from there out over the Jamaica Bay trestle to Rockaway Beach and back again.

The party included William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., John D. Crimmins, George Westinghouse, H. H. Westinghouse, F. G. Darlington, E. W. Winter, John F. Calderwood, Frank Hedley, Orin Root, J. M. Graham, F. D. Underwood, J. C. Stuart, W. B. Bessler, F. L. Shepard, W. J. Wilgus, A. T. Hardin, and C. L. Addison.

THE COMMERCIAL WORLD

WHEAT—With the help of some unfavorable Russian news wheat advanced ½@¾c a bushel yesterday and closed practically at the top. This news, which was contained in a cable received by the leading Chicago bull house, claimed that excessive rains had made the roads impassable, and that receipts and exports were decreasing. Bull support was in evidence more or less throughout the day, and the crowd covered considerable wheat after the opening. There was no let-up in the strength of the market throughout the day. On every slight reaction support was forthcoming, and there seemed to be little effort on the part of the bulls to disturb the strong undertone by taking profits. The increase of 2,642,000 bushels in world shipments, according to Bradstreet's, was used as a bull item, because it compared with an increase of 7,457,000 bushels in the corresponding week last year. The increase in domestic stocks were 3,942,000 bushels, compared with an increase a year ago of 6,157,000 bushels. The domestic visible was posted early in the morning and showed an increase of 2,852,000 bushels, compared with 2,622,000 bushels increase last year. Judging by cables, foreign markets were not very much disturbed by the Russian news received here. Liverpool closed partly ⅛d net higher and Paris 5@10 points higher. Berlin was ¼@1¼ marks up and Budapest 4 points higher. The interior receipts were 1,300,000 bushels, or practically the same as on this day last year. Bears laid claim to the weather situation, which included rains in Winter wheat States where they were needed. Broomhall also cabled that good rains had fallen in New South Wales and in Queensland. Northwest markets were strong, and Minneapolis increased its stock 350,000 bushels, which was somewhat smaller than it has been running. No. 2 red in New York closed 91⅛c, elevator, and 92½c, free on board, afloat; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 94⅝c, and No. 1 Northern, Manitoba, 93⅝c, free on board, afloat.

CORN—While options in New York were strong, closing ⅛@⅜c net higher, the cash market acted easy, owing to arrivals of all-rail grain, and closed with No. 2 quoted at 60¼c, elevator and free on board, afloat. The reasons for the strength in the speculative market were found chiefly in the heavy rains West, which are bad for the curing of corn, and in the small movement, with only 123 cars expected at Chicago on Wednesday. Cables were net unchanged, and the export business consisted of 12 loads. In the visible supply there was a decrease of 194,000 bushels, against 356,000 bushels decrease last year. Commission houses were fair buyers at the West, but had fewer orders in New York than on the previous day.

COTTON.—The cotton market had a moderate rally during the early session, but yielded to a renewal of bear pressure and liquidation during the afternoon, with prices scoring a new low level for the season. The close was up from the lowest on covering, and very steady at an advance of 2 points to a decline of 4 points. Sales were estimated at 400,000 bales.

The opening was steady at an advance of 3@5 points in response to cables. There was some hesitation, and prices lost a point or two owing to the excellent weather indicated in the South by the early map and the bearishness of local sentiment. The forecast, however, was for rain, followed by colder weather in the Northwest, the estimates for to-day's receipts at leading points indicated a considerable falling off in the movement, and with spot houses buying the market soon firmed up on covering of shorts, and toward midday was about 8 to 9 points above the closing figures of the previous day. The weekly report of the Weather Bureau could hardly be called bearish, but it contained no mention of damage by frost, and was followed by active selling by disappointed longs and a renewal of local bear pressure, with December touching 9.52 and January 9.62 in the middle of the afternoon, or 8@9 points net lower. The rally toward the close seemed chiefly the result of covering.

Southern spot markets, according to official reports, were 1-16c lower to 1-16c higher, with moderate sale at the leading points. Private wires from the South continue to report relative firmness among interior holders, but it is difficult to inspire confidence in a refusal to market at a time when receipts are so heavy and views of the crop appear to be increasing, notwithstanding the report by the Weather Bureau to the effect that no top crop of moment is promised.

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 17.—Spot cotton, fair business doing; sales, 8,000 bales; speculation and export, 500 bales; American, 7,000 bales; receipts, 20,000 bales; American, 14,000 bales; middling upland, 5.26d. Futures opened steady, 8 points lower. Closed steady, at a net advance of 1@3 points. Manchester—Yarns quiet; cloths quiet and unchanged.

COFFEE.—There was continued liquidation by Wall Street and other nearby longs, and the market after opening steady unchanged to 5 points lower, closed steady but at a net decline of 5@10 points. Sales were reported of 55,250 bags. The opening loss was about as due on the cables, which reported a fairly generous response to the local weakness of the previous day. Hamburg was ¼ to ½ pfennig lower, according to early cables, while Havre was ¼ franc lower. A decline of 1-32d in the rate of Brazilian exchange was accompanied by an unchanged market at Rio, while Santos lost the 100 reis advance of yesterday. Receipts were a little over last year's figures, with the two ports getting 78,000 bags against 72,000 bags last year, while the interior movement held out no promise of an immediate falling off. The Jundiay reported 44,000 bags, against 39,000 bags last year, and the Sao Paulo receipts for the day were 57,697 bags, against 43,300 bags last year. Warehouse deliveries here showed a slight improvement, but the indications point toward a disappointing increase in the world's visible supply for the month of October and a Brazilian movement considerably in excess of early calculations. The December position here continues the dominating factor, and is evidently exerting some influence in the foreign markets. It is supposed that the December long interest may be in the neighborhood of 3,000,000 bags.

The market for spot coffee was quiet, with quotations on the basis of 8 9-16c for Rio No. 7.

METALS.—The London tin market was less excited, but prices were pretty well maintained with spot closing at £148 12s 6d and futures at £148. The local market was quiet but firmly held, with spot quoted at 32.25@32.75c. Copper was higher abroad, closing at £72 15s for spot and £71 for futures. Lead remains somewhat irregular in the local market, where actual spot supplies are scarce and each small transaction carries its own price, with the market more or less nominal at 5@5.50c. Lead is still said to be available for forward shipment at 4.85c. The foreign market was unchanged, with spot quoted at £14 18s 9d. Spelter was higher at £28 10s in London. Coward Combination Shoe.

Sizes, 5½ to 13. Widths, AAA to H.

Men with low insteps generally find that when they procure a shoe which fits snugly at that point it is too tight over the toes; that when it is easy over the toes it is too loose at the instep.

The Coward Combination Shoe, made from a combination of sizes, remedies all this perfectly. It is made regular in size except at the instep—there it is two sizes smaller. This insures absolute ease and fit. Single or double soles.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Irregular; Call Money Rates, 4½@5¼ Per Cent.

Market Closes Lower After Early Firmness—Foreign Exchange Again Rises.

While the trading in stocks yesterday was on a somewhat larger scale than on Monday, the movement of prices was again without special significance. In the forepart of the day the tone of the market was relatively strong, influenced by offerings of call money at 4½ per cent. or little more and by the activity and advances of the anthracite and traction shares. Later in the day, however, the sharp rise in demand sterling and the renewed advance in discount rates abroad were construed unfavorably, and while there was nothing approaching weakness in the movement, prices sagged steadily and closed heavy, with many fractional losses in the active issues. Exceptions to this general tendency were found in Delaware and Hudson, which on a volume of over 10,000 shares rose over 3 points, retaining 1⅛ points of this gain at the end of the day, and in Illinois Central and Amalgamated and Anaconda Copper. In connection with the strength of the copper shares there were renewed reports of an increase in the Amalgamated dividend at Thursday's meeting of the Board of Directors, but these reports went unconfirmed. The heavy trading and advances in both the common and preferred shares of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railroad were attributed by report to new interests about to enter the road's Directorate, but there were no developments to prove that this was more than rumor. Pennsylvania, Union Pacific, and the Steel issues declined fractionally, the Steel shares receiving less support than has of late been accorded to them. Renewed selling of Chicago Subway stock in the curb market was followed by an extreme decline of some 10 points in that issue, but the break had no more effect on the general market than the previous sensational movements of the shares have had.

Yesterday's sharp rise in demand sterling brought the rate to 4.8625, a figure absolutely inhibiting importations of gold. Interest in this rise, following one of similar proportions on Monday, centred in the questions of its cause and its duration. It seems generally conceded now that earlier in the season finance bills in exceptional volume were drawn in the expectation that they could be easily covered at maturity, when cotton and grain bills were in liberal supply. The finance bills are maturing and cotton and grain are moving laggardly. In connection with the extent of the movement, the news from London yesterday that Berlin's Japanese bond funds were being forwarded to London is of interest. Nothing has been said regarding the transmission of the Japanese money held here, but this may be looked for sooner or later, and the operation will by no means tend to ease in exchange. On the other hand, talk of gold exports, because of the fact that the market is only some 1½ cents from the lowest possible shipping point, seems premature. Discount rates at Berlin advanced ¼ per cent., standing now only ¼ per cent. below the bank rate, while in Paris and Amsterdam advances of 3-16 per cent. occurred. Here the banks received $420,000 new gold. They have gained $1,207,000 from the Sub-Treasury since Friday.

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 17.—Prices generally hardened to-day in an active market. There has been considerable buying of the stock of the Western Maryland Railroad, which was distributed yesterday on the dissolution of the underwriting syndicate by local interests. While it is recognized that there is a long pull ahead for this stock, the fact that last year the company earned 2 per cent., despite the disconnected condition of its lines, is one of the attractions that is causing local buying. It is stated that through one channel there has been about 5,000 shares of this stock purchased.

Money in the local market is easy, and rates are about normal, which, at least, is not a deterrent feature to active speculation. The feeling in local circles is good, and there is an impression in many quarters that the market will sell materially higher. Seaboard new common and new second preferred, with the G. B. S. Brewing Company issues, Houston Oil, and United Railways incomes, were the most active, and made fractional gains. Maryland Telephone 5s were a point lower, and Seaboard gained ⅝. Consolidated Gas advanced ½ point. The close was strong. Sales: Shares, 6,549; bonds, $249,500. The list:

EXCHANGE STILL HIGHER.

Demand Sterling Again Takes a Jump, Rising 30 Points.

A further advance of 30 points occurred in the price of demand sterling exchange yesterday. At the close 4.8630 was bid for exchange for Saturday's steamer. The advance was generally explained by the need of exchange to cover maturing bills and by a dearth of cotton bills. It is regarded in some quarters as a direct result of the recent imports of gold which absorbed a considerable amount of exchange at a time when the supply was not more than sufficient to meet the current demands for remittance. Thus a more or less artificial situation was created which has since led to an upward movement in exchange which amounts so far to about 150 points from the lowest point reached on the recent decline.

Call money was a trifle easier yesterday, declining at one time to 4½ per cent. Short time loans were quoted yesterday at a rate considerably higher than the call rate. Ninety-day loans were made at 5¼ per cent. The rapidity with which the exchange market has risen has resulted in wide discussion among bankers of the possibility of gold exports in the near future.

No further transfers were made yesterday to the interior through the Sub-Treasury, which on the other hand received $420,000 from San Francisco.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call loaned at 4½@5¼ per cent., closing at 5 per cent. Most of the day's loans were made at 4¾ per cent.

Time money rates, 5@5½ per cent. for sixty days to four months and 4¾@5 per cent. for six months.

Mercantile paper rates, 5@5½ per cent. for sixty to ninety days' indorsed bills receivable and choice four to six months' single names, and 6 per cent. for others.

Clearing House statement: Exchanges, $373,493,318; balances, $11,185,621. The Sub-Treasury debit balance was $1,063,809.

Foreign exchange was strong. Nominal rates were $4.83 for sixty days and $4.87 for demand. Rates for actual business were as follows: Sixty days, $4.8250; demand, $4.8620; cables, $4.8675; commercial bills, $4.81¾@$4.82½.

Commercial bills were quoted: Francs, 5.20⅝ and 5@5.17½; reichmarks, 94 5-16 and 95 less 1-32; guilders, 39⅞ and 40 1-16.

Exchange on New York at domestic centres: Boston—10c discount. Chicago—10c premium. New Orleans—Commercial, $1 discount; bank, $1 premium. Savannah—Buying, 50c discount; selling, 75c premium. Charleston—Buying, par; selling, 1-10 premium. San Francisco—Sight, 2c; telegraphic, 5c. Cincinnati—25c discount. St. Louis—5c discount @par.

LONDON STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—Money was in good demand in the market to-day. Discounts were firm. Despite the Bank of England raising the price of gold, French competition continues. It is understood that the Bank of England has secured considerable sums of gold, a continuation of which policy will enable it to meet the requirements of Egypt and elsewhere.

There was renewed talk to-day of the Bank of England's discount rate being raised to 5 per cent., but the rise is not generally anticipated this week.

Trading on the Stock Exchange was dull, irregular, and nervous owing to the prevailing uncertainty regarding the monetary outlook which depressed gilt-edged securities. The tendency was undecided and business was narrow. Consols were weak, but closed with a better tone. Home Rails were irregular.

Americans opened firm and mostly over parity on New York support. Business was moderate, and the movements were slight. Prices closed steady at below the best quotations.

Foreigners were sluggish. Peruvians were offered. Russians and Japanese were easier.

Japanese imperial sixes of 1904 were quoted at 101⅝.

Bar silver firm at 28 11-16d per ounce.

Gold premiums are quoted at Madrid at 28.22, and at Lisbon at 5.

Bar gold, 77s 10d. American eagles, 76s 6d.

The amount of bullion taken into the Bank of England on balance to-day was £38,000.

NORTHERN PACIFIC'S GAINS.

Full Report Gives Particulars of Union Pacific Contract.

The full pamphlet report of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company was made public yesterday. The income account shows gross earnings of $50,722,885, an increase of $4,198,311, and net earnings of $23,914,127, an increase of $2,574,215. After the payment of dividends and setting aside $3,000,000 for improvements, there was left a balance for the year of $8,276,241. This was added to surplus which at the close of the year amounted to $14,381,219.

The report shows that in the year ended June 30 there was expended for betterments and enlargement $3,485,815 out of the fund provided for that purpose. In addition $932,075 was spent on the new passenger and freight terminals at Seattle. The balance to the credit of the betterment and enlargement fund at the end of the year amounted to $615,576.

In reference to the contract with the Union Pacific Railroad in regard to the extension into the Clearwater district in Idaho, the report says:

On May 25, 1905, a contract was signed with the Union Pacific Railroad Company, under which railroads are to be constructed from Grangeville, Idaho, to Lewiston, Idaho, and thence on the north bank of the Snake River to a connection with the line of the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company at a point opposite Riparia, Washington. This contract also provides for the joint use of the bridge over the Snake River at Riparia. Surveys and construction work are now being pushed, and the building of the new roads, about 125 miles in all, will develop the rich plateau country south of the Clearwater River in Idaho. In these railroads this company will own an undivided one-half interest.

The extensions completed during the year have a total mileage of 71, and other lines, with a mileage of 93, were authorized.

The Whitney Company has been formed for the purpose of developing the water power of the Yadkin River in North Carolina. A letter from Mr. George I. Whitney, of Messrs. Whitney & Stephenson, Pittsburgh, President of the Company, gives the following details:

Present development, 40,000 horse-power, with sufficient land (over 13,000 acres), and water rights to build an additional 50,000 horse-power plant. Within a radius of 80 miles (easily reached by electric power transmission) there are now 257 cotton mills, using about 73,000 steam horse-power, costing $35 to $50 per annum. There are also numerous other mills and furniture factories within the same radius—contracts could now be made for the entire present development of 40,000 electric horse-power at highly remunerative rates.

Gross Annual Earnings, estimated		$630,000
Operating Expenses	$97,000
Interest on Bonds	270,000	367,000
Estimated Surplus		$263,000

We quote in detail from Mr. Whitney's letter as follows:

"I do not hesitate to say that the project is sound in every particular. The Company owns an enormous and unfailing water-power; the work is now more than 25% completed, and is being rapidly pushed by competent contractors, the T. A. Gillespie Company. There is a permanent constantly increasing demand for electric power at profitable prices without competition from nearby coal fields or forests, and there is no doubt that the Company will prove a highly profitable investment from its start.

"The development of this property from its inception has been in charge of the highest talent procurable in the country, and this is true of its legal and engineering departments, of the contractors who have taken charge of construction, who rank second to none in the country, and of the electrical and hydraulic builders, who will be readily recognized as of the highest class.

"As you know, there is demand for bonds of well-planned water power projects by reason of the permanence and large profits of such undertakings, as well as the inability of investors to buy desirable public utility or municipal bonds at remunerative prices. The bonds you now offer are, in my opinion, well secured, and should sell at a considerable premium in due time.

"Very truly yours, GEO. I. WHITNEY, President."

$1,500,000 of the bonds having been sold, we offer the remaining $3,000,000 for subscription at 100 and accrued interest.

Copies of the Prospectus and Mortgage can be had on application.

Report of Messrs. Hering & Fuller, Engineers, and the opinion of Hon. John S. Henderson, of Salisbury, N. C., as to the legality of the bond issue, can be seen at our office.

THE OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Chicago Subway Broke 12 Points —Now at 41.

Bottom Seemed to Drop Out of It—Brokers Say: "Chicago Selling"—Little Movement in Other Curb Securities.

Both Wall Street and the public were beginning to think that Chicago Subway had gone down about as far as it could go—until yesterday. Again the bottom seemed to drop out of it. Here the brokers say the break was due to "selling orders from Chicago;" doubtless Chicago is now saying the same thing about New York. It opened yesterday at 52⅝ and held its own pretty well for two hours. Then it began to drop by quarters and halves, and finally there was a jump of a whole point between sales. Down it fell all the afternoon, and closed at 41, only a point above the bottom price. Mercantile Marine preferred was again strong around 37. Standard closed with a net loss of 2 points for the day. Interborough opened at 215¼ and lost ½ in the trading. The Copper stocks were moderately strong.

The principal transactions reported yesterday in the outside market, with high, low, and last prices, were as follows:

Cripple Creek Central Dividends.

The Directors of the Cripple Creek Central Railway Company announced yesterday a dividend of 1 per cent. on the company's preferred stock and an initial dividend of 3 per cent. on the common. Three per cent. was paid on the preferred in July, which, with the present dividend, makes the full 4 per cent. The Cripple Creek Central is the reorganized Denver and Southwestern Railway, the mortgage on which was foreclosed in October, 1904.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Men have both the obstinacy to fight a market unfalteringly to the end of their resources and the courage to go with it steadily when they believe in its tendency, but it is sometimes hard even for the most experienced speculator to hold one way on a market which goes neither for him, to enlarge his faith, nor against him, to stimulate his prejudices. When the market comes almost to a standstill, as is the case at present, it is held in the balance by counteracting influences. There are strong arguments on both sides, and they so offset each other that some additional argument or fresh influence is needed to turn the scale and determine the course of prices from that point. Those who have stocks are compelled to think well of them and to talk optimistically. Those who haven't any stocks usually take an ultra-conservative view of the situation. Then there is another element short of stocks, and that is against the market and extremely pessimistic. Those who are not committed either way lean first to one side and then the other, according to the state of their digestion or the accidents of Wall Street intercourse. The situation is worse bewildered when banking sentiment is so remarkably divided. There is at present a very distinct alignment of banking houses on either side of the market. Persons who have valued sources of information on both sides are in a most confused state of mind.

* * *

Two Wall Street friends, dining up town, fell into the hands of a persuasive bull, who talked to them for two hours to prove the logic of his position. The friends, both of whom were inclined to be bearish, slept on it, and met the next day. "Well, were you converted by that bull?" one of them asked. "I don't know but I might have been," said the other, "had I not kept saying to myself the whole time he was talking to us: 'This is the man who went nearly broke selling Union Pacific short at 80.'"

* * *

Disregarding a lower set of quotations from London, the market opened very dull yesterday morning, but on the whole strong, at about the closing eighths of the preceding day. The trading element showed a strong preference for the bull side of the market, owing, no doubt, to the small amount of stock in sight anywhere, and prices advanced easily on professional buying. The activity was somewhat whimsical. It was first in Amalgamated Copper, then in Reading, then in Brooklyn, and so on, and as soon as the room interest was transferred from one stock to another, the one lost all the activity that the other gained. The buying of Reading, which was largely of professional origin, was perhaps the most aggressive anywhere in the market. The stock advanced on it to 123. Wolf Brothers took a good deal of stock on the way up. The buying of Amalgamated Copper on the advance to 86⅝ also was rather aggressive. After about two hours of professional exertion on the bull side, the market lost all headway, and in the afternoon the selling of stocks which had been accumulated before midday caused prices to fall back. The market, in short, did not hold its improvement, and reacted quite as easily as it had advanced. Most of the active issues closed at fractional net losses.

* * *

At intervals yesterday it looked as if stocks were being rather generously supplied. Several houses which have not figured prominently in the market of late sold freely all around the room. The Western bull crowd was also supposed to be selling; in fact, the weakness of the market in the afternoon was generally attributed to liquidation for Western account. This selling possibly was influenced indirectly by a further break of 10 points in the price of Chicago Subway stock.

* * *

The market made a strange response to the positive prediction by a notorious Boston operator that the Amalgamated Copper dividend would be increased at Thursday's meeting. Amalgamated Copper stock, which up to that time had been one of the most prominent features of the bull side of the market, promptly declined 1 per cent.

* * *

American Locomotive common was unmoved by the results of the annual meeting. Transactions in it were further reduced in volume, and the stock closed at a fractional net decline.

* * *

The active Boston speculation in "coppers" is beginning to attract a good deal of attention. It appears to be developing along familiar lines. The Boston correspondents are describing it as the "copper boom." Two or three months ago certain authorities were saying gloomily that the New England public could never be interested again in copper stocks, and here is an old-time boom under way. Very little seems to be known as to the origin of the campaign. A good many people seem to suppose that the movement started spontaneously.

* * *

Evidently there was more Chicago Subway stock held by outsiders as a speculation than could have been believed a few weeks ago. Nobody imagined that the pool had been able to distribute so much of it on the advance to above 85. An interesting feature of yesterday's fresh decline of 10 points was that the stock seemed to be coming from places where it was not known to have lodged. Brokers on the curb said that C. I. Hudson & Co. started the selling. Later it became somewhat general, and the support was as poor as it had been on the previous break to 50. Some of yesterday's selling was thought to come either directly or indirectly from the Western crowd. The Western bull account, it was said, had not been entirely liquidated. It is known, at least, that brokers acting for this crowd have recently been lending the stock out to be carried. When the previous decline was checked on the level of 50, persons supposed to be familiar with the market situation declared that a large short interest was yet uncovered. The inference was that the insiders would see to it that this short account was not covered at a profit.

* * *

Bulletins on the market position of Canadian Pacific come daily and, in some extremities, hourly from London, the purport of them all being that there is an over-extended short interest in the stock, the covering of which except at a tremendous loss will not be permitted. This short account was estimated in yesterday's bulletin at 50,000 shares, and the extra detail was added that the bears would be unable to survive the next fortnightly settlement. It must be a bear crowd of extraordinary vitality that is remaining short of Canadian Pacific, for its destruction has been predicted at least a hundred times.

* * *

There has apparently been steady accumulation of Missouri, Kansas and Texas stock both here and abroad. The movement is not accompanied by such market information as would naturally be promulgated to support a speculative campaign; indeed, the buying has been conducted in a manner calculated to attract as little attention as possible. One house bought 5,000 shares of the common stock yesterday.

* * *

Colorado Fuel and Iron is now a Gould stock, the Rockefeller interests having retired from the property. Wall Street is uncertain as to whether this ought to improve the market position of the security or weaken it. The stock declined a little yesterday, but so did the general market. Mild curiosity was aroused a few days ago by a mysterious solicitation of Colorado Fuel proxies in blank, and nothing has since been heard of the movement to get representation on the board for the old Osgood faction. Apparently nothing came of it.

* * *

The speculative interests which are bulling the coaler stocks apparently were not tempted yesterday to make Lackawanna sell at 500. Delaware and Hudson was moved up sharply to 226, and then reacted 2 points.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 17.—Lehigh Valley and Reading continued strong the greater part of the day, but the movement in Lehigh Navigation ceased almost as quickly as it had begun, which was due to the emphatic denials of a deal with the Jersey Central. That the company will yet be taken over by one of the larger companies is generally believed, but there is no evidence that negotiations with that end in view have as yet been undertaken.

There was little trading of moment outside of the coal stocks. Delaware Insurance was up 3⅛ points, but its gain was exceptional. Tonopah Mining was again heavy, the fact that Montana Tonopah had passed its October dividend having had a bad effect. Trust Company of North America was up 8 points, and Welsbach Company was half a point higher.

HOADLEY AND WEBB OUT.

The American Locomotive Company Changes Directors as Foretold.

The stockholders of the American Locomotive Company at their annual meeting yesterday elected C. A. Coffin, President of the General Electric Company, and E. C. Converse Directors of the company. W. G. Hoadley and W. Seward Webb retired from the board. These changes were in keeping with the plan of the controlling interests in the property as outlined in THE TIMES yesterday.

The by-laws of the company were amended to provide for the classification of the Directors. Under the new arrangement the board will be divided into three classes of Directors, whose terms will be respectively one, two, and three years. The Directors at a meeting to be held probably next week will designate the Directors who are to serve in the several classes.

No changes in the officers of the company are expected.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Copper Cylinders Not Entitled to Free Entry—Other Customs Decisions.

In a decision written by I. F. Fischer, the Board of United States General Appraisers yesterday overruled a claim filed by Welles & Locke of New York regarding the rate of duty applicable to copper cylinders produced by electrolysis. The board finds that neither Collector Stranahan's classification nor the claim of the importer is correct. It is held by the board that the merchandise is properly dutiable under the provision in the tariff law for articles not specially provided for. As the claim failed to make this claim the protest was overruled.

General Appraiser McClelland wrote a decision denying claims made by James Lee & Co. of New York regarding the customs classification of trinitrotoluel.

A protest filed by J. Zimmermann & Co. of this city was overruled. The claim had to do with the classification of various kinds of braids.

The board partially sustained claims filed by Hensel, Bruckmann & Lorbacher and others of New York regarding the rate of duty to be paid on lithographic prints.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

J. & M. UNION LABEL CLOTHING COMPANY.—Judge Holt of the United States District Court has apointed Henry Sheldon receiver in bankruptcy of the assets of the J. & M. Union Label Clothing Company of 140 Broadway, and his bond was fixed at $500. It was stated the stock and fixtures are valued at $1,000.

J. H. MILLER.—Schedules in bankruptcy of Henry Kretsch and George Wahlheimer, who did business as J. H. Miller, tailor, at 816 Broadway, filed yesterday by Mr. Wahlheimer, show liabilities $3,343 and no assets. Among the creditors are William Bianchi & Co., $1,444; Theodore F. Schumann, $888; T. Faulkner & Son, $773, and Howse, Mead & Sons, $673.

NEW ENGLAND NATIONAL AUTOMATIC FIRE ALARM COMPANY.—Judge Stover of the Supreme Court has appointed Ashbel P. Fitch referee to hear the application of the New England National Automatic Fire Alarm Company of 260 West Broadway for a voluntary dissolution of the corporation. John J. Mackin was appointed receiver on March 18 last. The liabilities are $915 and assets $496, consisting of office furniture, $250, and cash in bank, $246. The company was incorporated in October, 1902, with a capital stock of $300,000.

LIBBY MANUFACTURING COMPANY.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against the Libby Manufacturing Company, valves and steam specialties at 147 and 149 Varick Street, by the following creditors: Austin Corbin, $5,117, on an assigned claim from the Atlantic Brass Company; U. T. Hungerford Brass and Copper Company, $84, and Joseph Feldstein, $5. It was alleged that the company is insolvent, has permitted the John Simmons Company, a creditor, to obtain a preference by a judgment for $236, on Oct. 14, under which a City Marshal seized the assets of the company, and noticed the sale for Oct. 20, and also transferred some of its property. The last annual statement of Dec. 1 showed assets of $37,952 and liabilities of $12,059. Richard O. Libby was President and Charles A. Whittier, a relative of the poet, was Secretary and Treasurer. In the trade it was said the company was hampered by lack of working capital.

JAMES A. SIMMONS.—Judge Holt of the United States District Court has appointed John B. Lord receiver in bankruptcy for the assets of James A. Simmons, promoter, of 49 Exchange Place, who filed a petition in bankruptcy on Monday, with liabilities of $495,474 and nominal assets of $4,000, on the application of Moses R. Ryttenberg, attorney for the following creditors: Wilson & Crawford, $10,800; Ladenburg, Thalman & Co., $21,160, and Richard, George, Walter, and Stuart Wood, $10,097. In the application it is stated that, besides a lot of stocks and securities, which are entered in the schedules as valueless, Mr. Ryttenberg is informed and believes that Mr. Simmons has concealed large quantities of assets. Under the order appointing Mr. Lord receiver, all persons holding any property of Mr. Simmons's in their possession or under their control are directed to turn it over to the receiver.

P. T. POWERS MAY RESIGN.

Report That He Will Give Up the Presidency of Eastern League.

The Eastern League will, according to report, be called upon to elect a new President at the coming annual meeting of the organization in this city. P. T. Powers, who for thirteen years has been presiding officer of the league, and brought it up to a position of high standing among the minor leagues of the country, has decided, it is generally believed, to retire from all official connection with the league, so that the internal dissensions which have threatened to disrupt the organization will be stopped. During the past year, in fact, ever since Mr. Powers was called upon to resign his position by a few club owners at the last annual meeting of the league, the affairs of the organization have been in a turmoil.

Notwithstanding the difference between the President and the dissatisfied owners the league was prosperous throughout the last championship season. All the clubs, with the exception of Toronto, showed a balance to the good. Providence, in all its baseball history, never had a more successful season, while Jersey City, Baltimore, and even Rochester did better than in the previous year.

Mr. Powers's retirement from the Presidency of the league also means, it is thought, that he will resign as President of the National Association of Professional Leagues. It is not believed, however, that he will give up all active participation in the game, for as one of the owners of the Jersey City and Providence Clubs he will be eligible to take part in the deliberations of the officials of the league.

PASTIMES CELEBRATE.

Boxing and Wrestling at Twentieth Anniversary of the Club.

The twentieth anniversary of the winning of the G. M. L. Sacks Trophy by the Pastime Athletic Club at the benefit games tendered to the late "Lon" Myers on Oct. 17, 1885, was celebrated by the club at its house, Ninetieth Street and Avenue A, last evening with a typical "Indian" stag. Boxing and wrestling exhibitions interspersed with vaudeville entertained an enthusiastic gathering of club members until a late hour.

The wrestling brought together George Bothner, the 135-pound champion of America, and George Fisher in one bout, and William Nelson, the 115-pound amateur champion, and D. J. Mahoney of the St. George Athletic Club in another, while the star bout of the evening was that between I. Niflot, the 135-pound amateur champion of the world, and Joe Klein, champion of the 145-pound class.

The boxing bouts brought out George Jansen and "Ruddy" Ledwock of the Pastimes in one three-round go, and John M. Mason and J. J. Welsh in another. Jansen had the better of the first, punishing Ledwock severely in the first two rounds, but his plucky opponent came back each time for more, and showed his grit in the final round. Mason and Walsh divided honors fairly evenly in their bout.

A LOT. A LOT.

You Are the Judge. Which of These Three Suits You Best?

LIFE INSURANCE. STOCKS. REAL ESTATE.

85,000,000 of people who represent the pulse and heart of this Great Republic move backward and forward in the great channel of life for the struggle of fortune.

The great thirst and hunger for money leads the mind of man to investment, and he alone practically gambles with the future to increase his wealth and attain prosperity.

The public Press of to-day feeds the entire community with columns of deception practiced by the huge life insurance corporations of this country, who receive their cash from the hard earnings of the wage-earner and expend same in the channels which apparently increase their own personal wealth and their aims. Surrounded by friends, relatives, and political influence, whose motto evidently lies in the theatrical success of this last season in which the humorous horse trader, "David Harum," pursued but one method—"Do others or they will do you."

LIFE INSURANCE HAS PRACTICALLY PROVEN TO BE A ROBBERY

or, rather, to be more diplomatic, "A PROFESSIONAL COURTESY," to absorb the policyholder's cash. Statistics have already proven that only about sixty per cent. of the people's money is turned in for the purpose of mutual benefit and applied in the channels of insurance. Forty per cent. is simply taken care of by the promoters of these huge corporations, and they are made the Giants of Finance.

600,000 people in this Great Metropolis—one in every seven carry a policy of life insurance. All hard-earned money wrought for and paid by the sweat of the wage-earner's brow and laid away in the vaults of the Life Insurance Corporations, with the Trust Companies of New York used as a lever to buy and sell men's souls and wipe out any righteous individual who would dare to contend or question the methods of Life Insurance practiced by the officers of these corporations.

INSURANCE AS WRITTEN IN THE POLICY—INSURANCE AS PROMISED BY THESE COMPANIES

looks like a star of wealth shining in the Heavens and making bright the path of future to every man who invests his dollars there. But the last three months by the investigating Committee of the State of New York have proved that there are better channels for the wage-earners than the Life Insurance Companies of America.

Stocks in Wall Street lie in the same category. The streets downtown to-day are filled with the souls of millions of men whose echoes for years have filled the air. "KEEP AWAY," "KEEP AWAY," "DON'T BE A BRAINLESS FOOL."

Every investor there is but a pebble of sand on the seashore of time, to be wiped away by the great waves of greed and hurled far into the deep sea of eternity.

You Ask Yourself the question, WHERE WILL I INVEST?

WHERE WILL I GET VALUE FOR MY MONEY?—BUY A PIECE OF LAND.

PLACE YOUR FOOT ON A PIECE OF UNCLE SAM'S TERRITORY. YOU WERE BORN TO OWN AND POSSESS A PIECE OF THIS EARTH,

The good Book says that Moses led his people to the Land of Promise. We are not posing as Ministers of the Lord, but we do claim that we are the good Samaritans capable of revealing the truthe of the land of promise in and around New York.

WE ANNOUNCE TO YOU THE GREAT HARVEST FIELDS OF PROFIT.

LONG ISLAND, THE LAND OF PARADISE.

For 5 years we have been buying and selling 5,000 acres in and around what we consider the wage-earner's and the Investor's Paradise. Our volume of business, disposing of nearly $1,000,000 worth of land to more than 5,000 people, gives evidence it is progressing and developing to the welfare and profit of the investor.

WHY ARE THEY ATTRACTED? WHY DO THEY BUY?

Located right where the development is taking place, right in line of every and all improvements, which in a few years will make this point the recognized centre for vegetable gardens, chicken raising, and suburban homes for the rich and the poor at

PETROSINO ASKS AID TO CATCH BRIGANDS

Detective Says There Are 30,000 Italian Thieves in America.

5,000 IN NEW YORK CITY

"Black Hand" and Camorra Men Getting Bolder—Essex Street Grocery Store Dynamited.

Detective Sergt. Joseph Petrosino, in charge of the squad of six Italian detectives at Police Headquarters, asked Commissioner McAdoo yesterday in view of the many outrages in the Italian quarters that his force, for a time at least, be increased to thirty detectives.

Almost every day recently has brought an Italian crime of the so-called "Black Hand" or other variety. Yesterday was no exception.

While almost everybody was asleep in the neighborhood of 13 Stanton Street yesterday morning at 3 o'clock they were thrown from their beds by a terrific explosion. Some stayed to pray, but the majority fled to the street. There they found a young man, John O'Mara, with his face badly cut by flying glass. He had been passing along the street when he was felled by the force of the explosion. Reserves from the Eldridge Street Station persuaded the frightened people to go back to their beds, telling them their homes would be guarded the rest of the night.

Windows in several houses on the west side of the street had been shattered. A thirteen-inch shell could not have done more damage. The oak door frame on the left side of the grocery store at 13 Essex Street, where the explosion took place, was ripped into fragments.

Sleeping only a little way behind their store were the Gimavalvo family of grocers, Sicilians, who have come to this country one by one as those here were able to provide for their passage. Their little business was prospering, when two weeks ago they received a letter demanding $100 for the Camorra. This is the name of the oldest of the Italian brigand societies. It advised them to speak to their "best friends." This is the way of the Camorra, who, unlike the "Black Hand" men, are too cunning to appoint a meeting place, because they have learned that they are likely here to find police keeping appointments.

The Gimavalvo family paid no attention to the threatening letter. They regarded it as a joke on the part of real friends. Six days ago they received another letter from the blackmailers saying that there had been an omission of a cipher in the original communication. The Gimavalvos must pay $1,000.

The Gimavalvos took the letter to Police Headquarters, where it was turned over to Petrosino. He saw at once that it was not a threat from the "Black Hand," but the Camorra. It was a matter of serious import, and the detective and his assistants guarded the grocery shop with the greatest care for five days. Two men were seen lurking about the neighborhood, but they did nothing to warrant their arrest.

Last night Petrosino had four appointments to meet writers of "Black Hand" letters—"Maleventa" men, who say they are "not afraid of hell," because they have chosen to be bad men on eart. Petrosino notified Capt. Murtha, through Sergt. Funston, that the grocery store ought to be guarded. He saw the Sergeant write the communication to his Captain.

At the time of the explosion Petrosino was in the Brooklyn Bridge riding in a fruit peddler's wagon. The wagon and horse belonged to an Italian who had been notified that he must pay $1,000 or be prepared for a violent death.

The blackmailers were to have met the fruit peddler on the bridge to receive the money, but the bridge policemen interfered with the detective and created such a commotion that he decided it was no use to wait for his quarry.

"When I woke this morning and learned of the explosion in Stanton Street I hit myself on either side of the head with my two hands and then I said to myself things about Capt. Murtha for which I am sorry," said Petrosino. "We have worked so hard and faithfully to suppress this brigandage. We have gone without sleep and food, and submitted ourselves to indignities. The place was unguarded for a moment, and then came the explosion. Those fellows will gloat over our defeat, and read here and there newspaper clippings to the eager ears of Sicilian boys the stories in the papers. They of the Camorra know how to do this and get recruits.

"There are now in the United States 30,000 of the Camorra, and there are, I believe, 5,000 of them in New York. They are getting bolder and bolder. The trouble is that the Sicilians, their countrymen on whom they prey, will not aid the police. They are afraid of the brigands. It is peculiar of these Sicilians that they prey on one another. That makes it so difficult for us. A man's 'best friend' may be his brother, or his brother-in-law, and so when he is threatened he goes to him to make peace with the Camorra. When he pays up he receives a letter saying that his protection is better than that of the police."

"The safety of the general public is that these fellows will not appoint places of meeting. They are aware that in this way the police catch them. But they are getting bolder, and they are very clever.

"In time they may find a way to prey on the general public. They are clever enough, I believe, to find that way. They are mostly Sicilians and Calabrians. Their society is governed by an Executive Committee, with headquarters in the various cities of the United States. The committeemen are called chiefs, and are obeyed absolutely. We may be able to run them down in time, but there is only one way to get rid of this terror, and that is through the Federal Government.

"There ought to be more binding treaties between the nations. Every immigrant should come with a certificate of good character from his home Government, and in the event of his proving a bandit in one country or the other he should be deported."

Petrosino arrested Domenico Castranovio, a barber, of 80 Catharine Street, last night, on the charge of scheming with others to obtain money from his cousin, Domenico Salemi, a butcher. About a week ago Salemi received a letter demanding $200. He told several friends about it, and also his cousin, Castranovio. Castranovio, he says, told him that if he would pay him the money he would turn it over to the representatives of the blackmailers, and save him from having his shop wrecked and himself and family killed by an explosion. Salemi had only $120 in ready cash, and he says he gave this to his cousin.

A day or two later Salemi received another letter demanding more money. He could not pay any more, and was frightened at the possibilities of refusing, so he told the police.

SAVED FROM SINKING BARK.

Crew of the Orion Rescued by Boat from the Etruria.

From the Marconi station on Sable Island, Nova Scotia, came news yeeterday that the eastbound Cunarder Etruria, which sailed from New York Saturday, had on Sunday rescued the crew of a sinking Swedish bark. The bark was the Orion, which was on the way to St. John, N. B., from Cape De Gata, Spain.

When sighted by the Etruria the Orion was in momentary danger of going down. The rescue was effected in a high sea by a boat's crew from the Cunarder, and as soon as the men were safe on board the liner resumed her voyage.

The rescue was made off the Banke of Newfoundland. The master of the Orion said he had been out seven weeks, for practically all of which time he had been buffeted by adverse weather. The Orion was a wooden bark of 441 tons.

LOUD CALLS FOR MR. WULFF,

Who Was to Sell Many Shares of American Lacing on the Curb.

Arturo Fonts, whose office is at 11 Broadway, invented an eyelet for the benefit of all men and women who wear shoes. The eyelets are supposed to replace the hooks which now adorn the uppers of shoes; they are closed up all around, so that the shoestring is stuck through endwaye, just as through the holes near the end of the shoe. Mr. Fonts, who is a Spaniard, got a patent and formed the American Lacing Company.

A curb promoter named Wulff appeared in Mr. Fonte's office last April. As a souvenir of the visit, the Spaniard now has a neatly written typewritten contract. By this Wulff was to sell 7,000 shares of American Lacing Stock at $5 a share, (par value $25.) For this he was to get a bonus of 1,000 shares, the rest of the 20,000 shares that formed the total being left in the treasury of the company. But first there must be forthcoming from Mr. Fonte $500. When it forthcame Wulff set out to sell the stock, but, according to R. Fonts, a nephew of the inventor, never a share of it was really sold.

Somehow, however, a price for the stock was kept up on the curb. One broker seemed to sell and another eeemed to buy, but no money came in.

At last Mr. Fonte put the case in the hands of the law firm of Olcott, Mestle & Gonzalez. R. Fonts said yesterday that they could not find Wulff.

RIVAL TROLLEY SYSTEM.

Jersey's Public Service Corporation to Have Competition.

Maps filed in the Hudson County Clerk's office in Jersey City yesterday by the new Hudson Street Railway Company show that the company intends to build about 50 miles of trolley connections as a feeder to the tunnel that the William G. McAdoo company is building under the Hudson River to the foot of Morton Street. The tunnel was started with the expectation that the Public Service Corporation, which controls all the trolley lines in North Jersey, would patronize it, but recently the Public Service announced its intention of building a tunnel of its own.

The maps filed yesterday indicate a purpose on the part of the new company to gridiron the county with its tracks and invade all the territory now eerved by the Public Service. Lines are mapped out to extend south from Jersey City to Bayonne and north into Hoboken and the cluster of populous towns beyond.

President McCarter of the Public Service Corporation says that the prospective competition does not disturb hie company, and Col. Hine, the Public Service Superintendent, says that four tunnele are bound to build up the county so ae to make plenty of business for both trolley companies.

WOOD BLOCKS FOR BROADWAY

Bids Opened for Paving the Lower End of the Thoroughfare.

Bids were opened yesterday by Borough President Ahearn for paving lower Broadway with wood blocks. It will take the accountants some days to tabulate the bids, and then the figures will be made public.

Chief Engineer Olney denied a report that he had ordered the wood block paving in Chambere Street replaced at a cost of $15,000.

"There is nothing the matter with the street that cannot be fixed in one day," said Mr. Olney. "Traffic was turned into Chambers Street before the concrete had properly set, and about sixty feet of the blocks by the curb will have to be straightened. The cost to the city will be nothing because the company is responsible for ten years' maintenance. As wood block pavement is being laid in Reade Street the Chambers Street repairs will not be made until Reade Street is open."

ASKS $15,000 A YEAR ALIMONY.

Mrs. Butler and Husband Lived Apart Though In One House.

An application for $15,000 a year allmony was made before Justice Maddox, in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, yesterday on behalf of Mrs. Annie Butler in her suit for divorce against Orlando W. Butler, a manufacturer and printer of bell programmes.

The attorney for the plaintiff said that an agreement had been entered into between the plaintiff and the defendant under which they were to live apart. By the terms of this agreement Mrs. Butler was to receive one-half the profits of her husband's business, but he had not lived up to them.

From the affidavit of the wife it appeared that after they had separated the plaintiff and defendant had lived in the same house. A letter written by Butler to his wife was introduced in evidence. In this letter he thanked her for permitting him to remain under the same roof with her.

The defendant denied the allegations made by his wife, and said that she is well-to-do. Decision was reserved.

HAD SCHUETZENBUND FUNDS.

Treasurer, Who Fled, Arrested—Says Somebody Robbed Him.

David Vollmer, lately treaeurer of the Manhattan Schuetzenbund, was arariened in Yorkville Police Court yesterday on the charge of appropriating $2,500 of the funds of the organization.

He waived examination and was held in $1,500 bail for trial. He denied appropriating the money for hie own use, and said he had been robbed of $1,600 of it.

Vollmer was a baker at 343 East Thirty-sixth Street in June last when he is alleged to have taken the money. He is 58 years old, and has grown-up children. William Labriner of 311 Sixth Street, a trustee of the Schuetzenbund, says that on June 27 Vollmer drew all the funds of the organization, $2,500, from the Fifth National Bank and left the city.

A few days ago the trusteee learned that he had returned home, and informed the police. Vollmer was arrested in hie home on Monday night. His lawyer said that Vollmer had no intsntion of stealing the money, and that $1,600 of it bad been etolen from him.

City Lodging House Bids Too High.

Bids for the erection of the new municipal lodging house which the city ie to build in East Twenty-fifth Street, between First Avenue and the river, were opened by Commissioner Tully yesterday. All the bids were $100,000 in excess of the appropriation, which is $175,000. The lowest bidder was Daniel J. Ryan. He bid $275,000. All the bids probably will be rejected.

M'ADOO WARNED BY CIVIL SERVICE BOARD

Cannot Promote Costigan Offhand, It Declares.

COMMISSIONER WILL FIGHT

Says Board "Will Have a Couple of Long Thinks" Before He Asks for a Classified List.

The promotion of Roundeman Daniel Costigan to be Capt. Eggers's successor as head of the Vice Squad to a Detective Sergeancy has brought on a clash between the Police Commissioner and the Civil Service Commission. The Commission wrote to Mr. McAdoo yesterday that by an amendment to the charter made a year ago Detective Sergeants were placed on the classified list, that therefore Costigan's promotion was illegal, and that he would have to go on a classified list and submit to an examination before he became a Detective Sergeant.

Mr. McAdoo announced his intention to fight this decieion. He said that the Civil Service Commission would have "a couple of long thinks" before he ever asked for a classified list from which to make promotions to Detective Sergeanticies. To settle the matter Coetigan will take his caee into court. Commissioner McAdoo will aid him.

ADRIFT SEVEN DAYS.

Perilous Experience of Two Fishermen Off to Grand Banks.

Ben Benson and Ben Oleson, Gloucester fishermen, missing since Sept. 9 from the Glouceeter fisherman Arbutus, turned up sound and well on the Scandinavian-American liner Hellg Olav yesterday morning. The two Bens were aseigned one day by Capt. Pfluger of the Arbutus to set out the trawls off the Grand Banke. They rowed away in the dory to do it, and that was the last the men of the Arbutus saw of them. A tbick fog settled off the Banks about that time, and the trawl eetters were unable to find their way back to the vessel.

Then they began to drift, and the eeas got choppy, and they had all they could do to keep the eixteen-foot dory afloat. For the next twenty-four hours they balled out the water that poured with relentless regularity into their frail craft. They had neither food nor fresh wator, and matters soon became eerious. The second day a big tramp steamship was sighted and the cutwater caused the little dory to do all kinds of etunts, but the lookout on the tramp did not see them, and the steamer was soon loet to view.

The next day they eighted another steamship. This time it was an ocean liner heading at full speed for New York. It was several miles away, and the man on the lookout again failed to eee them. The great ocean greyhound went her way. Benson and Oleson continued to drift.

The Gloucester men were almost crazed for water and food, but they kept on bailing and hoping. For three days they hoped. The sky was clear and blue all these last three daye, but neither sail nor smoke from passing craft did they sight. They knew that unlese somebody sighted them within a day it was a thoueand to one that they would die.

Almost exhausted, but etill bailing, when the sun came up on the morning of the seventh day, their hearte almoet leaped into their throate, for only a few hundred yards away was the steamship Nicolai II., bound for Copenhagen. The lookout saw them, and ten minutes later the Nicolai had stopped and a lifeboat was on the way to rescue them. In an hour they were safe on board the Nicolai II. and on the way to Copenhagen.

When the Nicolai II. reached Copenhagen the American Consul took the Gloucester men in charge and eent them home.

BARELY DODGED DEATH.

Subway Worker Escapes an Express Train Minus Three Toes.

Just as an expreee train in the Subway was about to strike him at the east end of the Grand Central Station yesterday at noon, Simonides Kalamariedes, a Subway laborer of 14 Greenwich Street, saved his life by throwing himself under the overhanging edge of the platform and squeezing cloee against it. He failed to draw in his right foot, however, and it was oruehed so badly that three of the toes had to be amputated.

Kalamariedes was crossing the traok with a sack of cement on his shoulder. The train struck the cement sack first, breaking it and showering the powdered contente over the man. In a fraction of a second, Kalamariedes threw himself under the edge of the platform. The motorman, George Monroe, saw him about fifty feet away and put on the brakes, throwing the passengers out of their seats, but he could not stop until the motor car passed over Kalamariedes's foot.

A Great Sale of Men's Medium Weight Overcoats

Always $18 to $25,

GOOD value is the only dignity in business we recognize. Some are influenced—many in New York—by the sham dignity of high prices—an absurdity which we are trying hard to correct. Ours to the core is a good store, but not high-priced. Fine Fall Overcoats $15, instead of $25 to $35.

Consider this:

The collection embraces every representative style—Paddocks, Three-quarter Coats, in Greys and Tans and many English Mixtures; Top Coats in Venetians, Metal Grey and Fawn; the stately Chesterfield—many are elegantly lined with silk, and all are RIGHT to a line in style. $15 instead of $25 to $35.

JEROME FIERCELY ASSAILS BOSS RULE

And a Great Audience in Carnegie Hall Roars Approval.

I HAVE MADE GOOD, HE SAYS

He Scathingly Denounces Interference with the Courts—Will Act When Investigator Hughes Finishes.

Carnegie Hall, when jammed to its utmost capacity, is said to hold just 6,000 people. It was more than jammed last night, if that could be, when District Attorney Jerome formally opened his independent campaign for re-election.

If enthusiasm counts for as much as numbers, the candidate and his managers have a right to feel hopeful. For five minutes and a few seconds the audience stood on its feet, roaring in chorus until the sound of it reminded the listener of the thunder of some distant surf, waving handkerchiefs and flags and newspapers over their heads until the walls themselves seemed alive and moving, and finally beaming on Jerome himself with their broadest and cheeriest smiles.

A gauge of the temper of the audience was furnished when, just as the principal speaker was about to begin his address, a raucous voice from one of the backmost rows of the gallery was heard to call out:

"Give it to 'em, Bill! Give it to 'em!"

The mixture of laughter and cheering and applause greeting that outburst seemed to indicate that the innermost feelings of the thousands present had found voice in the utterance.

The streets around Carnegie Hall were crowded two hours before 8:30 o'clock, the time set for the opening of the meeting. A large force of police, with Borough Inspector Brooks at the head, lined every approach to the place to a distance of a block from the entrances. Every comer had to show a ticket.

The first comers took their seats about 6:45 o'clock. At 7:15 the platform was filled, and at 7:35 there was not an empty seat in the whole house outside the boxes, and these were filled to their utmost capacity by 8 o'clock.

For a full hour the audience waited without showing impatience.

It was 8:45 o'clock when Dr. Adler and Mr. Cutting, the two other speakers, had finished their brief addresses. Mr. Jerome had not yet arrived then, and the Chairman called on Frederick W. Hinrichs. While he was speaking, the eyes of the greater part of the audience were steadily turned toward the left corner of the platform, where the man all were waiting for was expected to make his appearance. He came within a couple of minutes of the appointed time. There was a slight stirring as of the wind passing through rushes. Then up rose the whole audience.

While the storm of applause and cheering raged around him Mr. Jerome stood still as a statue near the speaker's desk, his head slightly bent forward and his face turned toward the floor. It seemed as if he heard or saw nothing. Once he turned and raised his hand in an appeal for silence. When this was disregarded, he resumed his former position. It was only when he began to speak that it became clear to the audience how their reception had affected him. He mastered himself with difficulty, and said with a smile:

"You see, you have kind of taken the tuck out of me with the warmth of your reception."

As Mr. Jerome settled down to his talking it became apparent that his throat was not in good shape, and that his presence on the platform involved a good deal of a strain. Yet he had the ear of the audience. His first big hit came when he stopped suddenly in his nervous walking back and forth along the edge of the platform and exclaimed, his face turned expectantly upward:

"I have made good, if I say it myself."

"Hou Have," Shouts the Audience.

"You have, you have," came back from the audience, and the boxes cried as lustily as the gallery.

The name of Charles E. Hughes next caused an outburst. It was mild, however, compared with the storm that broke when Mr. Jerome referred to the candidates on the other tickets not by names, but as "puppets dancing on the strings held by the hands of the men with whom my quarrel is."

Here is Mr. Jerome's speech:

"Mr. Chairman, Ladies, and Gentlemen: This is a pretty tough proposition to put up to a man. [Laugbter and applause.] If you had not filled the house, if you had not had the glad hand for me I could have made it all right, but you have kind of taken the tuck out of me by the warmth of your reception. However, we will get down—as we used to say in 1901—to cases.

"Now there comes a time in the history of every people, whether it be of a nation or State or smaller community, when we have got to put down moral milestones to see how far we have gotten. That is the time we have come to in this community. We have surely come to a time when we had better find out where we are at. [Applause.]

"We had better know, for good or for ill whether the grocery man of Newburg and the bartender of Good Ground rule us [applause] or whether the voice of the people of this city is to be potent in the choice of its own candidates. [Applause.]

FRANCE DECLINES OUR CUP.

So the Vanderbilt Auto Race May Be Run Here Again—Touring Races Wanted.

A letter is now on its way to the Vanderbilt Cup Commission from the Automobile Club of France, and as soon as it is received the Racing Board of the American Automobile Association will hold its first meeting since the running of the Vanderbilt Cup race. Baron Adrien de Turckheim, the official representative of the Automobile Club of France at the recent race, declared yesterday that the cup would not be accepted by the French club.

"The French club has already declined to promote another Gordon Bennett Cup race," he said, "and it could not very well accept the Vanderbilt Cup under the conditions of holding a race for that trophy in France next season."

Baron de Turckheim, who will sail for home to-day on La Savoie, intimated that the French club would offer suggestions regarding future competitions for the Vanderbilt Cup.

"I would like to see it turned into a trophy for a big touring event," he added. "I do not say, though, that if the Racing Board here should decide to hold a road contest next year the French manufacturers would not enter. Perhaps we would, for it is quite likely the French manufacturers would feel that they have more to gain in races in America than in France. We have so many high-class cars of acknowledged reliability that the mere fact of winning a big speed event counts comparatively for little."

A. Rawlinson, managing Director of the Darracq Company, whose car, driven by Hemery, retained the trophy for France, favored a race here even more strongly than the Baron.

"I hope the Vanderbilt Cup will be raced for in America next year," he said. "The French club has undoubtedly read aright the sentiment of the French manufacturers regarding the utility of high speed contests abroad, but racing conditions are different here. I believe the most progressive American manufacturers are inclined to favor road events for another year or two at least. Because the French club declines to foster road races there is nothing to prevent French manufactures from entering open competitions."

Baron de Turckheim, in explaining the action of the French Automobile Club in refusing to foster any more road races, said that it was because the leading foreign automobilists felt that development in motor cars should now be along other lines than are laid out by road racing.

"These races have been a great benefit," he said. "We have been enabled to determine certain proper weights for cars combined with lightness and durability of material. Now, improvements should be directed more to the perfection of touring cars. Here we have a number of details for fruitful study, as, for instance, tires, suspensions, comfortable devices for the passengers, and more ease in running. Big touring contests, I think, are going to be more popular in the future than formerly. Such events as the Pyrenees cup event in France or the big reliability run last season in India are both valuable and interesting to practical automobilists. I would like to see a big touring contest held in America next season, the event lasting, say, a week, and each day's run about 150 miles. I would even go beyond this and suggest touring contests for cars of the same kind of spoke, of the same size of piston rod, and making practically the same number of revolutions. But it is too early for that at present, but it is certain that future development of the automobile lies through the medium of the touring car.

$22,000 NECKLACE HELD.

Philadelphia Woman Sends It by Her Lawyer, Fearing Arrest.

A valuable, pearl necklace, which was smuggled into the country a few days ago, is locked up in a safe deposit vault downtown to secure payment of a large duty, which, Collector Stranahan believes, the owner sought to evade. The name and residence of the owner, a woman of social prominence, are the Collector's secret. He said last night that the matter had been turned over to the Treasury Department at Washington.

The necklace, Collector Stranahan said, was valued at between $20,000 and $22,000, and the duty on it, 60 per cent., would approximate $13,000. Four weeks ago the Treasury Department received information that a woman, not a resident of New York City, had purchased a necklace in Paris for $22,000 and succeeded in getting it through the line of Custom House officers who inspected her baggage.

Several special agents of the Treasury Department from Washington were detailed on the case and were told upon coming here that the woman's home was in Philadelphia. She was not found at her home when the Government officials went there. They were told that she was attending a theatre with a party.

The Treasury agents followed the clue to the theatre, where one of the men of her family begged them not to make a scene. He promised that, if any wrong had been done, it would be quickly righted. He agreed to hunt up the necklace and turn it over to the Government officials on the following morning. The woman, he declared, really had no idea that it was necessary to pay duty on it.

The following morning, last Saturday, the woman's attorney and one of the men of her family called at the New York Custom House and handed the necklace to Collector Stranahan. In the meantime the affair had so upset the nerves of the purchaser of the necklace that she had to go away again for a rest, her friends explaining that fear of being arrested and disgraced had broken her down.

"It is not true," said Mr. Stranahan, "that the woman was followed to Chicago, Boston, and New York, as some one has stated, but the authorities at Washington have two reports, one made by me and another by the Treasury agent."

STOLE $200,000 COLLECTION.

Englishman Sentenced in Paris for Robbing Mr. Zimmerman.

PARIS, Oct. 18.—An Englishman named Hayes was to-day sentenced to imprisonment for eighteen months on the charge of having stolen a collection of coins, medals, and cameos from the Rev. Jeremiah Zimmerman of Syracuse, N. Y., the well-known numismatist and Egyptologist.

The theft, as stated in these dispatches at the time, was committed on Oct. 4 at the Hotel Anjou, where Mr. Zimmerman was stopping after his arrival from Egypt.

The collection, which was valued at $200,000, was to be given to the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York.

POLITICIANS BLAMED FOR WRECKING BANK

Suicide of Cashier of Enterprise National Led to Exposure.

HELD $782,000 STATE FUNDS

Charges Had Been Made Concerning Institution—President Was a Dummy.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Penn., Oct. 18.—Cashier T. Lee Clarke of the Enterprise National Bank of Allegheny, and an Elder in the First United Presbyterian Church of Bellevue, committed suicide to-day by taking laudanum and shooting himself. The Enterprise bank was closed by the National Bank Examiner.

The Enterprise National Bank had almost $750,000 in State funds. That the bank was carrying $700,000 in paper from Pennsylvania politicians is also alleged. It is asserted to-night that the failure of the Santa Fé system to take over an option on property in Arizona promoted by Cashier Clarke and others was the indirect cause of the crash.

How much of the State money was used up in this deal has not been made public, but there is a record of one loan of $200,000 to a concern managed by W. R. Andrews, Territorial representative of New Mexico, in connection with F. J. Torrance, a prominent Pennsylvania Republican politician, ex-State Senator Arthur Kennedy, and Cashier Clarke.

In the bank's affairs all is chaos. President Frederick Gwinner said to-night:

"I have been only a dummy President. They used me, my name and my money. It will kill the Republican Party in Pennsylvania. At least, I hope so, for they have killed Clarke and have ruined me as well as many others. We have been ruined by the accursed Republican machine in Pennsylvania."

Last week State Banking Commissioner John A. Berkey of Somerset and John W. Morrison, one of his deputies, visited the bank. Yesterday State Treasurer Mathieu sent an additional deposit of State funds amounting to $50,000, which made the total amount of State funds in the bank $782,000.

Torrance, who is head of the Standard Manufacturing Company, and one of the leading Republicans of Pennsylvania, is now seriously ill. He has been closely identified with the officials of the bank now in the hands of a receiver.

Last evning Cashier Clarke went to the bank where he remained over his books until long after midnight. About 9 o'clock President Gwinner dropped in to see him. He asked if anything was wrong or if he could do anything.

"I'll give you $100,000, Mr. Clarke, if you need it for a time," said the old President, "I'm afraid all is not well here."

"Thank you, Mr. Gwinner, but the bank is all right, and I'm all right," Clarke announced.

Two hours later Clarke went home, and, rising early this morning, took a dose of laudanum, but it was not sufficient to kill him. He persuaded his family that it had been a mistake, and, drinking a cup of coffee, ordered his carriage brought to the door in order that he might not be late at the bank. He kissed his wife and four children good-bye, and went out on the long back porch of his $300,000 home. There he shot himself through the head.

Homer L. Castle, Prohibition candidate for State Superior Court Judge, in public several weeks ago made the declaration that United States Senator Boies Penrose and others had obtained a loan from the Turtle Creek Bank of Allegheny County, and that the note for the loan had been turned over to the Enterprise Bank. It was maintained that there was juggling with funds of the State, and United States Senator Penrose came out with a bitter attack on Castle, saying he was a "damned liar."

Later Castle made the declaration that the Enterprise Bank carried $200,000 of paper floated by Andrews and others, that the loan had been made without interest because Andrews and his friends had obtained for the Enterprise Bank a large deposit of State funds.

There were loud calls from the public for affirmation or denial of this rumor, but none was forthcoming. To-day's crash brought out the fact that the $200,000 loan was there, not in the name of the Territorial representative of New Mexico, but in the name of the Pennsylvania Development Company, which Andrews controls.

Andrews, who is back from New Mexico for a time, was asked this evening about his connection with the Enterprise Bank.

"Yes, I've heard Clarke is dead; too bad, ain't it? Me? Oh, I don't know anything about the bank's affairs. Clarke, Torrance, and Kennedy took care of the financial end of things. I don't know anything about it."

President Gwinner made some investigation when the first of Cashier Clarke's bad work became known. He had given a note for $200,000 to the Bank of Pittsburg, making the Enterprise National Bank of Allegheny security for it.

This was without the knowledge of the President or other Directors of the bank. President Gwinner, to save scandal, paid this note out of his own pocket. What has become of the money has not been made known. Within forty-eight hours of the time he killed himself, Cashier Clarke had Gwinner indorse for him a note for $50,000.

President Gwinner of the Enterprise National Bank is one of the best-known financiers of Pennsylvania. In 1877 he was crippled financially in the Bank of Manchester failure, which strange to say was in the same building now occupied by the Enterprise National Bank.

The Directorate of the Enterprise National Bank as shown on the books is: Frederick Gwinner, President; William Bradberry, Vice President; T. Lee Clarke, Cashier; James P. McKinney, Charles F. Stifel, A. F. Schwerd, David Morrison, August Langenheim, and William A. Seiling, Direotors.

David L. Gsllup, controller of the Santa Fé System, when seen last night in reference to the alleged failure of the Santa Fé Company to exercise an option in purchasing the Andrews Mexican Railroad property, which was followed by the Enterprise Bank failure in Allegheny, Penn., said:

"This propoeition is news to me, and will be to other officials of the road. What is the Andrews option and this Mexican railroad? I have never heard of it before. The Santa Fé holds no such option as is described here. We know nothing whatever about it. I can't imagine where the story of our connection with it should have arisen. It certainly has no foundation whatever."

The Hanover National Bank is the New York correspondent of the Enterprise National Bank of Allegheny. William Barhour, a Director of the Hanover National, said last night:

"The Hanover Bank is a correspondent of the Enterprise National, but further than that has no connection with it. The news of the failure of the Enterprise National reached us yesterday afternoon. That is all we know about it, and are not acquainted with any of the details of the bank's inside or local affairs."

PRESIDENT SAYS "SPECKY."

Allegation Made by von Sternburg's German Enemies.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Oct. 18.—Though it appears that the reports that Baron Speck von Sternburg would not return to America as Ambassador were quite baseless, it is indisputable that the Baron has been the object of attack by various highly placed personages.

The reasons for the dislike which he has inspired are various and somewhat elusive. One of them is the fact that he was promoted over the heads of other diplomats who considered that they were entitled to the coveted Washington post. Another is the pro-American attitude which he has displayed in speeches in America and Germany. A third is the alleged half-hearted manner in which he has represented German commercial interests.

The Baron's enemies have made use of any convenient weapon which they found available. They have solemnly declared, for instance, that President Roosevelt is in the habit of calling the Ambassador "Specky."

RUN DOWN, LEFT TO DROWN.

Edward Livingston and Dr. Edward L. Keyes Barely Escape.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWBURG, N. Y., Oct. 18.—Edward Livingston of 17 East Seventy-fourth Street, New York City, whose country home is at Highlands, N. Y.; his friend, Dr. Edward L. Keyes of 1 East Seventy-fourth Street, and Augustus Hayes, engineer of Mr. Livingston's naphtha launch, the Half Moon, had an extraordinary escape from death last night. The three set out at 6:30 from Mr. Livingston's Summer home near Highlands, where Dr. Keyes was a guest, for a moonlight sail up the Hudson. They went as far as Cold Spring, then turned the bow of the launch southward, hugging the east shore closely. Near Garrison a craft several times as large approached from the south. Suddenly the approaching vessel veered toward the east, and a second later cut into and through the launch. The occupants were tumbled into the water, but were not badly injured, and shouted lustily for help. Those on the steamer paid no heed to their calls, but proceeded on their way.

Dr. Keyes, an expert swimmer, was able to reach shore. Hayes and Mr. Livingston saved themselves by clinging to a life preserver and a cork cushion until they could paddle back to a part of the boat which floated. They clung to it for some time, and then the steamer Redfield of the New York and Hudson Freight and Passenger Line came along on her up trip. It picked the two men up after some difficulty.

Dr. Keyes was also taken aboard the Redfield, and the three men were brought to Newburg and taken to the United States Hotel, where they remained until morning, and then left for Highlands. Hayes was not hurt. Dr. Keyes had a bruise on his forehead, and Mr. Livingston a bruise on the right cheek.

Mr. Livingston says it does not seem possible that the men on the colliding steamer could have been unaware of the accident, as the lights on the launch must have been seen by the lookout or pilot, and the calls for help certainly would have attracted attention if the crash of the collision had not done so.

Dr. Edward Lawrence Keyes is one of the best-known physicians in this city. He is the son of the late Major Gen. Erasmus D. Keyes of the United States Army and a graduate of Yale and the medical department of New York University.

From the latter institution he obtained the degree of LL. D. From 1872 to 1890 he held the Chair of Dermatology in the Bellevue Hospital Medical School, and he is still a consulting surgeon to Bellevue Hospital. He is the author of several well known medical works.

Edward Livingston is well known in club and social life here. He is a widower with two children—Miss Clarisse Hazeltine Livingston and Edward Livingston, Jr., a well-known young lawyer.

PRESIDENT GETS HIS MAN.

Troublesome Chauffeur the First Victim of the New Civil Service Order.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—The most sweeping order ever made with regard to the civil service, that delivered yesterday giving department heads the right to remove employes without a hearing, went promptly into effect.

The first victim has lost his head. He is the unlucky chauffeur whose indiscretion some time ago in getting in the President's way brought about the issuance of this order. His name is Walter S. Elvidge, and he was appointed from Minnesota. He held the place of assistant messenger in the Bureau of Standards, but his duties have been to drive Secretary Metcalf's own automobile.

Theoretically, the rule does not make much difference, because heads of departments always have had the right to remove clerks. The only difference is that the hearing has been abolished. But actually, it makes a great difference, because the cumbersome nature of the procedure has hitherto acted as a deterrent on department heads.

The Government clerks assert that the order will result in the enthronement of favoritism. They say that a Cabinet officer will not molest a man with strong political backing, but can remove without trouble any one who may be the victim of a tale-hearing chief of division.

Elvidge's own version of the incident which led to his dismissal came out to-night. He says he was driving his automobile at a reasonable rate of speed, and that in front of him was a carriage going in the same direction. He did not know who was in it. When he came up with it he started to pass it, going to the left.

Two men on bicycles waved their arms at him in frantic protest, whereupon Elvidge concluded that for some reason they wished him to reverse the rule of the road and pass to the right, and he headed his machine that way. Thereupon they waved still more frantically, came up to him, and put him under arrest, and told him that they were the Secret Service officers who accompany the President to protect him from harm.

PRESIDENT PROHIBITS TALKING BY CABINET

Forbids Discussion of Meetings or Government Policies.

WARNS OF REPORTERS' WILES

Friendship or Sympathy Must Be Guarded Against—Heads of Departments Stunned.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—Every member of the Cabinet is carrying in his inside pocket to-night a letter from Secretary Loeb which, if it has its effect, will bottle up Cabinet proceedings airtight. It expresses the President's absolute wish that not one word be said by any member of the Cabinet about anything that takes place in the Cabinet room.

The letter was written in manifold yesterday, and was received by all the Cabinet in due course of business to-day soon after the President took his departure for the South.

The letter is a page and a half long, and starts out with the injuncion from the President that every member of the Cabinet observe absolute secrecy as to all that takes place in the Cabinet meetings.

"It has been made the subject of an understanding," says the letter, "with the three press associations that nothing is to be given out hereafter in regard to Cabinet meetings. This will do away with the unseemly practice, which self-respecting members of the press have always disliked to follow, of waylaying members of the Cabinet as they come out from the Cabinet meetings and asking them for information of what has taken place.

"It is to be hoped that in observance of this request, which places each member of the Cabinet under the solemn moral obligation not to discues proceedings of the meetings of the Cabinet, no one will in a moment of weakness or of good nature give to a special correspondent whom he may especially like, or for whom he feels sorry, a statement of anything that has happened in Cabinet meetings. Such a course would make it necessary to go back to the old practice of giving out a résumé of what has been done by the Cabinet, which is undesirable. Members of the Cabinet will also please refrain from discussing policies, either of their own or those of the Administration."

The members of the Cabinet were fairly stunned by this announcement and command. They had all discussed with no little impatience the President's request ten days ago that nothing should be said of Cabinet business, with the understanding that Secretary Loeb should give out whatever was to be made public. But this rule did not work.

The members of the Cabinet believe that practically all that happens in Cabinet meetings should be given out, but Mr. Loeb is not present in the Cabinet room during Cabinet meetings, except when the President touches a bell button and calls him in to bring in papers, and then he goes right out again.

"In fact, the President's Secretary could not attend a Cabinet meeting," said one member of the Cabinet to-night, "as if he did it would not be a Cabinet meeting. Mr. Loeb could not give information of Cabinet proceedings, and the plan did not work.

"I think it will be necessary to have some understanding as to how information shall be given out, as nine-tenths of what takes place should he made public. The greater part of the talk at the Cabinet meetings has to do with whether the President shall appoint this man a Judge and that man a District Attorney or the other man a Marshal. There is little else done there. Of course it is understood that foreign affairs should never be made public. No matter of business that concerns legal prosecutions by the Government should be talked about. Appointments for the most part, when they are decided on, might just as well in most cases be announced, for the very good reason that by so doing the strife of candidates may be atopped.

"There is one phase of this matter that I do not believe the President fully estimates. Suppose some of my subordinates talk about something of a confidential nature in my department. Then I take the matter up in the Cabinet and immediately it gets into the papers. It would look as if I divulged it. We can't atop these things in every case from getting into print. It is physically impoesible. It should be arranged that each head of a department should alone speak to members of the press about any matter that is to be given out concerning his own department.

"I imagine that this latest request of the President will meet with some difficulties in execution. However, we shall all observe it absolutely. None of us will try to fly in the face of the President in a matter like this. But in this day and generation the American people expect to know what is being done by their representatives in the Government, and they have means of getting their information and ways of expreseing their opinion of attempts to keep back from them what they have been educated to believe they have the right to know."

BOY DYING AFTER A FIGHT.

Lad Who Knocked Him Down and Jumped on Him Arrested.

Albert Bauer, 15 years old, of 269 West 114th Street, was arrested last night by detectives of the West 125th Street Station and sent to the Gerry Society charged with felonious assault upon William Samson, 13 years old, of 1,482 Third Avenue.

The Samson boy goes to school, but on Saturdays does errands for neighboring tradesmen. On Saturday afternoon, in front of 261 West 114th Street, he met the Bauer boy. They had a fight, and it is alleged that Bauer knocked Samson down and jumped on him.

On Sunday morning Samson became violently ill. Dr. Anthony Kan of 163 East Eighty-third Street, found that he was suffering from internal injuries and hemorrhage of the lungs. Late last night the physician said that pleuro-pneumonia had set in, and that the boy could not live through the night. The Coroner's office was notified.

Cloth Spongers Give Hearst $1,000.

The Cloth Examiners and Spongers' Union at a meeting held in Beethoven Hall in Fifth Street last night moved to appropriate $1,000 to be expended in the interest of the Municipal League, headed by William R. Hearst. It is the first political appropriation made by the union in twenty years.

ENORMOUS SPOT ON THE SUN.

Covers Over 12,000,000,000 Square Miles—Visible to Naked Eye.

ROME, Oct. 18.—Father Rodrigues, Director of the Astronomical Observatory of the Vatican, to-day officially announced that he had discovered in the sun a spot of extraordinarily large dimensions, larger than that observed last February.

The spot is composed of seven principal nuclei. In length it is one-eighth the diameter of the sun and a little less in width. The area covered by the spot is over 12,000,000,000 square miles. Within three days, Father Rodrigues says, the spot will reach the centre of the sun, when the area, as it will face the world, will seem larger.

The spot can now be seen with the naked eye.

EIGHT KILLED BY TORNADO.

Houses Wrecked or Moved—Flood in Surrounding Territory.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 18.—A tornado that struck the village of Sorento, Ill., thirty-two miles northeast of St. Louis, last night, killed eight persons and injured thirty-five others. Forty houses were wrecked or carried far from their foundations, in fact, everything in the track of the storm was reduced to débris or blown away.

Those killed were: Mrs. Thomas File, 38 years old; Mrs. William Stewart, 60 years old; William Mann, 60 years old, and Harrison Mann, 18 years old, and four unidentified persons. William Kirkland and wife and William Stewart will probably die.

The storm approached from the southwest and swept through the main residence portion of the town. The wind was quickly followed by a heavy downpour of rain, with lightning and thunder.

The same storm deluged Alton, a few miles south. At Grafton, fourteen miles distant, the main street was three feet under water. Ten miles north of Alton a Chicago, Peoria and St. Louis freight train struck a washout and plunged down an embankment into Branch Creek, containing six feet of water. Two cars contained cattle and horses, and only a few of the animals escaped death.

SCRANTON, Penn., Oct. 18.—Gen. Charles Miller, Commander of the Pennsylvania National Guard, was to-day deposed as a member of the Board of Managers of the Mission Society of the Pennsylvania Baptist Association, in session here, on the ground that he is a divorced man. MR. GOULD WAS NOT THERE.

But the "Mops" Had Their Baseball Dinner at the Roversi.

George J. Gould gave a dinner last night at the Hotel Roversi on Twenty-seventh Street, west of Broadway, to the members of the Champion "Mops" baseball team, representing the employes of the Missouri Pacific Railroad. Mr. Gould was present by proxy in the person of W. A. Hamilton, a distant relative of Mrs. Gould, who acted as toastmaster. Dr. Maughan Carter and others whose ties, consanguineous or marital, identified them with the Gould family, were also there.

Every one of the sixteen men who made so notable a record in the field during the past season was on hand, and from 7 o'clock until midnight there was a joyful time.

SHIP SAVED BY WIRELESS.

News of the Everett's Plight Brought the Lucas to Rescue.

A letter received by the De Forest Wireless Company from Operator Heimbecker on board the steamship Lucas brought the information yesterday that, by meane of the wireless apparatus installed on that ship, and on the steamer City of Everett, the latter vessel was discovered in a sinking condition in a storm that raged all day Oct. 9 and most of the next day.

Heimbecker was at his receiver when he found another steamer calling. He established immediate connection with the operator on board the City of Everett, and learned that a hatch on her forward hold had been washed away, and that she had shipped so much water that the Captain feared she might founder any minute.

The Lucas stood by for twenty-nine hours, placing herself between the damaged steamer and the wind, thus enabling the City of Everett to make temporary repairs, and pump out the water in her hold. She then proceeded to New York, while the Lucas continued on her way to Port Arthur.

MUTUAL'S HOUSE SENATORS' HOME

No Board Bills Paid by Graney or McClelland Shown.

BECK PROTESTS TO HUGHES

Says He Leads Up to Ugly Imputations, but McCurdy Praises the Committee's Counsel.

Counsel Charles E. Hughes of the Insurance Investigating Committee got a Mutual Life Insurance Company employe to testify at the inquiry yesterday that the Mutual had kept at Albany for ten or more years a house where, in at least two instances, members of the Insurance Committee of the Legislature had been quartered. This testimony was given by William N. Carpenter of the Mutual's supply department. The two legislators who were a part of the Mutual's "household," as Mr. Carpenter expressed it, were Charles P. McClelland, now United States General Appraiser here, and ex-Senator Graney of Dobbe Ferry, who preceded Mr. McClelland as Senator from Westechester.

It did not appear from yesterday's testimony that Messrs. McClelland and Graney paid any board while living in the Mutual's house. Mr. Carpenter said that neither of them had ever paid him anything, although he testified that he handled most of the money that was expended for the maintenance of the establishment. Mr. McClelland was a member of the company's "household" in the Winter of 1903, and Mr. Graney a year or two earlier. Both of them, Mr. Carpenter explained, were old friends and neighbors in Dobbs Ferry of Andrew C. Fields, the head of the Mutual's department of supplies, who was also the senior member of the company's "household" at Albany.

No General Entertainment.

Mr. Carpenter told the committee that he might have seen Eugene Wood, the lobbyist, and Moe Dinkelspiel at the Mutual's house, but he was not quite sure about it. He was certain that in the ten years in which he was familiar with the Albany place no general entertainment had been given to legislators there. The expense, including the payment of the caretaker, butler, and cook, were charged up to the Mutual's legal expense account, according to many vouchers which were introduced in evidence. Mr. Carpenter said that he had seen A. C. Fields as recently as the first of October. Mr. Fields was then living at Kingston, N. Y. He believed that Fields was now in Southern California.

The disclosures about the Mutual's Albany house were not the only disclosures made yesterday affecting the legal expenses of the company. John J. Cunningham of Dobbs Ferry, now an examiner for the Insurance Department and detailed to this city, testified that from 1888 to 1893 he was manager of the livery stable in Dobbs Ferry in which A. C. Fields was interested. He said that he got his place in the Insurance Department on recommendation of Mr. Fields, Mr. McClelland, and James F. Pierce, who was formerly State Superintendent of Insurance, and after that, until his death last Winter, one of the attorneys of the Mutual Life.

Plunkett a Telephone Boy.

At the afternoon session it came out that the man whose name appears on a Mutual legal expense voucher, dated Feb. 20, 1905, for $901.15, wasn't ex-Senator George Washington Plunkitt or his son George E. Plunkitt, but George J. Plunkett. He is a telephone boy of 19 or 20 years, and is in the stationery department of Lyaander W. Lawrence, who has handled most of the Mutual's printing and supply business for years. Young Plunkett on the stand declared, however, that to the best of his knowledge he did not sign the voucher in question. At the request of Mr. Hughes and of John B. Stanchfield, counsel for the Lawrence firm, he wrote his name on two slips of paper for comparison with the signature of the voucher. The resemblance was so striking that the committee turned the matter over to District Attorney Rand, who happened to be in the room, for such action ae he might see fit to take.

James M. Beck, who has been representing the Mutual Life at the hearings as counsel, got into a lively controversy with Chairman Armstrong of the committee and Mr. Hughes by objecting while President McCurdy was under examination to some of Mr. Hughes's methods of questioning. He said that Mr. Hughes frequently led witnesses up to a point that allowed newspapers to put "an ugly imputation" on their teatimony, and then stopped without giving them a chance to explain. Chairman Armstrong replied at some length. Then Mr. Hughes in a brief rejoinder declared that witnesses who got themselves in a false position had only themselves to blame, and that although every courtesy was shown to witnesses before the committee, an evasion of legitimate questions would be "held up to ths contempt which it has always received."

Hughes Fair, McCurdy Says.

President McCurdy himself closed the incident by remarking that Mr. Hughes's fairness had been noted by him with much admiration, not to say gratitude.

Mr. Beck's other contribution to the proceedings yesterday was an admission not previously made by witnesses on the stand. He said that the coupons received from metropolitan district advertisements for which the Mutual had paid were turned over to Charles H. Raymond & Co., the general agents for this district. From this firm Louis A. Thébaud, President McCurdy's son-in-law, has drawn from $100,000 to $147,000 a year for several years.

Mr. Carpenter was the most outspoken witness that the committee has had on the stand since the Mutual's affairs have been under investigation. He made his answers to Mr. Hughes without hesitation and with an apparent willingness to tell what he knew about the affairs of the company. He said he was 37 years old, lived in Oesining, had been in the supply department of the Mutual for all but six months of the seventeen years that he had been connected with the company, and that he had worked for several years directly under Mr. Fields.

Mr. Carpenter said that about the first of October he saw Mr. Fields in Kingston, where the latter was running a house in Albany Avenue. The witness said that his superior was in very poor health, and told him that he intended to start immediately for Southern California. This was all Carpenter knew about Fields's whereabouts, and he declared that the subject of the insurance investigation and the desire that Fields should testify was not discussed by them.

The Testimony.

Mr. Hughes handed the witness a voucher dated Oct. 17, 1904, showing the receipt of $150 paid for "legal services," recommended for payment by Fields, approved for payment by Vice President Grannis of the company, and ordered paid by the Committee on Expenditures on Oct. 26 of that year.

"Did you get that money from the Mutual Life?" Mr. Hughes demanded.

"I did," was the reply.

"What occasion had you to get money from the Mutual Life for legal expenses?"

"That money," said Mr. Carpenter, "was received by me for expenses connected with the house maintained in Albany."

Q.—What is the house maintained at Albany? A.—The street address?

Q.—Yes—give the street address. A.—That is 610 Madison Avenue.

Q.—How long has that house been maintained at Albany? A.—That house has been maintained by us the last four years.

Q.—When you say "by us," to whom do you refer? A.—I refer to the company.

Q.—In what way has the Mutual Life maintained it? A.—Mr. Fields directed me to take a lease of the house.

The witness said that he took the lease of the house in his own name four years ago, and had renewed it from year to year at a rental of $900. Prior to the renting of the Madison Avenue house he said the Mutual had a house at 28 Willett Street for one year, a house in Lock Street for the year before that, a house at 16 Dove Street year before that, the Lock Street house year before that, and the house at 25 Lancaster Street a year further back.

Mr. Hughes wanted to know how long the company had maintained the house at Albany, and his witness said that to his knowledge there had been one ever since the Winter of 1895, when he first went to the State capital with Fields. The money or household expenses which he had handled he said he got from Fields, who in turn drew it from the Mutual.

The Mutual's House Servants.

Mr. Hughes wanted to know who constituted the household. The witness replied that, in addition to Fields and himself, there was a butler, whose name was Butler; a caretaker named Melaney, Melaney's wife, his wife's sister, who was the cook, and two Melaney children. Melaney turned out subsequently to be the man who signed several of the "legal service" vouchers which have been introduced in evidence. Carpenter testified that these payments were made for expenses connected with the maintenance of the house. Melaney, he said, remained in Albany all the year, receiving $900 a year; so far as he knew, Melaney had no duties in this city.

Mr. Carpenter said that he did not know how the butler was paid, but declared that he handled the money paid to Melaney's wife's sister, the cook, which was always obtained through Fields from the Mutual and charged to "legal expenses." Melaney, he added, purchased the supplies and paid the bills for them, receiving his money through Carpenter. He figured that the total expense of the Albany house was approximately $2,500 a year.

Mr. Hughes then examined the witness, who had previously testified that he had no specific duties except such as Fields might assign to him, as to the services which he performed in Albany while the Legislature was in session. Mr. Carpenter said that he attended every session of the Legislature, acquainted himself with the bills introduced in both houses, kept the file of bills in the Albany house and in New York, and talked over the character of bills pending with his chief.

Met Legislators Regularly.

Q.—Did you meet any members of the Legislature? A.—Possibly, undoubtedly.

Q.—Didn't you regularly? A.—Yes.

Q.—And also members of the Insurance Committee? A.—Yes.

Q.—And other persons interested in legislation? A.—Undoubtedly.

Q.—Did you meet Andrew Hamilton from time to time? A.—I met Andrew Hamilton.

Q.—You know him very well? A.—No, Sir, I don't; I only had a speaking acquaintance with him.

Q.—Did you meet Mr. Butler? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did he have anything to do with insurance matters there? A.—Not to my knowledge. I knew he was interested in insurance.

Q.—Did you know he represented any company? A.—No.

Q.—Or had anything to do with looking after the management of legislation? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Who were among the most frequent visitors at this house maintained by the company in Albany? A.—I should say there were very few visitors.

Q.—Did you ever see Eugene Wood there? A.—I cannot recall; possibly I have.

Q.—You know there is no doubt about it? A.—He may have called; I may say that most of my time was spent out of the house.

Q.—Were you there in the evenings? A.—Part of the evening.

Q.—Did you ever see Mr. Dinkelspiel at the house? A.—I may have.

Q.—You did see him at the house? A.—Possibly I did.

Q.—Don't you know that you met Mr. Wood and Mr. Dinkelspiel there a great deal of the time? A.—No, Sir.

"Did you ever see Mr. McClelland at the house?" Mr. Hughes asked.

McClelland There a Year.

The witness said that he had, and that the former Senator from Westchester was "a member of the household" one year. This was in 1903, he continued, in which year Mr. McClelland was not only in the Senate, but was also on the Insurance Committee.

"Did he ever pay for his share to the support of the house?" asked Mr. Hughes.

"I don't know," said the witness. "I never heard of it."

"He didn't pay you?"

"No, Sir."

"You paid for all the supplies of the household?"

"Yes, Sir."

"And you never received any money from him?"

"No, Sir."

"On his behalf?"

"No, Sir, but I don't know as to that. I received the money from Mr. Fields."

Mr. Carpenter said that Mr. Fields did not indicate whether any money he ever gave him was on Mr. McClelland's behalf. He added that ex-Senator Graney had been a member of the household for one year while he was Senator, and for one while he was Assemblyman.

"Did you ever see Senator McCarren there?"

Old Friends of Fields.

"No, Sir," was the reply, and then the witness explained that the probable reason for Messrs. McClelland and Graney being members of the Mutual's Albany household were that they were old-time neighbors of A. C. Fields in Dobbs Ferry.

Q.—Were they on the Insurance Committee when they were members of the Legislature? A.—I don't recall now the make-up of these committees; I will have to refresh my memory on that.

Q.—Well, if you will think for a moment—go back to 1903. A.—Mr. McClelland was a member of the committee in 1903.

Q.—And during that time was living in this house? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Was the same true of Mr. Graney? A.—As far as I can recall, I think he was a member of the Committee on Insurance.

The witness said that he did not recall having seen any of the members of the Insurance Committee except those named at the Mutual's house. He declared that he had never seen any of the officers of the company there or had talked to them about the house, and did not know whether any of them was aware that a house was being maintained. He denied that he ever paid out any money in connection with legislative matters or that he knew of any such money being paid by Fields to any one in Albany—Mr. Buckley, Eugene Wood, or Moe Dinkelspiel.

Mr. Carpenter declared that never to his knowledge had members of the Legislature been entertained by Mr. Fields at the house at dinner parties or otherwise, and he did not remember having seen any legislators drop in at the house to talk matters over. He wasn't sure whether he had ever seen Andrew Hamilton there, but he recalled a visit from E. L. Short, the Mutual's solicitor, while the Brackett bill to repeal Section 56 of the insurance law was under discussion last Winter.

Mr. Hughes asked the witness whether he had ever attended National Conventions of the great political parties with A. C. Fields. He said he had not, and had never arranged for the house or other quarters at such times. Mr. Carpenter said he once went, however, to a State Convention in Buffalo, which Fields attended as a member of the State Committee from his district. Carpenter declared that he went along "as a companion."

Cunningham's Duties.

John J. Cunningham of Dobbs Ferry was put on the witness stand in the early part of the day, and surprised the committee and its counsel by saying that before he became an examiner for the State Insurance Department he was in the livery business in Dobbs Ferry as manager of the stable in which Fields was interested. This employment lasted from 1888 to 1893, when, Cunningham said, he went to Albany with Fields.

"What did you do there?" asked Mr. Hughes.

"I did what I was told," was the reply.

"What were you told?"

"I can't remember."

"What were your duties?"

"I didn't do anything in particular."

"Can't you remember anything you did?"

"My duties were in the house that Mr. Fields had."

"Who else was in the house?"

"I couldn't say."

"Were you Mr. Fields's secretary?"

"If you want to put it that way."

In a long series of questions Mr. Hughes drew from the witness a statement that he had handled money for Fields only when Fields was building his Dobbs Ferry house, and that Fields had houses at Nyack and Ocean Grove, N. J., that the witness knew about. He denied, however, that he had ever done any work for Fields in connection with Westchester politics.

Mr. Hughes then came down to the present time, asking the witness when he had last seen Fields. Cunningham said that it was in the latter part of August in the Mutual Life Building.

"How did you happen to see him?" demanded Mr. Hughes.

"I just dropped in."

"Did you go to see him?"

"No, I was just down that way."

"Were you in the supply department of the Mutual Life very often?"

"More or less."

"What business had you to go there frequently?"

"No business in particular," said the witness, "except that I had known Mr. Fields."

Cunningham said that he knew Mr. Norris, who was Mr. Fields's assistant in the supply department, very slightly, and knew Lysander Lawrence and Edgar W. Rogers of the Lawrence firm no better. He added that when time was heavy on his hands, and he was in the vicinity of the Mutual building, he just dropped in to see Mr. Fields. Of his duties as an examiner of the State Insurance Department, he said that he had once made an examination for the New York Life. He was excused after that, but was told to remain under subpoena.

The Lawrence Business.

Mr. Hughes spent a good part of the day yesterday in keeping the committee in the vicinity of the Lawrence business and the supply department of the Mutual Life. He early asked Mr. McCurdy about vouchers for legal services signed in some instances by Edgar W. Rogers of the Lawrence store, another by W. E. Melaney of the house at Albany, and still another by L. R. Murray, whose identity has not yet been disclosed. Mr. McCurdy said that he didn't know about any of it.

The first light on the identity of George J. Plunkett came in the testimony of Louis S. Ballard, a clerk for Lawrence & Co., who was also Secretary of the Globe Printing Company, of which Lysander Lawrence is Treasurer and Edgar W. Rogers Secretary. Ballard said that Mr. Lawrence was the beneficial owner of all the $10,000 stock of the Globe Company, and that 90 out of the 100 shares stood in Lawrence's name.

"Is there a George Plunkett in your office?" asked Mr. Hughes.

"Yes," replied the witness, "he is one of the boys there."

"What does he do?"

"He attends to the telephone, and so on."

"How old is he?"

"Oh, he is a young boy."

"Have you ever known of Plunkett or Mr. Rogers getting any money from A. C. Fields?"

"I have not," was the reply.

Mr. Hughes tried to find out what Ballard did in the Lawrence firm and particularly what he did regarding orders that came from the Mutual.

"Well," remarked the witness, "if they want a box of pens I send them up. My duties are to keep supplies and stationery in stock. I get in the diaries that we sell at retail around Christmas time and other things of that kind."

Mr. Hughes tried to press the witness further about orders from the Mutual, but Ballard confessed that he was too "rattled" to tell much about anything. Then Mr. Hughes called young Plunkett to the stand.

Plunkett is a lad of perhaps 19 or 20, and was pretty nervous when he was under examination. He said that he lived in Brooklyn, and had been a telephone operator for Lawrence & Co. for three years. Mr. Hughes showed him the voucher indicating a payment of $901.15 to George Plunkett for legal expenses on Feb. 20, 1905.

"Did you write that signature?" Mr. Hughes asked.

The boy looked it over and then he replied:

Denies Signing It.

"No, Sir. I sign my name George J. Plunkett."

Mr. Hughes handed him pen, ink, and paper, and told him to write his name. He did, and when the signature had been obtained Mr. Hughes compared it with another which the lad had made for Mr. Stanchfield and with the signature on the voucher. The three were almost exactly alike in the case of the last name, even to the slant of the letters and the curves in the capital "P," but in the first name the initial "G" was made differently in the two admitted signatures from what it was in the voucher, and the "e's" were different. Mr. Hughes and his associates, Messrs. McKeen and Fleming, held a conference for five minutes or more with members of the committee, and then Mr. Hughes again confronted the boy on the witness stand.

"Look again," he said, "and swear that you did not write that, if you can."

Young Plunkett shook his head. "That looks like my signature," he replied, "but it isn't. I write my name George J. Plunkett."

"Didn't you write that name on the voucher?"

"Not to my knowledge," said Plunkett.

"Ever sign anything like that?"

"Only when I sign as a witness for proxies."

The boy said that he had made collections for Mr. Lawrence, but never recalled getting any money from A. C. Fields, and could not recall signing any papers except the proxies of which he spoke.

"Did anybody talk to you about your testimony?" Mr. Hughes asked.

"Yes," said the boy, "Mr. Rogers told me I should probably be a witness."

"What did he say?"

"He asked me if I ever signed a paper for any one in the Mutual."

"What did you tell him?"

"I told him that I had not."

"What else did he tell you?"

"He said that they had a voucher with my signature on it, and wanted to know if I had signed it. I told him that I had not, to my knowledge."

Fields's Mail Held for Him.

Charles A. Norris, who has been running the Mutual's supply department since A. C. Fields went away, was called to the stand next, and said that he had not seen Mr. Fields since the first of September, did not know where Mr. Fields was, and didn't know anyone in the Mutual that did know. Mail for Mr. Fields was being held at his office, Mr. Norris said.

Mr. Norris said that he had never had anything to do with legislative matters in connection with Mr. Fields, and he knew very little about the organization of Lysander W. Lawrence & Co. or of the Globe Printing Company, although he had given orders for supplies there. Sometimes, Mr. Norris said, he signed Fields's name to vouchers in recommending payments, but never for legal expenses. Mr. Norris declared that he did not know the boy Plunkett, and could throw no light on the voucher that the boy denied signing. He had just as little information about the Globe Printing Company, so Mr. Hughes, after instructing the witness to produce the book showing orders of stationery and supplies from Lawrence & Co., let the witness go and called Edgar W. Rogers.

After Rogers was sworn his counsel, John B. Stanchfield, rose and said to the committee:

"I wish to state at the outset that Mr. Rogers is a citizen of New Jersey, with an office in New York; that he holds no office in the Mutual Life Insurance Company, and is not employed by that company in any way. While he desires to aid the committee, I wish it understood that he does not waive the right to contest the jurisdiction of the committee or its power to inquire into his private business affairs. He is a merchant and as such has rights that the committee must respect."

"What is your business?" was the first question Mr. Hughes asked.

"I am a clerk."

"I thought Mr. Stanchfield said you were a merchant."

The witness stammered for a moment, and then turned to his counsel. Mr. Stanchfield said that he did not intend to split hairs over the difference between a clerk and a merchant.

Mr. Rogers Said "No" Often.

Looking very much relieved Mr. Rogers settled down deep in his chair, crossed his legs, tilted his pointed beard up at Mr. Hughes, squinted his eyes until the lids nearly met, and then prepared for one of the most comprehensive sets of negative answers that the investigating committee had met with. He said, in the first place, that his duties as the President of the Globe Printing Company were purely nominal, and that Mr. Lawrence was pretty much the whole concern.

"What do you do for Mr. Lawrence?" Mr. Hughes wanted to know.

"I have no specific duties," said the witness; "just a general oversight of the business."

Mr. Hughes, after getting the admission that the witness did know George Plunkett, showed him the voucher for $901.15 that Plunkett had already denied.

"Have you seen Plunkett ever write his name?" Mr. Hughes demanded.

"I have," was the reply.

"Is that his signature?"

"Well, now," said Mr. Rogers, settling even deeper in his chair, "that looks like his signature, but I really wouldn't like to say that it was."

"Have you any doubt of it?" persisted Mr. Hughes.

"I wouldn't want to say," repeated the witness. "It looks like his signature. That's all."

"Do you know anything about that $901.15?"

"No."

"Did you ever hear of Plunkett's receiving money from the Mutual?"

"No."

"Or rendering service to the Mutual?"

"No."

Mr. Hughes showed the witness a voucher dated Nov. 7, 1902, for $1,667.50. It bore the signature of Edgar W. Rogers. The witness admitted that the signature was his.

"Did you get that money?" Mr. Hughes inquired.

"I presume I must have."

"From whom?"

"I have no recollection."

"What did you do with it?"

"I don't remember."

"Do you ever remember receiving other money?"

"No."

"So this is an exception?"

"Yes."

"Well, what did they make this exception for?"

"I don't remember."

"Did you ever see A. C. Fields about money?"

"I don't remember of it."

"Then you received this money without talking to Fields?"

"Probably."

"Don't Remember," Says Rogers.

"Whom did you talk to about it?"

"I don't remember."

"Is it possible that this voucher should be put through without your knowing that you had signed it?"

"Probably not. That is three years ago, and really, Mr. Hughes, I don't recall the circumstances."

"Have you any intimate friends among the lawyers of the Mutual?"

"No."

"Does your business throw you into the society of lawyers?"

"No; I should say not."

"Well then, how did you come to receive this money for legal expenses?"

"I can't remember anything about it, Mr. Hughes."

The witness said that he saw Mr. Lawrence three or four days ago at his country place in Greenwich and had some talk with him, but he did not know how soon Mr. Lawrence might be expected in New York.

The exchange of compliments by Mr. Beck, Mr. Hughes, and Chairman Armstrong of the committee came after Mr. Hughes had started to ask Mr. McCurdy about his apartments in the Hotel Grosvenor at Tenth Street and Fifth Avenue, which the Mutual owned. Mr. McCurdy said that he had occupied an apartment there for some years from time to time, and that Mr. Granniss, one of the Vice Presidents of the Mutual, had passed a few weeks there a Summer or two ago, and that Mr. Thébaud, his son-in-law, had had two rooms for some little time. Mr. Hughes started to leave the subject for the time when Mr. Beck interrupted to say that he didn't think it was fair to the witness to shift an examination without asking him how much he paid for his accommodation. Mr. Hughes said that it had been his intention to get at this from some other witness who might have the exact figures, but that he would be pleased to have Mr. McCurdy state the fact if he was familiar with it.

Ugly Imputations, Says Beck.

This colloquy ensued:

Mr. Beck—Without intending to do so, no doubt, Mr. Hughes, you frequently lead up to a point that allows the newspapers to put in an ugly imputation against Mr. McCurdy, and then you stop the inquiry; and that, I do not think, is entirely fair to Mr. McCurdy, especially when, if all the facts were brought out, it would be impossible for any one to cast a reflection upon him.

Mr. Hughes—I have tried to give Mr. McCurdy an abundant opportunity to tell anything and everything he knows about this business, and if he does not realize this fact I do not know what I can tell him further.

Mr. Beck—You are asking him about a thousand things, some of which took place a quarter of a century ago, and after leading up to a point where a wrong imputation may be cast, frequently you drop your line of examination on that particular point and leave Mr. McCurdy in a false position, and then you take up another line of inquiry and start another matter, and the committee and counsel lose sight entirely of the fact to which you have previously led.

Chairman Armstrong—It has occurred to this committee that both counsel and the witness are entitled to make the fullest and best possible suggestions, so that there may be no divergence from a fair and full examination of the subjects which we are here to examine. This witness justifies his attitude, which was such by his own declaration of his purpose in attempting to answer or in stating how much he would answer the inquiries made as to cause him to believe that this committee was an inquisition and was conducting an unfair inquiry, and your remarks, Mr. Beck, are to the same effect. This committee are here to make a fair and honest inquiry into the facts concerning the business and affairs of life insurance companies, and the witnesses and counsel that appear before the committee will have just the position before the committee that they themselves create for themselves.

At any time during this inquiry we would be glad to have you make suggestions to Mr. Hughes, and we would prefer that you make such suggestions so as not to in any way interrupt the proceedings when you think that all the facts which are pertinent to this inquiry are not being brought out or are not being brought out in the sequence which you think proper. But the committee would suggest that you do not directly make these suggestions and would be much more pleased if you would make them directly to Mr. Hughes. And this is the committee's attitude, because the committee knows that counsel is sometimes anxious to ask questions for the very fact you suggest. We want to be fair.

Want to be Fair.

We do not desire that there be any obstruction to the inquiry. We want to be fair, but we want the men who appear here as witnesses and counsel to be fair with us. If you have any suggestion to make, make it to Mr. Hughes privately. If at any time you do not think he is treating you fairly the committee will protect you or any one under your charge and see that you have the fairest kind of treatment; although I do not think you will ever have to appeal to us.

Mr. Beck—I have not intended at all to impute to the committee that its treatment of Mr. McCurdy has been unfair, or its treatment of any witness at all. I would also like to say in connection with the remark I just made that neither Mr. McCurdy nor any other witness of the Mutual Life Insurance Company has at any time shown any disposition to delay or evade testifying to any fact of which the witness has been competent to speak. Mr. McCurdy's repeated refusals to answer questions have involved technical possibilities which, it seems to me, would naturally fall within his rights as a witness.

I want to say that I do not impute to Mr. Hughes any intention to be unfair, but I do say that the net result is quite as unfair to the witness as if it was Mr. Hughes's intention that it should be unfair, when he develops an inquiry which gives a clue to unwarranted newspaper attacks upon a man of principle, an unblemished reputation in the community, for him to drop the inquiry at such a point. To illustrate: A few days ago a line of inquiry was developed to show a very close intimacy between the firm of Lawrence & Co. and the supply department. And when I asked whether any officer of the Mutual Life Insurance Company and Lawrence were interested together, and asked Mr. Hughes to ask that question, he said he would take it up at another time.

Mr. Hughes—I think that question was asked at once.

Mr. Beck—Subsequently you asked the question of Mr. McCurdy. Now, let us be fair.

Armstrong Again.

The Chairman—I want you to understand that this committee is here to build up and not to tear down, and in order to do that it is necessary to build up and first get a firm foundation; it is the purpose of the committee to build up and make life insurance safer, and the only way we can do that is by the cordial assistance of you gentlemen, who know much more than we can ever hope to learn about it, and it is from you that we will have to obtain the fullest knowledge and we want you to help us and give us all the information possible that will help us and the least possible information that will not help us. In other words, we do not want to waste time over unimportant details. Mr. Hughes and Mr. McKeen will see you privately and agree with you on what is helpful, and I do not believe that it will ever be necessary for you to take an appeal to the committee itself.

Mr. Beck—I think Mr. Hughes will bear me out when I say that no request that he has made of counsel for the Mutual Life Insurance Company for any information whatever has been ignored. We have placed the books and papers and everything belonging to the Mutual subject to his examination, and we intend to continue to do so, and at all times his requests for information will be cheerfully honored.

Hughes's Speech Applauded.

Mr. Hughes took a hand at this point.

"The record," he said, "is more eloquent than anything that I can possibly say of the extreme courtesy and fairness with which this examination has been conducted. If I have erred at all in my duty to the committee it has been by my showing courtesies on many different occasions when the circumstances justified other measures—in going out of my way to avoid making suggestions which were quite obvious and which may have been construed as indicating a desire on my part to make capital at the expense of the witnesses. I have again and again avoided my own natural inclination to make retorts which, I think, would have been entirely justified out of my desire, naturally, and not a desire to honestly discredit the fairness of this investigation. The witness who gets himself into a false position has himself only to blame. Every one everywhere knows that he will ever be treated as he deserves to be treated, and only as he deserves to be treated, and evasion will always be held out to the contempt it has always received."

There was an outburst of applause at this, which Chairman Armstrong did not attempt to suppress for a minute or two.

Then President McCurdy, rising and stepping to the front of the witness stand, said:

"Mr. Chairman, msy I avail myself of the opportunity to express my entire concurrence in the remarks made by Mr. Hughes, and to say that particularly those remarks which he has made referring to his own conduct of the case, his self-restraint imposed on himself, by himself, on various occasions, I have noted with much admiration, not to say gratitude. These remarks I entirely concur in, and I think entirely justify Mr. Hughes's course in the examination of the witnesses, so far as I have observed. I also concur in his views generally thoroughly, and I hope the episode may now be considered as terminated."

Mr. Beck Says Little More.

Mr. Beck sank back in his chair as Mr. McCurdy finished, and had little else to say in the session. He did volunteer the information, however, when Mr. Hughes brought up the subject of the coupons from the magazine advertisements that these were referred to the firm of C. H. Raymond & Co. in so far as they came from the metropolitan district and for two reasons: Because any other course would disorganize the agency system, and because it was essential that an agent should handle the applications. Senator Riordan asked if the advertising expenses were charged up to the company. Mr. Beck said he thought they were.

Mr. Hughes then went back to the question of President McCurdy's apartments in the Grosvenor. The Mutual's President said that he paid at the rate of $300 a month for the rooms, having instructed the manager to charge him more than he charged any one else in the hotel so that no one could say that the President of the Mutual Life was getting a better rate than anybody else.

"If I were not inclined to be amused at it," he continued, "I would consider it an aspersion on my personal dignity to assume in any way that I would or could make use of an opportunity of that kind for petty pilfering. I think the committee will understand readily that I could not afford to have any injurious suspicions found or aspersions made—it would be such a contemptible piece of action on my part if I did not pay as much as anybody else, taking advantage of my position as President of the company to get food and lodging at a lower price than other people."

Mr. Hughes then went at length into the agency work. Louis A. Thébaud gave up the executive special department to enter the firm of Raymond & Co. Mr. Hughes asked if, when Mr. Thébaud made this change, that department of the metropolitan district, at least in writing large risks independently of the general agency, had been abandoned. Mr. McCurdy said that the executive special department was no longer in existence, but he did not remember whether it had gone out of existence before Mr. Thébaud had entered the firm of Raymond & Co. Neither would he say whether or not at that time agents in the metropolitan district were prohibited from writing any interests except through Raymond & Co.'s office.

No $12,000 Rugs, Says McCurdy.

Having made relatively little progress in this direction, Mr. Hughes called the attention of the witness to the statement that there had been great extravagance in fitting up his office. Mr. McCurdy replied that he had seen a variety of "nonsensical statements" in the newspapers. One, he said, was that he sat in a $2,000 chair on a $12,000 rug. He said that if anybody could find in the offices of the Mutual a rug or a mat of any size that cost within one-third of $12,000 he would have it produced at the hearing. In his own private office, he said, there were two or three "small rugs," perhaps 12 or 15 feet square; what they cost he did not know. He said he would answer the criticism about the $2,000 desk chair in the same way.

Then Mr. McCurdy added that one of the best advertising booklets that the company ever got out contained photographs of every room in the Mutual Life Building.

"You can never tell what kind of an argument is going to strike an applicant," he continued, "and the fact that the company is creditably large in a dignified way and that the offices are spacious and proper—elegant, if you choose to put it so—was received by the policy holders at large and by new applicants with approbation, and they were interested in the whole subject."

Mr. McCurdy said in answer to further questions that the company had three or four private elevators for the use of its employes, and that three of them opened into a room outside his office, but were not for his exclusive use.

Mr. Hughes undertook to question Mr. McCurdy to some extent about the loans made by the Mutual Life, some of which had continued at 2 and 2½ per cent. for extended periods. The Mutual's President, however, passed the subject up to the Treasurer and the employes of the loan department, so that Mr. Hughes took up the National Bank of Commerce deal, eliciting, first, that Mr. McCurdy was the owner of 1,132 shares in the present bank. Mr. McCurdy said he was originally a stockholder in the National Union Bank, in which the Mutual Life had considerable interest. This was absorbed by the Bank of Commerce, the capital of which was increased from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000, while that of the National Union was raised from $1,000,000 to $5,000,000 through a call on the stockholders. Mr. McCurdy said that quite independently from this transaction he was invited to take some stock in the Hide and Leather Bank when its capital was increased from $500,000 to $5,000,000 to acquire the stock of the Western National Bank. The consolidated institution was thereafter called the National Bank of the United States.

The Payment to Hendrix.

Mr. Hughes inquired what payment if any was made to the late Joseph C. Hendrix, who was President of the old National Bank of Commerce when he was retired in the consolidation resulting in the present bank of that name. The witness said he had heard it was $200,000, and he explained it by saying that the money was paid "to a retiring President, who voluntarily accepted a situation when the Directors thought it would be unfair to take away an opportunity of continuing to earn a living to qualify himself for which he devoted many years of his life."

Mr. McCurdy denied that the Mutual had paid any of this money. It has been said by the friends of Mr. Hendrix that his death was hastened by his elimination in the formation of the National Bank of Commerce.

Mr. Hughes asked his witness what agreement there might have been between the Equitable and the Mutual Life regarding the Bank of Commerce consolidation. Mr. McCurdy said there was no agreement, and he went into quite a long statement to explain why the Mutual Life became so largely interested in the Bank of Commerce and other subsidiary institutions of a banking character. His explanation was on the same lines as that made by Treasurer Cromwell of the Mutual. It was that with the very large increase of assets there came a demand for banking facilities which the company's previous establishment did not supply; that for this reason the Mutual went into the Bank of Commerce, the Guarantee Trust Company, the United States Mortgage and Trust Company, and other institutions seeking to build them up and profit not only by the increased facilities for handling the business, but by their earnings on their capital stock. Mr. Hughes had Mr. McCurdy testify that in addition to the 1,132 shares which he owns in the Bank of Commerce he had 200 shares in the Guarantee Trust and 200 in the United States Mortgage and Trust, both of which institutions paid 20 per cent. dividends, while the Bank of Commerce paid 8 per cent. Mr. McCurdy said that he had originally 300 shares in each of the trust companies mentioned, but had disposed of 100 shares of each, holding at a price very much higher than what he paid. His present income from these three stocks alone, it would appear, is $9,056 a year from the Bank of Commerce stock and $4,000 a year each from the blocks of 200 shares in the Guarantee Trust and United States Mortgage and Trust—or a total of $17,056. Mr. Hughes will inquire further to-day about Mr. McCurdy's stock holdings in other institutions in which the Mutual is interested.

The other witness yesterday was Frank Jordan, son of Thomas D. Jordan, who was formerly controller of the Equitable Life and has not been heard of since the investigating committee has announced its desire that he should appear as a witness. Frank Jordan said that he last saw his father at his father's country home in Englewood, on Labor Day. He added that on the following day his father and mother both went away, he knew not where. He said he had not heard from them, had made no effort to find them, and did not know their whereabouts or whether they were alive or dead.

The committee adjourned until 10:30 this morning.

DENIAL BY M'CLELLAND.

Never Got Insurance Money Except for Legal Services.

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 18.—Charles P. McClelland, formerly State Senator in New York and now a United States General Appraiser, is in this city on customs business. When he saw the report of the investigation of the affairs of the Mutual Life Insurance Company, Mr. McClelland became very indignant. According to the report he received on Dec. 7, 1900, $689.32; on Jan. 8, 1901, $2,700; on April 20, $1,458; on Oct. 7, $1,000; on Feb. 14, 1902, $750; on March 30, $2,350.

"I never received a cent from the Mutual Life nor any other life insurance company while I was State Senator," Mr. McClelland said. "I served that company as an attorney, and any money which I received was in payment for legal services. I never was asked to influence legislation for any insurance company, and certainly was never paid for any such services. I have just arrived here from Cleveland, and this is the first I have heard of any such vouchers being shown in the insurance investigation. Any vouchers which were paid to me came to me in payment for my work as attorney and nothing more.

"I have not been asked to appear in the matter. If I am I shall not dodge any questions they want to ask. There is nothing in my connection with the Mutual of which either the company or I has any cause to be ashamed. I am not running away from the investigation, and if there is anything I can do to help it, I am ready, but I don't like to be dragged in as if I were a lobbyist or were bribed myself, neither of which needs denial from me."

Vandiver Will Give a Hearing.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Oct. 18.—State Superintendent of Insurance Vandiver announced to-day that on Oct. 25 he will give a hearing here to attorneys for the New York Life Insurance Company regarding his proposed action to stop the company from doing business in the State.

THINK HE'S THE DYNAMITER.

Alleged "Black Hand" Blackmailer Caught by the Police.

Munzio Gerbase, who says he lives at 13 Stanton Street, the scene of the dynamite explosion early on Tuesday, was arrested last night by Detective Sergeant Petrosino and locked up in Police Headquarters, charged with sending threatening letters through the mail. The prisoner was identified by Carmello de Giacono, who has a barber's shop at 54 West Third Street.

About a month ago de Giacono received a letter signed "The Black Hand," which announced that, if the barber did not make up his mind to hand over $500 his life would not be worth a pinch of salt, his shop would be dynamited, and he and his entire family and all his relatives would be exterminated. The barber treated the letter as a joke.

Two weeks later a stranger walked into his shop in West Third Street and asked to see the boss in private.

"I represent the Black Hand," said the stranger, "and I have come to you on a very important matter. You see, we've had several meetings in the last two weeks and all of the members are unanimous for murder. Now, they have been wrangling about how you shall go to your death. Some want to stab you, others would stab you, but most are in favor of blowing you and your shop up with dynamite. However, I prevailed on them to give you time, feeling that you have sense enough to give up, say, $500, to have your life spared. If you refuse there is nothing more for me to do but to report your decision to the band."

De Giacono excused himself for a minute, saying he would get the money immediately. Instead he told his workmen and the bootblack in the shop why the stranger had called. Then all hands thrashed the "Black Hand" agent. They kicked him about the room, pounding and pummeling him at will. Finally the barber thought of sending for a policeman, but before he had a chance the visitor managed to escape into West Broadway.

The barber went to Police Headquarters and told his story to Detective Sergeant Petrosino, who with another detective arrested Gerbase last night in an Elizabeth Street restaurant.

The prisoner says he was in a saloon in Grand Etreet until after 3 o'clock on Tuesday morning, when the explosion occurred.

"Didn't you notice anything unusual about the house you live in when you got home?" he was asked.

He said he didn't.

AN EAST SIDE SCHOOL FOR ILL-USED BOYS

The Backward to be Taken in Hand for Special Instruction.

SCHOOL BOARD'S EXPERIMENT

No. 120 Starts Off with 135 Pupils—It's Not a Truant School, the Principal Says.

In the heart of the lower east side a special school was opened yesterday for the instruction of children who have never had "a fair show"—children intimate with abuse and strangers to kindness—juvenile "under dogs." To persons unacquainted with conditions on the lower east side the need of such a school is not apparent, but to teachers, Settlement workers, and others whose work brings them in daily contact with the children of the district the new school marks the beginning of an epoch in which it is believed truancy will decrease and juvenile crime will be checked if not eliminated.

The new school, which is in Public School No. 120, at 187 Broome Street, has been organized primarily for the use of backward boys who have been driven to truancy by the taunts of their classmates. It, however, will not be known as a truant school. Miss Olive Jones, its Principal, desires that this point be emphasized.

"To call this a truant school," she said, "will kill all the good that we have planned. No boy will voluntarily attend such a school. Lots of boys who were to have started in here this morning balked when they heard it was a truant school. The newspapers, I fear, have created this misapprehension. This is not a truant school.

"The Board of Education organized this school to help backward boys—boys between thirteen and fourteen years old—who have been compelled to stay in classes with little fellows. The little ones naturally make fun of them, and to avoid the ridicule the big fellows play truant.

"Here things will be different. The boys in each class will be of practically the same age, and they will have equal opportunities to learn. This they have never had. No one has wanted them. They have been driven from home and driven from school. No. 120 will be a haven for them—a place where they can regain what they have lost, and catch up with their more fortunate companions."

The greater part of yesterday was spent by Miss Jones and her teaching staff in organizing classes. The school is an old one and contains only nine classrooms. As only fifteen pupils will be allowed in a class, (the individual instruction planned making larger classes inadvisable,) the entire school will only accommodate 135 boys. If the school proves a success similar institutions will be established by the Board of Education in all the congested districts of the city.

A NEW YORK TIMES reporter visited the school yesterday. The pupils were nearly all boys between 12 and 15 years old. That the boys are anxious to better themselves was evident by the efforts they made to follow their teachers' instructions. This was particularly noticeable in the gymnasium class. There was something pathetic in the clumsy manoeuvres of several of the boys who did not know left from right, and persisted in turning the wrong direction when a command was given. Handkerchiefs were tied on their left arms to set them right.

Miss Julia Richman, the District Superintendent who founded the special school, is confident that the plan will prove a success. Speaking of the advantages of a separate school for backward boys, she said:

"Many a boy, badly trained, and at present an evil influence in the average class of fifty, under the control of a teacher of only average ability, if removed to more favorable surroundings might become a decent lad.

"The boys admitted to No. 120 this week will be made to realize from the start that it is no punishment but a great privilege to attend a school where so much will be done for their benefit. If it is found that any boy in that school fails utterly to respond to its influences he will be sent to the regular truant school. On the other hand, the children now in the truant school whose conduct there is satisfactory will be paroled by me, and before putting them in one of the regular schools they will be tested in No. 120 to see if they have learned sufficient self-control to meet the requirements of an ordinary school."

Associate City Superintendent Meleney, who is at the head of the Truancy Department of the Board of Education, is also enthusiastic over the new plan. He thinks it will eventually do away with the truant schools and thus save the city the thousands of dollars that are now spent annually for the board and lodging of inmates in the truant institutions.

Credit Men Applaud Jerome.

The tenth annual meeting of the New York Credit Men's Association and complimentary dinner to Oliver G. Fessenden, President of the National Association of Credit Men, was held last night at the Hotel St. Denis. Malcolm Graham, Jr., referred to District Attorney Jerome in his speech, and the mention of his name brought forth applause.

Your cost system may be crude. Your foreman is a good mechanical man, and your bookkeeper is a good bookkeeper; but somehow the system they have evolved does not satisfy you; there is too much guess work and you feel that accurate costs cannot be obtained by relying on them.
It is to supplement the work of your bookkeeper and foreman that we offer our services. Our experience will help them in establishing methods which are certain.
Will it not be worth while for you to drop us a line?

"Now, let us see. Let us go back for a moment. Four years ago I appealed for the franchise of the people of the City of New York. I appealed then, trusting simply in the plain people of this great city, and I said to them then that if elected, I would be no man's man, that between me and the poor man of this city no district leader would stand. [Applause.] And for four long years the latch string of the District Attorney's office has hung out, and for four long years no man so humble but what he could obtain audience there, and if he had a real wrong he could have a real effort made for its redress. [Tremendous applause and cheers.]

"I started with a staff of men to help me—the same staff practically that I have to-day. Not one of them was a politician, nor was one of them advocated or indorsed by a politician. I sought to obtain and did obtain good men, without knowing, without caring, and without asking what their party was. And for four long years we have had our eyes single to but one thing—the service of the people of the City of New York. [Vociferous applause.]

"During that time the record speaks for itself. Never was there so small a standing calendar; never was there on an average so few men in prison untried; never before in the memory of the oldest inhabitants, though it was a city increasing each year of those four, was there such a speedy disposition of the cases of men charged with crime. And the glory of my office and the discharge of it, if it be entitled to such, has not been in the star cases that have come there; for these, though they have made headlines for newspapers, I care little, but it has been that the poor fellow who had no one to take his part, who stood there accused of crime, found in his prosecutor and his assistants one who defended him to the limit to which his duty would permit. [Applause.]

Could Not Choose But Fight.

"Do you think those four years have been four years on a bed of roses? Do you think that if I had my own choice, if the heart that was put within me would let me choose anything else but to fight for your interests, I would not to-morrow lay down with pleasure the work of that office? Day after day, in the intense strain of it, racked with the misery and sorrow that is brought, your very days filled from early morning till late at night, your very nights not your own—the pleading and intercession of mothers of unfortunates, of the wives, of the children, trying and crying so hard, in the midst of abuse and misunderstanding, to do what was right, standing up unswayed by newspaper clamor here or by pressure there—do you think that for four long years it has been a bed of roses?

"I tell you it has been anything but that. And so far as I am concerned, if the people of this city say to me on the 7th of November, 'We want no more of you,' there will be one heart that will not be sad. If there is any sadness in it, it will only be that he was not worthier to do your work during the past four years than he has been. [Cheers and applause.]

"I am going into no elaborate discussion of my record in that office. That record is open to any one who wants to look at it. To begin with, it is the only great public office in this city that you can go into and in fifteen minutes know what is being done in it. [Applause.] Every day there is hung up there the report from every department, and any citizen can go there and tell, if he can read, in fifteen minutes what is being done. There is no hugger-muggery or anything underground there. [Laughter.] You can tell right away.

"I Have Made Good."

"No one will attack my record. I have made good, if I say it myself. [Great and long-continued applause.] But this fight that is now on is not a question of me; it is not a question of the candidates for the office of District Attorney—no, nor even for the larger offices. I shall have no harsh word to say for any of them. I have nothing to say of those who are running against me for the position of District Attorney. I sometimes could have wished they could have seen their duty a little differently. [Laughter.] But we cannot all agree on these propositions.

"The issue is so transcendent, it is so far beyond me or them, or the Mayors that are to be, for that matter, because the candidates—what are they, whether they are Republican or Democratic; whether they are running for Mayor or whether they are running for District Attorney, or whether they are running for Coroner? They are but puppets—puppets dancing to the strings pulled by the hands of the men with whom my quarrel is. [Applause.]

"And my quarrel is with them, not for myself, but for you, the people. [Applause.] For you, the plain people of this community, and not alone this community, but every community. People come to me and say, 'Yes, the People, the People,—we read about the people in books and they tell us about them, but when you get down to election it is the machine that counts.' That great, profound statesman, David Bennett Hill, told me that himself [laughter]—and he ought to know. [Renewed laughter.]

Has Faith in the Right.

"But I have yet that faith, that childlike, simple faith, if you will, that believes that there is no community in this broad land so debauched that there are not a majority and a vast majority in it that responds to the true, the right, the decent thing—evermore. [Applause.] And so the real issue, I take it, is just what I tried to make it—what I tried to make it in a little declaration that I made in August.

"I said then that it seemed to me that one of the greatest evils of the present time is that small groups of men have, and not infrequently a single man has, obtained control of the executive machinery of party organizations and nominating conventions and stands between the public servant and the voters. The result is that one in public office usually has to choose between a termination of his public career and subserviency to such a man or group of men.

"The public officer, as a consequence, feels no responsibility to the people, but only to those who can secure for him a return to office. In the exercise of their power such men and groups of men are wholly selfish and entirely irresponsible, and not infrequently corrupt. But I do not purpose to remain in office by the grace of any man or group of men such as I have indicated. [Applause.]

"That is the issue which I made or sought to make as early as August of this year; and it is not necessary to assume my understanding or agreement of the bosses to down me or to keep me off their ticket. Why should they have an understanding or agreement? Why should the man of whom I said that no dishonest dollar ever touched his fingers and go away need it? [Applause.] Why should he not agree with the man from Good Ground, whose growth in political power has synchronized with his growth in this world's goods. [Applause.]

The Handwriting on the Wall.

"What agreement is necessary between such persons explicitly? Cannot they see the handwriting on the wall? Do not they know that if I, standing alone in this great city, with all the difficulties of arousing a vast electorate of 350,000 voters, if I could bid them defiance that the gloom of the past was written on the wall in letters so plain that every one could read? Did they conspire to beat me? Not on your life; it was too apparent what my victory meant; it was too apparent to give me a chance. And so they have done the thing that I sought. Why should they have come to me? Why should they have asked me to stand? Why should any one of them have given me an indorsement? To have indorsed would have been to confess that the things I said are true.

"They did not indorse me because they felt they were driven to it, and so strong did they feel in their own corrupt power that they ordered their own conventions—not your conventions, not the people's conventions, because there are no longer any conventions of the people, [applause,] the little group of grafters who control the executive machinery of nominating conventions—they ordered their conventions that it must not be, and that put me on the very platform that I had sought. They said I had said bitter things of them. I had. [Laughter and applause.] I tried my best to say bitter things, and they said: 'Oh, he is an irresponsible person; we won't challenge him.'

"I am irresponsible in that I am poor. I am willing to be a protégé of statesmen, but not the hired man of capitalists. [Applause.] I am irresponsible in that I am poor, but the great papers of the City of New York who printed these things have not been challenged for these statements yet, so far as I have heard, and their failure to challenge those statements to me seems to be practically a confession.

"Long ago I said, and I have said it frequently, that the corruption of our public life was in a large measure simply the reflex of the corruption of our business life, and the humiliation and the shame and the sorrow that have come to this community in the revelations that we have had in the past few months in regard to business affairs has been the same thing to me. It seems one of the most saddening things of our time. It has proved my hypothesis, it has proved it to a demonstration.

"We have seen the great names in finance and business affairs, names that at one time were synonymous with integrity and honor, go down. We have seen them go down, never again to be thought of, now so low that no one will do them reverence; so low, so beaten down that there is not much more danger of injustice being done them than that the wrath of the people should be turned upon them.

The District Attorney's Duty.

"Now, in such a situation as that there is a duty that rests upon a prosecuting officer, because there were things disclosed that put a duty up to him. [Applause.] But remember what the duty of the prosecuting officer is: It is to do justice in the land, as much as any Judge. It is no part of his duty to be swayed and driven by any newspaper or even by the public clamor. He must bide his time and do his duty and do it right.

"The cheap way would be picking out one of these fellows at this time and indicting him about election time, but there is a man working on this, this man Hughes, honest and brave, [applause,] honest and brave and capable, who is developing what it is necessary to bring before us, all that we should know. Much more important than the punishment of any particular malefactor is a knowledge of how rotten and how deep the rottenness of this goes, and any prosecuting attorney who would move so as to cramp the lines and make it more difficult for him to get what he is daily getting might serve his individual purposes, but certainly would not be serving those of the public. [Applause.] Hughes must not be hampered, but when Hughes is through then justice must be done in the land, and it must fall on those guilty ones who deserve it. [Applause.]

"But the thing in this whole situation, in this political situation that humiliates me, that saddens me, that takes my heart out of me is the moral degradation of it all, that in this country of ours it is nothing in the way that a little more money is stolen; it is bad enough that it is stolen from us publicly; it is awful that it is stolen from the provision that is made for the widow and the orphan; but worse, worse infinitely than taking our money is taking our honor; worse infinitely than the peculations of office, the grafting of contracts, even the robbing of insurance companies, is that steady moral degradation that each day through the temptations of our public life makes us less worthy and a less self-respecting people.

"You say 'Jerome is bitter'—he goes to a foolish extent in this matter. He won't be practical, he is dealing up in the clouds all the time.' I say the clouds are where we want to be. If there ever was a time we needed to be in the clouds, it is when our moral tone is so marred that our political life is debauched as it is at present.

"You take it now right down to practical results. You take it on the Tammany side. There was a Court of Special Sessions. The Court of Special Sessions was a little thing, but was made to be the poor man's court; in one sense it was a court in which the petty offender was brought; it was the court that meant for the average lowly citizen of this town the dignity and majesty of the law—and what happened?

"The time of its Clerk expired. For ten long years he had served that court faithfully, and at the expiration of that term, only this Spring, this Summer, there came a change in the political constitution of the court. Ten long years of service were forgotten, and Murphy of Good Ground summoned the Judges to him, the political complexion having been changed so that his minions could control it, and he says:

"'This man must walk the plank; this man who for ten long years has served it faithfully, honestly, and unrightly, must go.' And the Judges went to him and said: 'Why, Mr. Murphy, we can't get on without this man, we cannot put in Mr. Culkin, whose only training has been that of mixing drinks—we can't put in Mr. Culkin to take the place of this trained clerk.' 'Oh,' said Murphy of Good Ground, who was mixing himself a short time ago, [laughter and catcalls]—says Murphy: 'Oh, one of you fellows can go upstairs there day after day and see him until you get him broken in.'

"He realized. They tell me that is a little thing. Because I broke over the traces and could not stand it, because I was intemperate as usual in my expressions, they told me that was a little thing.

"The soiled, foul hand reaching out and laying itself upon the very court itself! Bringing the Judges of the court, hat in hand, asking that the man be left! But no, they took the ten-year-old servant who had served them faithfully, they took him against whom no complaint lay except that he was not of their political faith, and they put him down.

"I saved him at least that. I saved him at least by my intemperateness, because we made it hot for them. But they degraded him, they humiliated him, by making him deputy in the court that he had served for ten years, while they put the mixer of drinks above him. [Laughter and applause.]

Ingraham Was to Go.

"But that is a small court; that is simply where the poor criminal gets. Let us see about the Supreme Court—where the rich criminal often gets. There was a family by the name of Ingraham; a family of jurists; the father was a great lawyer; the son is one of the ablest on the bench. Many years of service had commended the father, and many years of service had commended the son to the people of this great city, but it was ruled at Good Ground because a certain thing had not been done politically about an appointment some years back that the Judge of the Supreme Court should go.

"Mind you, think what it means. Now, I do not believe there lives any human being in this world more democratic in his instincts that I am. I care not how humble a man's origin was, let it be what the man is, not what he came from. [Applause.] It is not that a man is a bartender, or a car driver, or a carpenter, or anything else that counts with me. It is what the man is, and I use this term drink mixer not so much as a term of reproach, but as showing the eminent qualifications which such a person has to make and unmake Judges of the Supreme Court.

"But it was determined that your Supreme Court should lose the services of this man; and to whom did the Judges go! They passed their resolutions, it is true—that is, to the public. [Laughter.] But of whom was it sought, whose influence was sought to retain this man? Was it the Bar Association? Was it the public at large? And many a Judge of this city, as I know, actually won't deny it—to whom did they go to ask to keep Judge Ingraham on the bench? To whom did these people go to ask you to retain a faithful, judicial servant of the highest ability? Did they go to anybody on God's footstool that was responsible to you? Did they go to anybody that was answerable to the people?

Pleaded with Murphy.

"They went and pleaded with Murphy of Good Ground. [Laughter.] Will you stand this sort of thing? [Cries of 'No,' 'No.'] I have heard the 'Noes,' but it has got to be some stronger voice, some stronger hand than that, I am afraid, to awaken you. I won't stand it, and never have. [Applause.] I won't stand, in my own humble way, with my hat in my hand, to this sort of outfit, and if you realized what it meant, if you felt with me the degradation of it, the humiliation of it, that your Supreme Court should be interceding, not with the people, for the return of its judicial officers who have served it faithfully, but interceding with a coarse, vulgar fellow, whose wealth has synchronized with his growth in political power. [Vociferous applause.]

"It is not that he came up from what he was, in the great struggle of this world, that Charlie Murphy to-day has made himself a power, with all the obstacles that stood in his way—that is to his credit. It is to his credit, and greatly to his credit, that with all the difficulties that life brings in this great city, with all the obstacles that were in his path—that he stands to-day the dictator of who shall be Judges of the Supreme Court is greatly to his credit; but how does it fout up to yours, people of the City of New York? [Great applause and cheers.]

Jerome Had Offended.

"Take my own humble case. It is true I had offended. I had offended, but still, in spite of my offense, my position was really a judicial one, for where a Judge has an opportunity of ingratiating himself once, I had it a thousand times. It is not what the honest District Attorney does in this city, it is what an honest District Attorney prevents being done that is valuable to you. [Great applause.]

"My own position, as I say, is judicial in that sense. No politics should have been allowed to come into it. The leaders of that great organization known as Tammany Hall, three-fourths of them at least, were my personal friends, and would have liked to have seen me renominated. I don't happen to know one of them that was really against me. Some of them are as straight, decent fellows as you ever met in your life, with their own queer notions about certain things. But those fellows have made their way; they are the strong men of their districts, while the bulk of the people are the weaklings.

"It is not by chance that a man like Tom Foley comes up and leads the Assembly district that he does. The fellows down there are not light-handed; it needs a strong man to rule them, and when a man gets to their head he gets there by fighting and keeps himself there by fighting. And the affection and respect and friendship of a large number of Tammany Hall district leaders is one of the assets which I have that I value more than anything else in this community.

"But to come back. The district leaders went to Murphy at Good Ground. I am informed that a number of them kindly solicited my renomination and said a good word for Jerome because he had given them a square deal, and that is all they were looking for.

"Oh, no! The Mayor of this city went; the Mayor of this city, who is the responsible head of the Democratic Party in this city under our theoretical system [laughter]—he went and urged it on Murphy of Good Ground. Oh, no! no! Now, why? There was nothing in the record, there was no conceivable reason that you can find or give, except that I would not do, as I said I would not do; I would not stand with my hat in my hand, either to Benjamin B. Odell or Charlie Murphy and take favors at their hands. [Great applause.]

Murphy Rules with Iron Hand.

"You see the point that I am trying to make is the absolute fact of our political servitude—the fact that we have absolutely no freedom; that the man who rules and rules us with an iron hand to-day in the City of New York is Murphy of Good Ground—and no responsible person to you.

"Turn to the other side—see how it was there; Mr. Ivins—he says that he wanted me on the ticket with him. Oh, no! He is supposed to be the responsible person now under our theory for the Republican side of it. Oh, no, not on your life! [Laughter.]

"Then let me, while I am on that, just show what this degradation means. It is a hard and a sad thing to handle, but it has got to be done. The most tragic, crushing illustration of the depth to which our political subserviency and degradation are putting us is found to-day in the death of that poor lad Armitage Mathews. That shows you what the immorality of politics is, as I shall endeavor to point out to you.

"I knew him years ago, and not so many, either—a blithe boy, cheery, bright, with a good mind and pleasing presence—that kind of a presence that goes so far to make a man friends and to pass him along and aid him in life. And this gang fastened on him. They took him and put him into the dirty politics of this districts. They took him and put him into that dirty political game that you people of New York secmed so little cognizant of until day by day they broke down the moral fibre until the poor lad could not see the difference between right and wrong; and he lies to-day as much murdered as if he were stricken down by a weapon in the hands of those political outcasts.

"And they, not content with bringing the poor boy to that, not content with making what any one that knows it knows to be one of the tragedies of our day—not content with that, they would reach into his grave and draw from it a weapon to strike down the man who but for his self-sacrificing death would have exposed the criminal infamy of that particular gang. [Applause.]

"I am told by many people—among others that old lady of the newspaper world, The New York Tribune, [laughter]—that I could have been on their ticket or some ticket, or a number of tickets, if I had been willing. Yes—if Barkis had been willin' he could have been on a great variety of tickets. But he could not have been on this platform clean, [applause]—and that is where I had rather atand to-night than on all the tickets of New York. [Great applause.]

"They tell me that I am not practical—that you must be practical. Aye, that is it—ever practical, practical, practical; that is what the insurance men were. [Laughter.] They were practical. [Renewed laughter.] I am not practical; I never will be practical in that sense. If I cannot live clean, then I don't want to live at all. As a great writer has said:

"'Sail; come into port, or sail the seas with God!'

Last Fight Seems Long Ago.

"Now, we are beginning a campaign. It seems a thousand years ago to me since the last one. The toil, the rack, the nervous strain of all these four years have made it hard to come again to you. In spite of the kindness of your reception I feel almost humiliated to have to appeal to you. It would seem to me that after what I have tried these long years to do—it would seem to me after what I have given up to serve this people of the City of New York, that I should have to come to appeal to you rather than to have you stand up and say to me, 'We want you to serve us.' [Voices, "We do! We do!"] It seems to me almost like a bumiliation. [Great applause.]

"But I have faith. I believe that the old statement that the voice of the people is the voice of God is much nearer the truth than many of us cynics would believe. I believe with all faith in the people, if they can be but aroused—if they can but see what is involved in the issue that my weak hands have raised; if they can but see that what I am fighting for is for them. If they can only see that what I am fighting for is simply political liberty—is simply for them to say that a public servant who has tried to do his duty and has done it, can come directly to the people and not to have to go to the bosses. [Great applause.] If they will only see that that is what this fight means.

"If they will only see that that is what this fight means and will respond, then truly once again will government of the people, for the people, and by the people come to the land that Lincoln loved and died for."

Mr. Cutting was the first speaker introduced by Chairman John G. Milburn.

Mr. Cutting said in part:

"Four years ago, in the Fusion Conference of 1901, from the absolute insistence of the Citizens' Union, William Travers Jerome was put upon the Fusion ticket for the position of District Attorney. If the organization has done no more for the citizens of New York than to secure for them the service of that fearless and efficient officer, it has deserved the esteem, I think, of all of you and of all honest men. [Applause.]

"He is before us to-night as the candidate of some two thousand-odd citizens who had signed a petition making him their candidate. They are just the skirmish line of the vast army of men in this community who are rejoicing in the opportunity of exercising their franchise at last for a man who has been rejected by the political bosses. It is the kind of a candidate that at least we feel we can exercise our franchise for with entire satisfaction.

"What is he offering us? He comes before us here offering, not his partisanship, not his economic or political views, not even a promise of what he will do in the next four years; nothing but a record, one a record. He stands square and distinct in the bright sunlight as the embodiment of the principle of morality versus partisanship in local administration.

"So he has driven them to the last ditch, and we glory in the fact of his political isolation to-night. For we have been wanting for a long, long time; we wanted to test the independence of New York; perhaps we should go down, but we wanted to test it anyhow; we wanted to see how many men there are who believe what I am sure they practice, being honest men in their own lives, that merit should triumph over mere partisanship, and the man should triumph over the boss."

Mr. Cutting spoke of the Bureau of Complaints established by Mr. Jerome, which was always open to all. He continued:

"We are here to-night to talk a little about the man whom we have got to make our next District Attorney. As I say, he has been turned down by the bosses, but that won't be the end of him. Perhaps the time may come, whether we elect him now or not, when, without asking the bosses, we will ask him to take a higher place and put him there. [Applause.]

"District Attorney Jerome is not on trial to-night. It is the people of New York who are on trial. [Applause.] He is not at the bar. It is not the District Attorney who is at the bar of judgment; it is the people of New York—and if he goes down to defeat they condemn themselves." [Great applause.]

Dr. Adler's Warm Welcome.

Dr. Adler was presented as "the man who has made this platform famous." He drew frequent and loud approval from the audience. Some of his utterances were:

"Jerome is wanted not because he is not a grafter, but because he is a known enemy to the grafters. The American people are beginning to rise. This is a National battle, and Jerome is our leader."

He emphasized the necessity of going beyond shouting and applauding in the support of the candidate, and pleaded with his listeners to vote as well, and to get their friends to vote for Mr. Jerome.

"It is not accidental," Mr. Adler said, "that Philadelphia is simultaneously carrying on its fight against corruptionists. It is not a mere accident that in Missouri a man like Gov. Folk has arisen. It is not an accident that on the Pacific Coast the same movement is afoot. The country is athrill. The great Gulliver of the American people is tired of the Lilliputians that have crawled over his body, and he is now beginning to rend their bones. And ours, it is here in New York, to do our share of the National battle with Jerome as our leader.

"Don't mistake. The odds arrayed against him. There is a terrible lethargic force of custom on that Tuesday that is to come. Nothing but hard work will avail."

Frederick W. Hinrichs said in the course of his remarks that he felt quite positive that the Republican and the Democratic leaders came together six months ago for the purpose of handing over the Legislature to the Republican organization and the control of the city to Tammany Hall. A remarkable demonstration was caused by his mention of the name of President Roosevelt. The applause that followed lasted more than a minute, and was renewed time and again.

The following letter from Carl Schurz was received and read by the Chairman:

"My Dear Mr. Ehrich:

"Your letter reached me last night. I am sorry I cannot attend the Jerome meeting this evening. But Mr. Jerome will certainly have my vote and my best wishes.

"The election of a man of such personal merit and eminent public usefulness as a truly independent candidate would point out one of the ways, and perhaps, the best way, out of the bogs and machine slavery which are so disastrously demoralizing and degrading our public life. Next to the victory of the reform movement in Philadelphia I would hail the election of Mr. Jerome as the most encouraging political event of the year in this republic. Sincerely yours,

"C. SCHURZ."

Jerome Makes His Escape.

The speechmaking of the occasion was no sooner over than an impromptu reception on the platform began. It lasted fully fifteen minutes, while people on the platform and from the hall crowded around the candidate eager to shake hands with him. At last Mr. Jerome succeeded in tearing himself away, but the ovation lasted along his line of progress to the automobile that was waiting for him outside.

An effort to find out who was present at the meeting was almost hopeless. In the sea of faces the well-known ones were lost. A list of box holders made in advance with an understanding that they were to be present showed these:

William N. Coben, William L. Bliss, L. L. Delafield, Isaac N. Seligman, Dr. E. R. L. Gould, Louis C. Tiffany, Louis R. Ehrich, Lawrence Veiller, Cyrus L. Sulzberger, H. G. Gray, Charles M. Jesup, Mrs. Felix Adler, William Jay Schieffelin, Mrs. William Travers Jerome, Senator Armstrong, Eugene Hawkins, Julius Henry Cohen, J. Brooke Leavitt, H. W. Hardon, Richard Welling, Henry Ollesheimer, F. W. King, Dr. Brickner, John T. Lee, Dr. Warren C. Spaulding, William B. Overton, Henry Hirschberg, and J. Butler Hilton.

No efforts had been made to decorate the auditorium. On the platform the National colors, in banners and flags, were the only decorative elements outside of a bust portrait of Mr. Jerome, which had a place of honor in the centre of the background.

William R. Corwine presented Chairman Milburn at the opening of the meeting in a few words. Mr. Milburn began by saying that one of the principal reasons why he considered it a privilege to preside was that the gathering was "neither a perfunctory caucus nor a perfunctory convention, but an assembly of citizens who put into nomination another citize absolutely on his merits." Then came the first real outburst of enthusiasm, caused by the first full mention of Mr. Jerome's name in these terms:

"If the people had their way, the nominee for District Attorney on both the Democratic and the Republican tickets would have been William Travers Jerome."

It brought the speaker a minute-long ovation, and thereafter the audience never failed to break into applause whenever Mr. Jerome or his office were referred to, directly or indirectly. When Mr. Milburn said that the mention of their candidate's name was the only thing that provoked enthusiasm "at that mournful occasion called the Republican Convention," even the women laughed until tears came into their eyes.

EAGER CROWDS OUTSIDE.

People began to gather outside Carnegie Hall at 6:30 o'clock. Up to 9 o'clock they kept coming. Scores came from New Jersey and from Westchester County. When the hall could hold no more, without flagrant violation of the fire ordinance, Inspector Nicholas Brooks ordered that the police hold everybody back of certain lines.

Inspector McLaughlin, Capts. Lantry, Stevenson, and Daly, a dozen Sergeants, ten mounted policemen, and 250 patrolmen saw to it that this order was carried out. After that none except box tickets were good. So 1,500 had to be content with an overflow meeting.

But that didn't content anybody. The people were there to see and hear Jerome and anything less was unsatisfactory. Les sthan a third waited to raise a cheer for the District Attorney when he came out.

Probably the most disappointed lot of men were those who had come without ticket or credential of any kind, save their declaration:

"What—hold me up? Why I'm a Jerome nominator!"

"Can't help that," said the police.

A few of these refused to be cast down, and by heroic effort got word to Robert A. Kelly, who came out and picked out nominators for the special favor of the police. In that way some got in.

The Formal Opening & Exhibit of

Our Enlarged Department Devoted to Travelers' Requisites

Is Announced for Thursday.

Our department has grown materially in precincts and in scope. We believe it to be the biggest which this town affords, save none.

Character and good taste have their source in divers things. For our requisites we have found them in simplicity through personal influence.

Not content with even the best requisites which our market affords, we have gone to the fountainhead—to the master leather workers of London—with original schemes and specifications that honor the established forms in the breach. Their imprint identifies the product.

The result is a collection of trunks, bags, suit cases and kindred requisites that for character, good taste and exclusiveness are infinitely above the accepted standards. Yet the prices are modest.

If your taste and needs demand some special design, leather or arrangement, we are pleased to offer you our services with the assurance that your instructions will be promptly, correctly and intelligently interpreted.

To Serve as an Introduction We Offer Special

Imported Fitted Suit Cases of English tanned sole leather, London hand sewn, with lever lock, solid sole leather handles, leather hinges, lined with maroon or moss green leather, sizes 24 inches long, and fitted with the following toilet requisites: pair military brushes, cloth brush, tooth and nail brushes in bottle, soap jar, powder bottle, extract bottle, combination shoe horn and button hook and comb, all of which are fitted on a removable pad. ROOSEVELT TO SOUTH; DROP SECTIONALISM

Throngs in Richmond Cheer Him as He Begins His Tour.

PRAISE FOR CONFEDERATES

He Declares the United States Must Police the Caribbean—No Government by a Class.

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 18.—With an appeal to the South to abandon sectionalism in politics, an assertion that the United States must play a great part in the world, and particularly must police the Caribbean, and a declaration that there must be no government by classes in the United States, President Roosevelt to-day began his swing to New Orleans and back.

Leaving Washington at 8:30 o'clock this morning he arrived in Richmond at noon to find the city in festival array and almost the whole population out on the streets to cheer him. After a speech to a great multitude in Capitol Square and a banquet he left this evening for Raleigh, N. C. He made four speeches during the day.

The President's departure from Washington was without incident. He and Mrs. Roosevelt reached the train in the Southern Railway station five minutes before leaving time. The French Ambassador and Mme. Jusserand had been waiting at the station some time to say farewell.

The President was in happy mood. As he alighted from his carriage at a side entrance to the train shed he assisted Mrs. Roosevelt out, and then smiled and raised his hat to the half hundred spectators who had gathered. Just before the train moved out he stepped from the observation room to the rear platform of his car and smilingly bowed acknowledgments to the flutter of handkerchiefs of the crowd.

The train was made up of four cars vestibuled. His car, Signet, brought up the rear. He had occupied it on several former occasions. An observation room, trimmed in mahogany, looks out over a broad platform railed in brass, from which the President will make many of his speeches. These suites of two rooms each comprise the sleeping quarters. In the forward end is a kitchen and dining room.

Ahead of this was the compartment car Penaleno, with two drawing rooms and seven staterooms. Next was the dining car Victoria, and then a combination coach, comprising a smoking room and baggage compartment. The train was manned with a picked crew.

In the party were Mrs. Roosevelt, Secretary William Loeb, Jr., Dr. P. M. Rixey, Surgeon General of the Navy; John L. McIlhenny of Louisiana, a member of the President's regiment of Rough Riders; John C. Greenway of Michigan, John S. Elliott, Commissioner of the Interior for Porto Rico; M. C. Latta and John L. McGrew, stenographers; Henry A. Strohmeyer, photographer; Col. L. S. Brown, General Agent of the Southern Railway; representatives of three press associations, two Secret Service officers, and a corps of messengers.

The First Speech at Fredericksburg.

The first stop was made at Fredericksburg shortly after 10 o'clock in order to water the engine. About 200 persons were gathered at the station, and the President said to them:

"It is indeed a great pleasure to me to be once more within your mighty State, the mother of Presidents, the old Dominion, with its soil hallowed by so many memories of the mighty men it has produced, of the mighty deeds it has seen enacted upon it.

"I know your people well already. I know your history of course, or I would not be a good American. I wish to say to you with all my heart how glad I am to have the chance of starting through your State to visit the States of the South Atlantic and the Gulf. When I am through my present trip I will have been in and spoken in every State in the Union during my term as President.

"There is one thing that has struck me more than anything else in my journeys from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the Canada line to the Gulf, and that is in meeting the different audiences that they are fundamentally alike; that wherever you go in this country the average American is a pretty decent fellow, and that all that is necessary in order to make him get on well with the other average American is that they should know one another."

A Plea for Education.

At Ashland the President was greeted by the students of Randolph-Macon Academy and citizens when his train stopped for three minutes. He said:

"It is a pleasure to have the chance of greeting you and to be greeted by you. I want to say a word here in a place identified with the name of two of America's greatest statesmen—Patrick Henry and Henry Clay—in the seal of a college which in the Randolph-Macon system commemorates the names of two others of that wonderful group of statesmen which Virginia gave to the Nation.

"I wish here to say a word of recognition to those who are doing this great educational work. In a Republic like ours it is a mere truism to say that the success of the Republic depends upon the trained intelligence of the citizens. The Republic cannot succeed if we do not take pains in educating the masters of the Republic—than is the people.

"Self-government is not too easy a thing. It is easy enough to live under a despotism. You do not have to do anything; just let the other man govern. But it is not easy to live in a republic where each man has to do his part in the governing, and where he cannot do it if there is not a sound basis of moral and intellectual training; and that is the basis that such an institution of learning as that here, and its kindred institutions, give."

A huge bunch of flowers was handed to the President, to which was attached a card inscribed: "Our President. A lover of the strenuous life and of fair play and a maker of peace."

Cheered by Richmond Throngs.

In Richmond decorators had been busy all night, and the city was in gay attire. Business was practically suspended at 11:30, and great throngs were in the streets.

The Presidential train pulled into the Main Street at 12 o'clock sharp. Its approach to the suburbs had been heralded by a blare of the whistle at the Seaboard shops, which was responded to by whistles all over the city.

Gov. Montague, Mayor McCarthy, and Capt. W. H. Curtis boarded the President's car and formally welcomed him to Richmond. The procession then formed, headed by a detail of police, and consisted of the Virginia Military Cadet Corps, Seventeenth Regiment Virginia Infantry, Richmond Light Infantry Blues, Citizens' Mounted Escort, a battery of mountain howitzers, the President, Governor, and Mayor in carriages, and the Reception Committee and City Council in carriages.

The line of march was through some of the principal streets to the western part of the city and back to Capitol Square. All along the route the President was enthusiastically cheered. At one point public school children were banked for several blocks along Broad Street, white on one side and colored on the other.

At the square the President faced one of the greatest multitudes ever assembled in Richmond. Gov. Montague introduced the President. He spoke as follows:

He Speaks Against Sectionalism.

"I trust I need hardly say how great is my pleasure at speaking in this historic capital of your historic State; the State than which no other has contributed a larger proportion to the leadership of the Nation; for on the honor roll of those American worthies whose greatness is not only for the age but for all time, not only for one nation but for all the world, on this honor roll Virginia's name stands above all others.

"And in greeting all of you, I know that no one will grudge my saying a special word of acknowledgment to the veterans of the civil war. A man would indeed be but a poor American who could without a thrill witness the way in which, in city after city in the North as in the South, on every public occasion, the men who wore the blue and the men who wore the gray now march and stand shoulder to shoulder, giving tangible proof that we are all now in fact as well as in name a reunited people, a people infinitely richer because of the priceless memories left to all Americans by you men who fought in the great war.

"Last Memorial Day I spoke in Brooklyn at the unveiling of the statue of a Northern General, under the auspices of the Grand Army of the Republic, and that great audience cheered every allusion to the valor and self-devotion of the men who followed Lee as heartily as they cheered every allusion to the valor and self-devotion of the men who followed Grant.

"The wounds left by the great civil war have long healed, but its memories remain. Think of it, oh, my countrymen, think of the good fortune that is ours! That, whereas every other war of modern times has left feelings of rancor and bitterness to keep asunder the combatants, our great war has left to the sons and daughters of the men who fought, on which ever side they fought, the same right to feel the keenest pride in the great deeds alike of the men who fought on one side and of the men who fought on the other.

"The proud self-sacrifice, the resolute and daring courage, the high and steadfast devotion to the right as each man saw it, whether Northerner or Southerner, these qualities render all Americans forever the debtors of those who in the dark days from '61 to '65 proved their truth by their endeavor. Here around Richmond, here in your own State, there lies battlefield after battlefield, rendered forever memorable by the men who counted death as but a little thing when weighed in the balance against doing their duty as it was given them to see it.

"These men have left us of the younger generation not merely the memory of what they did in war but of what they did in peace. Foreign observers predicted that when such a great war closed it would be impossible for the hundreds of thousands of combatants to return to the paths of peace. They predicted ceaseless disorder, wild turbulence, the alternation of anarchy and despotism.

"But the good sense and self-restraint of the average American citizen falsified these prophecies. The great armies disbanded, and the private in the ranks, like the officer who had commanded him, went back to take up the threads of his life where he had dropped them when the call to arms came.

"It was a wonderful, a marvelous thing. In a country consecrated to peace with but an infinitesimal regular army, to develop so quickly the huge hosts which fronted one another between the James and the Potomac and along the Mississippi and its tributaries. But it was an even more wonderful, an even more marvelous thing how these great hosts, once their work done, resolved themselves into the general fabric of the Nation.

Praise for the New South.

"Great though the meed of praise is which is due the South for the soldierly valor her sons displayed during the four years of war, I think that even greater praise is due to her for what her people have accomplished in the forty years of peace which followed.

"For forty years the South has made not merely a courageous but at times a desperate struggle, as she has striven for moral and material well-being. Her success has been extraordinary, and all citizens of our common country should feel joy and pride in it, for any great deed done or any fine qualities shown by one group of Americans of necessity reflects credit upon all Americans.

"Only a heroic people could have battled successfully against the conditions with which the people of the South found themselves face to face at the end of the civil war. There had been utter destruction and disaster, and wholly new business and social problems had to be faced with the scantiest means. The economic and political fabric had to be readjusted in the midst of dire want, of grinding poverty. The future of the broken, war-swept South seemed beyond hope, and if her sons and daughters had been of weaker fibre there would in very truth have been no hope.

"But the men and the sons of the men who had faced with unfaltering front every alternation of good and evil fortune from Manassas to Appomattox, and the women, their wives and mothers, whose courage and endurance had reached an even higher heroic level—these men and these women set themselves undauntedly to the great task before them.

"For twenty years the struggle was hard and at times doubtful. Then the splendid qualities of your manhood and womanhood told, as they were bound to tell, and the wealth of your extraordinary natural resources began to be shown.

"Now the teeming riches of mine and field and factory attest the prosperity of those who are all the stronger because of the trials and struggles through which this prosperity has come. You stand loyally to your traditions and memories; you also stand loyally for our great common country of to-day, and for our common flag, which symbolizes all that is brightest and most hopeful for the future of mankind; you face the new age in the spirit of the age. Alike in your material and in your spiritual and intellectual development you stand abreast of the foremost in the world's progress.

Union to Meet New Problems.

"And now, my fellow-citizens, my fellow-Americans, exactly as all of us, whether we live in the East or West, in the North or the South, have the right merely as Americans to feel pride in every great deed done by any American in the past, and exactly as we are knit together by this common heritage of memories, so we are knit together by the bond of our common duties in the present, our common interests in the future.

"Many and great problems lie before us. If we treat the mighty memories of the past merely as excuses for sitting lazily down in the present, or for standing aside from the rough work of the world, then these memories will prove a curse instead of a blessing.

"But if we treat them, as I believe we shall treat them, not as excuses for inaction, but as incentives to make us show that we are worthy of our fathers and of our fathers' fathers, then in truth the deeds of the past will not have been wasted, for they shall bring forth fruit a hundredfold in the present generation.

"We of this Nation, we the citizens of this mighty and wonderful Republic, stretching across a continent between the two greatest oceans, enjoy extraordinary privileges, and as our opportunity is great, therefore our responsibility is great. We have duties to perform both abroad and at home, and we can not shirk either set of duties and fully retain our self-respect.

"In foreign affairs we must make up our minds that, whether we wish it or not, we are a great people and must play a great part in the world.

"It is not open to us to choose whether we will play that great part or not. We have to play it; all we can decide is whether we shall play it well or ill.

"And I have too much confidence in my countrymen to doubt what the decision will be. Our mission in the world should be one of peace, but not the peace of cravens, the peace granted contemptuously to those who purchase it by surrendering the right.

Must Police the Caribbean.

"No! Our voice must be effective for peace, because it is raised for righteousness first and for peace only as the handmaiden of righteousness. We must be scrupulous in respecting the rights of the weak, and no less afraid to make it evident that we do not act through fear of the strong. We must be scrupulous in exacting justice for ourselves.

"We must beware equally of that sinister and cynical teaching which would persuade us to disregard ethical standards in international relations, and of the no less hurtful folly which would stop the whole work of civilization by a well-meant but silly persistency in trying to apply to peoples unfitted for them those theories of government and of national action which are only suited for the most advanced races.

"In particular we must remember that in undertaking to build the Panama Canal we have necessarily undertaken to police the seas at either end of it, and this means that we have a peculiar interest in the preservation of order in the coasts and islands of the Caribbean.

"I firmly believe that by a little wise and generous aid we can help even the most backward of the peoples in these coasts and islands forward along the path of orderly liberty, so that they can stand alone. If we decline to give them such help the result will be bad both for them and for us, and will in the end in all probability cause us to face humiliation or bloodshed.

Idle to Oppose Combination.

"The problems that face us abroad are important, but the problems that face us at home are even more important. The extraordinary growth of industrialism during the last half century brings every civilized people face to face with the gravest social and economic questions.

"This is an age of combination among capitalists and combination among wage workers. It is idle to try to prevent such combinations. Our efforts should be to see that they work for the good, and not for the harm, of the body politic.

"New devices of law are necessary from time to time in order to meet the changed and changing conditions. But after all, we will do well to remember that, although the problems to be solved change from generation to generation, the spirit in which their solution must be attempted remains forever the same.

"It is in peace as it is in war. Tactics change and weapons change. The Continental troops in their blue and buff, who fought under Washington and Greene and Wayne, differed entirely in arms and in training from those who in blue or gray faced one another in the armies of Grant and of Lee, of Sherman and of Johnston. And now the sons of these same Union and Confederate veterans who serve in our gallant little army of to-day wear a different unform, carry a different weapon, and practice different tactics.

"But the soul of the soldier has remained the same throughout, and the qualities which drove forward to victory or to death the men of '76 and the men of '61, are the very qualities which the men of to-day must keep unchanged if in the hour of need the honor of the Nation is to be kept untarnished.

No Government by Either Class.

"So it is in civil life. This Government was formed with as its basic idea the principle of treating each man on his worth as a man, of paying no heed to whether he was rich or poor, no heed to his creed or his social standing, but only to the way in which he performed his duty to himself, to his neighbor, to the State.

"From this principle we cannot afford to vary by so much as a hand's breadth. Many republics have risen in the past, and some of them flourished long, but sooner or later they fell, and the cause most potent in bringing about their fall was in almost all cases the fact that they grew to be Governments in the interest of a class instead of a Governments in the interest of all.

"It made no difference as to which class it was that thus wrested to its own advantage the Governmental machinery. It was ultimately as fatal to the cause of freedom whether it was the rich who oppressed the poor or the poor who plundered the rich.

"The crime of brutal disregard of the rights of others is as much a crime when it manifests itself in the shape of greed and brutal arrogance on the one side, as when it manifests itself in the shape of envy and lawless violence on the other.

"Our aim must be to deal justice to each man; no more and no less. This purpose must find its expression and support not merely in our collective action through the agencies of the Government, but in our social attitude.

"Rich man and poor man must alike feel that on the one hand they are protected by law and that on the other hand they are responsible to the law, for each is entitled to be fairly dealt with by his neighbor and by the State, and if we as citizens of this Nation are true to ourselves and to the traditions of our forefathers such fair measure of justice shall always be dealt to each man; so that as far as we can bring it about each shall receive his dues, each shall be given the chance to show the stuff there is in him, shall be secured against wrong, and in turn prevented from wronging others.

"More than this no man is entitled to, and less than this no man shall have."

The President, whose address caused great enthusiasm, finished speaking at 2:20 o'clock, when the line was formed and the march taken up to the Masonic Temple, where an elaborate banquet, with covers for 400 persons, was spread. The hall was beautifully decorated. The party sat down to the luncheon a little after 3 o'clock. A band was in attendance.

At the President's table sat Gov. Montague, Mayor McCarthy, United States Senators Daniel and Martin, Surgeon General Rixey, Private Secretary Loeb, Col. Archer Anderson, Joseph Bryan, J. P. Branch, and Judge B. T. Crump of Richmond; George W. Stevens, President of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad; Representative John Lamb, and the Rev. Asby Jones.

The President showed throughout that he was in high spirits.

Mayor McCarthy proposed a toast to the President, which was drunk enthusiastically, and Mr. Roosevelt rose to respond. He was greeted uproariously, the men rising, cheering heartily, and waving their napkins. The President said:

"One among the very many great Virginians of the time when this Nation was born—(and I quote, gentlemen, Patrick Henry)—said: 'We are no longer New Yorkers or New Englanders, Pennsylvanians or Virginians, we are Americans.' And surely the man would be but a poor American who was not touched and stirred to the depths by the reception that I have met with to-day in this great historic city of America.

"Coming to-day by the statue of Stonewall Jackson, in the city of Lee, I felt what a privilege it is that I, as an American, have in claiming that you yourselves have no more right of kinship in Lee and Jackson than I have. I can claim to be a middling good American, because my ancestry was half Southern and half Northern; I was born in the East, and I have lived a good while in the West—so long, in fact, that I do not admit that any man can be a better Westerner than I am.

"There was an uncle of mine, now dead, my mother's brother, who had always been among all the men I have ever met, the man who it seemed to me came nearest to typifying in the flesh that most beautiful of all characters in fiction, Thackeray's Colonel Newcome—my uncle, James Dunwoody Bulloch, an Admiral in the Confederate Navy.

"In short, gentlemen, I claim to be neither Northerner nor Southerner, nor Easterner nor Westerner—nothing but a good American, pure and simple. Next only to a man's having worn the blue comes the fact of the man's having worn the gray, as entitling him to honor in my sight.

"Last year I told Gen. Fitzhugh Lee that I wanted to add to my collection of autograph letters of great Americans—Lincoln, Grant, Clay, Jefferson, (turning to the Governor,) your namesake, Andrew Jackson—that of Gen. Lee, with his photograph. I got from Gen. Fitzhugh a letter of Gen. Lee's and a photograph of him, handed to me after Gen. Fitzhugh Lee's death. I was not able to thank my old and valued friend, the father, but I put the son on my staff, and now I have the grandson of Gen. Grant and the grandnephew of Gen. Lee and the son of Phil Sheridan on my staff. I think it is a middling good staff, too.

"In my regiment, organized at the beginning of the Spanish-American war, I think that there were more men whose fathers wore the gray than there were men whose fathers wore the blue. The only rivalry that ever entered their heads was rivalry as to which man could show himself best entitled to the praise of having done all that in him lay for our country and our flag.

"I noticed that the statue of Stonewall Jackson had been raised as a gift by certain Englishmen. The best biography of Gen. Jackson was by an Englishman, Col. Henderson. It is a curious and rather lamentable fact that he died just as he was about to undertake another biography, which I had earnestly asked him to undertake. I had written him urging that he should finish his very remarkable military study of Stonewall Jackson by writing a military biography of Gen. Lee, and he had written me back that he intended to do so. Shortly afterward I learned of his death.

"Gentlemen, I cannot sufficiently express to you my deep appreciation of the way in which you have greeted me to-day. You cannot be nearly as glad to see me as I am to see you. Let me say once more what I said in my more formal address. Think of the good fortune that is ours, as a people, in having, each of us, whether we in our own persons or through our ancestors wore the blue or the gray, the proud right to challenge as our own all of the valor, all of the self-devotion, all of the steadfast adherence to right as God gave to each man to see the right, shown alike by the men who wore the blue and by the men who wore the gray in the great contest that was waged from 1861 to 1865."

Addresses Ex-Confederates.

After the President had finished, the party was posed for a flashlight photograph. The President then hurried out, and with his military guard and special mounted escort of citizens, drove about the city. The party first drew rein at the Lee Monument, where the Confederate veterans from R. E. Lee Camp Soldiers' Home were gathered. Addressing the old soldiers the President said:

"I wish to say just one word of greeting to you. I honor the State of Virginia because she has taken charge of the Confederate veterans in their old age. All Americans, North and South, must ever render high honor to the men of the civil war, whether they wore the blue or whether they wore the gray, so long as they did their duty as the light was given them to see their duty, with all the strength that was in them.

"Here I greet you in the shadow of the statue of your mighty commander, Gen. Robert E. Lee. You and he left us memories which, inasmuch as they are part of the memories bequeathed to the entire country by all the Americans who fought in the civil war, are to serve forevermore as spurs and incentives to the generations coming after, to teach us and our descendants that alike in peace and in war, whenever the times that try men's souls may come, we are to rise level to the opportunity as you rose level to your opportunity, and to be ready to prove, as you proved, our willingness to prove our worth by our endeavor."

The President was heartily cheered by the veterans.

The party then drove to the old home of John Marshall, Chief Justice of the United States, and to the Confederate Museum, where many of the ladies of the Confederate Memorial and Literary Association were gathered. They presented a bunch of red and white roses, tied with the Confederate colors. St. John's Episcopal Church, in which Patrick Henry made his famous "Give me liberty or give me death" speech, was also visited.

Shortly after 6 o'clock the President joined Mrs. Roosevelt at the Governor's mansion, and a little later the distinguished visitors were escorted to the station, when, at 7 o'clock, their train departed for Raleigh.

At one point in the line of march to-day the President shook hands with Giles B. Jackson, President of the Development and Jamestown Exposition Company, and addressed a gathering of negroes as follows:

"I wan to congratulate you on the showing your school children have made, and I further wish as an American to congratulate the representatives of the colored race, who have shown such progress in the industrial interests of this city. All they have done in that way means a genuine progress for the race. I am glad as an American for what you are doing.

"The standing of the bank, which in this city is managed by colored men, should give genuine pride to all the colored men of this country. It's record is an enviable one. You colored men who show in business life both ability and a high order of integrity are real benefactors not only of your race but of the whole country."

He was much amused at another point by the appearance of a huge stuffed bear, over which was the sign: "Mr. President, have a shot; the only one in Richmond." He laughed heartily at this. As Mr. Roosevelt left to-night he said to a reporter:

"If the people of Richmond like me half as much as I like them, we'll call it square, and I'll be satisfied. I like the Southern people—John Greenway here will tell you so—and I can't express how greatly I appreciate the warm Virginia welcome I received to-day."

Mrs. Roosevelt was met at the station by Mrs. Montague and driven to the Governor's mansion, where a reception was held in her honor, and while the banquet was in progress at the Masonic Temple a luncheon was served. The guests included the most fashionable women in the city.

YELLOW FEVER DYING OUT.

New Orleans Emergency Hospital to be Closed Soon.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 18.—The improvement of the yellow fever situation in the country keeps pace with that in the city. In the last twenty-four hours there was but a single death outside of New Orleans.

The proposed invitation to President Roosevelt to visit the emergency hospital will probably be canceled because it is expected that the institution will have been closed by the time he gets here.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL DEAL.

President Fish to Make an Announcement at Nashville To-morrow.

Special to The New York Times.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 18.—President Stuyvesant Fish and most of the Directors of the Illinois Central will arrive in Nashville on Friday afternoon, and in the presence of officials and prominent citizens Mr. Fish will announce officially the plans of the Illinois Central concerning the Tennessee Central, the western division of which, it is understood, has been acquired by the Illinois Central.

The party will include E. H. Harriman, John Jacob Astor, Cornelius Vanderbilt, and Gov. Deneen of Illinois.

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—President Fish of the Illinois Central Railroad Company addressing the stockholders at the annual meeting of the company, held here to-day, said he wished to depart somewhat from custom and to make a statement showing the great development of the Illinois Central since he first became a Director in 1876.

Mr. Fish then read a comparative statement, which showed for 1876 and 1905 respectively the gross receipts and the disposal of them. For the fiscal year ended June 30, 1905, the gross earnings were more than seven times those of 1876. In 1905 the earnings were $49,508,649 and in 1876 they were $7,040,969.

In the last thirty years the number of passengers carried per mile increased more than eleven times and the tons of freight carried per mile increased more than twenty times.

REVOLUTION BACKED BY ASPHALT COMPANY

A. L. Barber Testifies That It Aided Castro's Enemies.

EXPECTED REBELS TO WIN

Americans Gave Money to Matos and Equipped the Ban Righ—Gen. F. V. Greene Exonerated.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—Amzi L. Barber, ex-President of the National Asphalt Company, testified to-day in the case of the United States of Venezuela against the New York and Bermudez Asphalt Company that to the best of his knowledge and belief that company did contribute materially to the revolution organized in 1901 by Gen. Manuel A. Matos against the Venezuelan Government.

Hearings in the case, which have been proceeding in New York, were transferred to-day to Washington in order to teke the testimony of Mr. Barber. The evidence was taken before Albert Harper, an Examiner in Chancery, designated by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. Frank J. Dupignac and Rufus B. Cowing, Jr., represented Venezuela, and De Lancey Nicoll the asphalt company. Mr. Berber occupied the stand all dey.

After affirming the statement he had previously made in affidavits, Mr. Barber exonerated Gen. F. V. Greene from ell connection with the payment of money in aid of the Matos revolutionary movement, and expressed the belief that Gen. Greene knew nothing about such payment until after the transaction. He was induced to make this statement, he said, by conversations he had had with Gen. Greene, which convinced the witness of Greene's innocence of any complicity in the transactions between the New York and Bermudez Asphelt Company and the Matos revolutionists.

Mr. Barber testified that he resigned es President of the National Asphalt Company on Jan. 1, 1901, subsequently sold all his stock, and now hed no interest in the company or in its successor, the General Asphalt Company. He declared that subsequent to his resignation certain officers of the National Asphalt Company, of the New Trinidad Lake Asphalt Company, and of the New York end Bermudez Asphalt Company did contribute, on behalf of the companies, large sums of money to Gen. Matos or to his associates to aid a revolution against the Government of Venezuela; that they furnished the money to purchase, arm, and equip the steamship Ban Righ, and further furnished money to Matos or to his associates with which to purchase a large quantity of arms and ammunition, which were conveyed by the Ban Righ to the adherents of Matos.

Mr. Barber reiterated the statement made in his affidavit that he had been informed by Gilbert M. Furman of New Jersey that Furman had been directed by officials of the National Asphalt Company in May, 1901, to proceed to Caracas, investigate the political conditions, and particularly make a full report to the officers of the Bermudez Asphalt Company upon the advisability of that company—one of the subsidiary companies of the National Asphalt Company—assisting Matos. Furman told him that in Caracas he found Henry Willard Bean, the representative of the New York and Bermudez Company, actively negotiating with agents of Matos, who were frequent visitors at Bean's residence. Furman said he was alarmed at such openness, and urged greater discretion.

Furman further said, according to Mr. Barber, that he became convinced that the Government of Venezuela could be overthrown by the Matos revolutionists, provided sufficient money should be furnished to them to carry on their operations. He so reported to the officers of the company when he returned to New York, and recommended that the money be supplied to Matos. The decision to finance the revolution was reached by the officers of the company, said Furman, on his recommendation.

Mr. Barber quoted George W. Elkins, who in 1901 was a Director of both the National and Bermudez Companies, as stating that the New York and Bermudez Company assisted the Matos revolutionists with money contributions. He also said that Walter M. Dick of Pittsburg, an employe of the New York and Bermudez Company at Port of Spain and at Guanoco, Venezuela, told him that the company had furnished forage, supplies, and transportation to the Matos revolutionary forces operating in the State of Bermudez.

Mr. Barber was subjected to a long and severe cross-examination by Mr. Nicoll, but his statements regarding contributions to the Matos revolutionary movement were not affected.

The attorneys in the case returned to New York, where the taking of testimony in the case will be resumed tomorrow.

CASTRO STILL HAS TIME.

But France Is Hurrying Another Warship to the West Indies.

PARIS, Oct. 18.—The French armored cruiser Desaix, which, it is understood, is bound for Venezuelan waters, did not put into Brest, after leaving Cherbourg on Monday, as it was announced that she would do, but passed the Island of Ushant, heading direct for the French Antilles, where she will join the cruisers Troude end Jurien de la Gravière. For the present the cruisers Lavoisier and Chasseloup-Laubat will be held at Brest, as the situation may not require their presence in West Indian waters.

The officals here say that the published report that the French squadron intends either to bombard some coast point, such as Cumana or Barcelona or else seize Venezuelan shipping, is an exaggeration, as the only decision arrived at is to have ships in readiness. The nature of the demonstration will be determined on later if the attitude of Venezuela requires a resort to force.

At the same time the officals are sincerely anxious to avoid the necessity of adopting force. In any event the United States will be fully advised in advance concerning the nature of any coercive measure.

A dispatch from Cherbourg says that in naval circles there it is expected that marines from the Desaix will be landed in Venezuela.

BRYAN PLEASES JAPANESE.

Students Able to Understand His Speech—Okuma Entertains Him.

TOKIO, Oct. 18.—William J. Bryan today addressed an audience of about 1,000 persons, with Count Okuma, the ex-Foreign Minister and leader of the Progressive Party, in the chair. His simple style and clear pronunciation made his speech, which lasted forty minutes, intelligible even to the younger students and called forth apreciative remarks.

Later Mr. Bryan lunched with Count Okuma.

The municipality of Tokio has invited Mr. Bryan to attend a public reception, but his time here will not permit him to accept the invitation.

Ten Nurses Graduate.

The second annual graduation exercises of the Training School for Nurses of Beth Israel Hospital were held last night in Clinton Hall, in Clinton Street. The hall was beautifully decorated with flowers sent by the hospital staff.

Among those who addressed the nurses was Isidor Straus, who praised the women for their choice of a profession and pointed out the duties which would be theirs to perform and how best they might acquit themselves.

Ten nurses graduated. The one with highest honors was Clara Modell. She received a gold medal. The diplomas were distributed by Abraham Nelson, President of the Beth Israel Hospital School. After the exercises the doctors of the hospital joined the nursee at a banquet and then a dance.

MOORS' CAPTIVES NOT FREED.

It Is Expected That the Bandits' Terms Will Be Accepted.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cable. Copyright, 1905.

TANGIER, Oct. 18.—The local Moorish authorities, who are doing everything in their power to bring about the speedy release of Capt. Crowther and Lieut. Hatton, have so far not been able to get into direct communication with the tribesmen who hold the Englishmen prisoners, as the place of their detention is over thirty miles distant and the mountain tracks are very bad, necessitating a long time for messengers to reach their destination.

It is generally believed that agents of the Maghzen reached the spot to-day, and the exact terms demanded should be known to-morrow.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—There is very little excitement in London over the capture of British officers by Moorish brigands. The feeling seems to be that it is hardly worth while to get worked up over the affair, which, as it apparently admits of only one practical solution, promises to turn out as such affairs always turn out when practically treated by the outraged country. A miserable little Moorish tribe defies the might of Great Britain and is able to dictate its own terms.

The expectation here is that, whatever the terms may be, they will be accepted and that in a reasonable time the British captives will be set free and come back to their friends safe and sound.

Later the British Government may do something, but precisely what it should do nobody seems quite prepared to say at this moment.

CZAR WANTS A CONSTITUTION.

Would Like to be a Monarch Such as King Edward, But Hesitates.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cable. Copyright, 1905.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 18.—I hear that Count Witte is holding informal conferences with influential members of the Reform Party and assuring them that the Emperor is sincerely desirous of meeting the wishes of the nation.

I am told that Count Witte declared that the Czar's greatest desire was to become a constitutional sovereign, that his ideal was Edward VII., a monarch who ruled over loving and loyal subjects without the terrible burden of responsibility imposed by an autocratic régime, and that he hesitated to grant a Constitution solely because he was not yet convinced that the nation desired it.

Count Witte intimated that it would be the high mission of the Douma to express the will of the people in this respect, but urged moderation, so as to avoid playing into the hands of the reactionary counselors who surround the throne.

It is difficult to foresee success for these overtures. The Reformers are profoundly skeptical and suspicious of the Government.

ENGLISH MONEY FOR RUSSIA.

Report That British Capitalists May Take Part of New Loan.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cable. Copyright, 1905.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 18.—The French delegates for the negotiation of a Russian loan of £50,000,000 ($250,000,000) will arrive to-morrow. The German delegate is already here.

It is rumored that English capitalists may participate in the loan. If the rumor is confirmed, it would be the first occasion in many years of the issue of a Russian loan on the English market and would in all probability exercise the happiest influence on Anglo-Russian relations.

RAYNER FIGHTS GORMAN.

Strong Democratic Faction Out Against the Suffrage Amendment.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 18.—United States Senator Isidor Rayner, in a letter to the Democratic voters of Maryland, vigorously assells his colleague, Senator Gorman, and the party machine. He has united with Gov. Warfield, Attorney General Bryan, and other leading Democrats of the State in opposition to the suffrage amendment.

He asserts that the amendment would disfranchise 20,000 whites as well as 18,000 negroes. His purpose is to protect foreign born citizens.

"Our rulers have decreed," he continues, "that the chains of political slavery are again to be forged around us, to perpetuate themselves in power, and to revive the waning fortunes of a political dynasty. This amendment, placing the election machinery in the hands of a political cabal, means death—political death—to every rising man in Maryland.

"The words 'Organization,' 'Convention,' and 'Committee,' as used in the political vocabulary of Maryland, are merely metaphors and figures of speech. They have an accepted significance with us, and they always mean one individual who uses these phrases as a pseudonym under which he appears incognito to the public."

Veteran Hurt by Car Gets $3,600.

Edward Knopf, a civil war veteran, who lives at the Soldiers' Home, in Virginia, got $3,600 damages in the Supreme Court yesterday for injuries he received in a fall from an Eighty-sixth Street cross-town car on March 18, 1903, at Avenue A. His counsel, Alfred and Charles Steckler, called several witnesses, who said that Mr. Knopf had been hurt through no fault of his own, but because the driver had started the car before Mr. Knopf had a chance to alight. The jury quickly decided against the railroad company.

RAILROADS ARRAYED AGAINST CAR LINES

Their Officers Aid Attack by Inter-State Commerce Board.

HEARING BEGUN AT CAPITAL

Private Refrigerating Companies Question the Jurisdiction of the Commission Over Them.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—What promises to extend into a great battle against private car lines was precipitated by the Inter-State Commerce Commission to-day at the beginning of a hearing on complaints against the Southern, Pennsylvania, Seaboard, Atlantic Coast, and other railways and the Armour car lines.

Counsel for the commission directed every effort to show that railroads operating their own refrigerator cars give to their shippers a much lower rate for refrigeration than is obtained on roads compelled to operate with private car lines. In this effort the railroads, notably the Illinois Central and the Pennsylvania, through their traffic freight managers who were on the stand the greater part of the day, apparently aided the commission.

The action of the commission in initiating and prosecuting the complaints has the double purpose of establishing its jurisdiction over priavte car lines and correcting evils. The chief contest is expected to develop on the point of jurisdiction, which was sharply reised several times to-day by counsel for the private lines.

W. C. Rowley, general freight agent of the Michigan Central, testified that his road has no contracts with refrigerator lines, but borrowed during the fruit season 250 cars from the Santa Fé Refrigerator Dispatch under agreement to loan a like number to the Dispatch Line at other times. The road pays three-quarters of a cent a mile for the cars borrowed.

"The shippers are charged $2.50 a ton for ice put in cars," said Mr. Rowley. He estimated the actual cost of the ice, not including hauls or interest on ice house investments, at $1.94 a ton, and declared no profit is made on it by the road.

F. B. Bowles, Freight Traffic Manager of the Illinois Central Railroad, testified that his railroad operates 2,458 refrigerator cars and had no agreement with private lines.

"We receive a per diem charge of 20 cents a car, the same as we receive for stock or box cars," he said. He filed a statement to show that if paid for on the mileage basis the receipts per car would be about 33 cents a day. In other words, he declared, the private car lines receive a much higher rate for service than do the railroads themselves.

He furnished a table to show that the cost of icing ten cars of berries from Louisiana to Chicago was $405, the ice coeting the company from $3 to $4.90 a ton.

These figures were considered important as a basis for comparison with private car line chargee. A. F. Reichman, for the Armour lines, quickly moved to strike out Mr. Bowles's testimony on the ground that he did not personally make the observations quoted and no opportunity was given to cross-examine the men who actually made the figures.

"There is no need for argument," Chairman Knapp decided. "We will take this testimony."

Mr. Reichman continued his protest and several members of the commission insisted that court methods were not necessary in a hearing of thie character. Declaring that great property interests were at stake, Mr. Reichman said the commission was working a great injustice, ae the burden of proof wae placed on the defendants instead of on the complainants.

Mr. Bowles's figures were permitted to stand, but on crose-examination Mr. Bowles admitted that damage suits growing out of refrigerator eervice were not considered in the eetimatee, and that the cost of ice in the South is lese than it would be to the Armor lines, ae the Illinois Central assesses a low freight charge on its ice.

G. D. Dixon, Freight Traffic Manager of the Pennsylvania, said that refrigerator cars owned by that road are iced by the shipper, but reicing when neceseary is charged on the bill of lading. The road has no connection with the Armour or any other private line. It owns its icing stations and ices any cars that need it.

He testified that the Pennsylvania supplies cars to shippers at a less rate than they are compelled to pay for private cars.

KING OPENS LONDON STREET.

New Thoroughfare from the Strand to Holborn Cost $30,000,000.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—The fine new thoroughfare formed by Kingsway and Aldwych, connecting the Strand and Holborn, through the heart of congested London, was opened to-day by King Edward with considerable ceremonial. Queen Alexandra and other members of the royal family were present.

The route was lined by troops, the decorations were on a pretentious scale, and immense crowds gathered.

The new street is regarded as the most important improvement carried out in the metropolis since the construction of Regent Street in 1820. The work occupied six years and cost over $30,000,000, of which, it is estimated, two-thirds will be recovered by the sale of building sites. The thoroughfare is three-quartere of a mile in length and a hundred yards wide.

The notorious slums of the neighborhood have been eradicated and fifty-one liquor shops which were scattered throughout the area have been abolished. Underground trolley cars run beneath the new street.

The Only Shoe That Proves

The Regal proves in the parts which you can see and in the hidden parts which you can't see.

It proves what it is made of before you pay your money and it proves you weren't mistaken after you give it long, hard use.

The famous Regal buzz-saw has been used in the window of every Regal store, and it is busy all the time in some one of the Regal stores—cutting up shoes of every make, including Regals, and proving what they are made of. The Regal "Window of the Sole" proves to you before you try on the shoe that the sole is honest, old-fashioned, everlasting oak-tanned stock. Every other shoe has the fibre of the sole completely concealed by black finish or chemical stain. The "Window of the Sole" is a removable seal on the bottom of every shoe. Next time you try on a Regal, turn up the "window" and see the unstained natural color and close-set fibre of solid live oak-bark-tanned leather. That's what the label's there for.

We want you to know that the shoes you get in a Regal store are in every way as good as you can buy anywhere else for double the Regal price; and when you have started wearing Regal shoes we want them to wear so well that no others will ever suit you again. Because it's the regular customers that keep the 97 Regal stores busy. It's the new but regular customers that make it necessary for us to open new stores all the while.

DOCTORS ASSAIL PATENT MEDICINE ADVERTISING

Tell of the Harm Done by Newspapers That Print It.

CHURCH PRESS GUILTY, TOO

An Evidence of the Prevalence of Graft, Dr. Van de Water Says—Dinner of Physicians.

At the twenty-second annual dinner of the New York State Medical Association, held last night in the big ballroom of the Hotel Astor, that part of the public press which makes a practice of printing objectionable patent medicine advertisements was roundly denounced.

Dr. William J. Mayo of Minnesota, President of the American Medical Association, the first speaker introduced by Dr. J. Riddle Goffe, President of the New York body, who acted as toastmaster, sounded the keynote of all the speeches when he said that the nostrum evil was the gravest confronting the medical profession at the present time.

He declared that the 30,000 members of the National association should work ae a unit to discountenance the promiscuous publication of patent medicine advertisements and to bring into disrepute the papers that printed them.

Dr. Goffe said that the association had as a guest Samuel Hopkins Adams, who is engaged, as a member of the editorial staff of a weekly, in conducting a campaign against the booming of proprietary medicines that are either of doubtful value or positively harmful. Although Mr. Adams was not on the list of speakers he was invited to tell what he knew of the situation.

"I am sorry to say that the investigation that I have made into the matter of the publication of patent medicine advertisements has revealed very discouraging conditions," said Mr. Adams. "A large part of the American press is really held in slavery by proprietary medicine interests, and this is to be explained by the fact that for the $250,000,000 of capital invested proprietary medicine men spend a larger proportion for advertising than any other class on earth.

"The papers, be they daily or weekly or monthly, that accept and print advertisements of so-called medicines that are in reality harmful preparations are willfully injuring the health of the public.

"Take one medicine, which has received the public indorsement of statesmen, ministers, soldiers, and sailors. It is a great advertiser, and I tell you in all seriousness that you can manufacture it for yourself if you have an alcohol stove. Just put the alcohol in a bottle, add three times as much water as you have alcohol and put in a dash of red ink. There you are. And you can get drunk on it, too. [Laughter.]

"The religious press is worse than the lay press. It will boom worthless nostrums in its editorial columns for a price and throw in a few Biblical quotations for good measure."

The Rev. Dr. George R. Van de Water denied the sponsorship of the Church for many "religious publications," as they had been termed.

"The churches have nothing to do with these papers," Dr. Van de Water said. "They are simply individual undertakings for profit, organized by men who have space to sell to all comers.

"It's an evidence of the prevalence of graft. It is graft in one shape or another that is responsible for very nearly all the evils on earth. It is a question of graft when a hansom cab drives up to a minister's home at midnight and a man jumps out and offers a large sum of money to the minister if he will perform a marriage ceremony which may be off color.

"It is graft when you are asked as physicians to perform operations and prescribe medicines which you know you should not. It is graft when a newspaper or periodical sells its columns to quack doctors and fake medicines, knowing that by so doing they are imperiling the health of their readers."

Other speakers were Dr. Sucuki, Surgeon General of the Japanese Navy, Martin W. Littleton, Borough President of Brooklyn, and Louis E. Bomeisler.

"The Protection of the Water and Milk Supply" was discussed by Health Commissioner Darlington, ex-Commissioner Lederic, end others yesterday.

"What we want," Dr. Darlington said, "is chemicalized water filtration. Four years ago the land about the Croton watersheds could be bought for about $25 to $100 an acre, but to-day the price has been raised from $500 to $1,000 an acre. At this high price it is impossible for the city to buy it. One acre of a filtration plant would cleanse 3,000,000 gallons of water a day.

"The enormous consumption of bottled spring, artificial and mineral water is largely an indirect tax upon the people. Poor people cannot afford it. They should have filtered water. A filtration plant, when the public expense of caring for sick and burying the dead is considered, would pay interest on the investment.

"It is an old idea that flowing water purifies itself. Within half a mile of its impure source, the impurity which may be discovered by chemical methods may be entirely lost. Bacteriologically, however, the impurity does not change perceptibly. Where we have human contamination we may look for human diseases to follow."

Dr. Darlington denounced an act of the last Legislature regarding water rights in Putnam County, which gives the residents of the county the right, after the city has constructed the reservoirs, to fish and row in them as well as the lakes.

OSBORNE, NOTIFIED, RETORTS ON JEROME

Ideas of Tammany's Candidate as to What He Should Do.

AND WHEREIN JEROME FAILED

Wisker and Morse-Dodge Cases Cited by Inference Against the Present District Attorney's Record.

Tammany's candidates on the county and Manhattan Borough tickets were formally notified of their nominations late yesterday afternoon at the Democratic Club. All of the nominees were present and were officially told of the convention's action by Charles H. Knox, who, as Chairman of the two conventions, headed the Notification Committee.

James W. Osborne, the nominee for District Attorney, in accepting the nomination, made his first campaign utterance. It was carefully prepared, and severely arraigned the present incumbent of the District Attorney's office, although it did not name Mr. Jerome in a single instance. The action of Mr. Jerome in the Wisker case and in the Dodge-Morse case both were attacked, although in neither instance was the case named, only being indicated so that there could be no mistake about either.

All of the members of the committee gathered at the club for the ceremony at 4:30 o'clock, but it was nearly a half hour later before Chairman Knox got the nominees together in the large parlor. He addressed himself first to Justice Glidersleeve as the head of the ticket named by the County Convention, then to Justice Ingraham and then to Judge Newburger, the three nominees for the Supreme Court. In accepting, Justice Glidersleeve took occasion to thank "all his old friends in Tammany Hall."

"It is the most gratifying event of my life," he said, "to know that these friends have remained loyal. Three times Tammany has named me for the bench, but this time is the last because, under the age limit, my services are nearly at an end. Had this nomination escaped me this time, it would be impossible for me to tell you how greatly I would have been disappointed."

Justice Ingraham thanked Tammany for having already honored him with twenty-three years on the bench and for having approved his career in that time.

"When Tammany first named me," he said, "the then leader, John Kelly, came to me and gave me some advice. He said: 'Tammany wants its Judges to be upright. Remember that, and you always will have the support of the organization.' I have tried to carry out his injunction, and always have had Tammany backing me. On the bench a Judge must have no politics, but as a man I always have been loyal to the Democratic Party."

Judge Newburger, in accepting the nomination, paid a high tribute to City Chamberlain Patrick Keenan, who always has been his strong political backer. He said that fifteen years ago, when first nominated for the City Court, his "old and true friend" had told him: "Joe, if any man comes to you professing friendship, and asks you to do anything wrong, refuse him, for you can well spare his friendship."

Ex-Senator Thomas C. O'Sullivan in accepting the nomination for Judge of General Sessions laughingly referred to Chairman Knox's reference to the fact that Mr. O'Sullivan had run for Democratic office in Vermont.

"There is the old skeleton," he said, "dangling before me. It is true. I did run for Lieutenant Governor in Vermont, and my run was the most phenomenal on record, for it started at Montpelier and did not end until I had run all the way to Tammany Hall in this city."

After the Judges had been notified, Chairman Knox addressed Mr. Osborne, and the nominee for District Attorney read his carefully prepared reply, first expressing his appreciation of the nomination and then predicting victory for the entire ticket from McClellan down. He then outlined his ideas concerning the District Attorney's office, and told what he believed the incumbent should not do.

"The District Attorney," he said, "is the public officer charged with the prosecution of crimes in the county. He acts in the name of the States, and the State has no private interest in such prosecutions. As the defendant is one of the citizens of the State it is the duty of the District Attorney to see that he is properly protected and not persecuted. It follows, therefore, that the office is not quasi-judicial, but wholly judicial. If the District Attorney knows of evidence favorable to the man he is prosecuting it is his solemn duty to bring it to the notice of the defendant's lawyer. He should be a prosecutor, but should never convict a man by illegal methods.

"In the first place, he should prosecute vigorously, relentlessly, without fear or favor, all offenders against the criminal law within his jurisdiction. He should follow the trail of crime wherever it leads—whether into the slums or into the seats of the mighty. He should know no distinction between classes, between races, or between political parties, labor, and capital. This is his sworn duty to his client, the people of this great State.

"The Directors of a great railroad whose negligence and greed caused a disaster that shocked the community and filled homes with death and sorrow should be no more immune from prosecution, if the evidence is sufficient, than the engineer who drove the engine for $4.50 a day, on which he supported his wife and his children. If the Directors and the officers are guilty, they should be prosecuted. If the engineer is guilty, he should be prosecuted. But, for God's sake, let there be no distinction or discrimination! Inequality and injustice in the civil law is bad enough. But to show any unfairness or favoritism in administering the criminal law is shocking to the moral sense and subversive of all law and order. It inspires that despair and distrust which turns for relief from law to anarchy and from argument and reason to the gun and the torch.

"And now let me call your attention to some things that I think a District Attorney should not do. He should only use legal means to accomplish his just ends. He should not himself incite crime or set an example of lawlessness. He should not obtain indictments against innocent men and women for the purpose of bringing them from another State in order to testify as witnesses in a case where he is prosecuting. He should not prostitute justice and abuse the processes of the law by certifying to the Governor of another State that he has a bona fide case against persons in that State on which he believes a conviction can be had, and that the extradition of such persons is sought in order that they may be tried, when in truth and in fact his real object is to bring them here to force them to testify in another case, and after securing their testimony they are never brought to trial.

"He should not, without warrant of law, make spectacular raids with axe and hammer and hatchet, breaking down doors and violating the fundamental rights of every citizen against unreasonable and arbitrary search and oppression. An American's home should be his castle, and into that house no rude intrusion should be made, except with the full sanction of every legal safeguard, and only in cases where such extreme measures are required.

"Such acts breed a spirit of lawlessness. Lynch law is lynch law, whether the lynchers be private citizens or public officers. No end can justify such means. The District Attorney should not indulge in reckless statements; should not prejudge a defendant; should not express his personal opinion as to his guilt; should not endeavor to create public prejudice by such expressions in public utterances, and in statements in the press; should not indulge in reckless promises never carried out; should sometimes compel he what he initiates; [applause;] should be careful of reputations, especially those of women; should not conduct his office for the exploitation of his own individuality; should not claim a monopoly of all honesty and efficiency in the country; should not use inquisitorial methods to compel persons charged with crime to give testimony against themselves.

"The District Attorney should not take the words of convicts and thieves unsupported against reputable men, and above all, occupying the prominent position which is insured to him through his office, considered as responsible for every word that he utters, he ought not to reproach the great mass of his fellow-citizens with immorality, corruption, and incapacity for self-government. And it is apparent that this is done when any man charges that the two great political organizations which have controlled the destiny of this country for over sixty years, are composed of a majority of men who are absolutely unworthy to hold high office by the gift of the people. Such an argument to be properly interpreted means that the people of this country are incapable of self-government inasmuch as nine-tenths of the citizenship of this country are embraced in these two political organizations."

The other nominees notified were Nicholas J. Hayes for Sheriff, Peter J. Dooling for County Clerk, Frank Gass for Register, John F. Ahearn for Borough President, and Julius Harburger, George F. Shrady, Jr., Peter P. Acritelli, and John Dooley for Coroners.

M'CLELLAN TO REPLY TO IVINS AND HEARST

After To-night, However, He Will Ignore the League Ticket.

MAY DENY GOVERNOR PLAN

Tammany Not Worried, Says Murphy, But He Calls Leaders Against Whom Hearst Has Been Active.

Mayor McClellan, in his speech at Tammany Hall to-night, when he really opens his campaign for re-election, will reply to the points raised against him by William M. Ivins and William R. Hearst. Although the Mayor so far has ignored the open letter addressed to Mr. Hearst and himself by Mr. Ivins on Sunday last, it has become known that he has prepared to answer the letter in detail to-night.

Beginning with this speech, the Mayor will devote every night for the next two and a half weeks to the speaking end of the campaign. His manager, John H. O'Brien, is rapidly closing engagements for the appearances of the candidate. The Mayor intends practically to ignore the Hearst ticket throughout his campaign and to devote himself entirely to the discussion of his own issues and to answering such new issues as may be raised by Mr. Ivins. The rest of the Democratic orators, however, will devote considerable attention to Mr. Hearst, and will demand of the voters that they select between McClellan and Hearst.

From a source close to the Mayor it was suggested yesterday that within a few days the Mayor would come out in one of his campaign speeches and declare that all talk connecting his name with the Gubernatorial nomination next year has been groundless. It was also said that he would not permit any use of his name in a manner calculated to take him out of the Mayor's chair at the close of only one-fourth of the period for which he is a candidate for election.

Two callers at the Mayor's Bartholdi Hotel headquarters yesterday were William F. Grell and F. B. Thurber. Mr. Grell announced that his German Democracy, which ran him for Sheriff on an Independent ticket in 1903, had come out openly for McClellan and the entire Tammany ticket. The Grell Independent ticket polled 12,000 votes two years ago. Mr. Thurber said that the West Side Business Association, of which he is President, had passed resolutions indorsing the entire ticket headed by Mayor McClellan.

At Tammany Hall yesterday all the arrangements were completed for the big meeting to-night. It is expected that four overflow meetings will be held in the streets about the Wigwam, and, in addition to the candidates, Senator Thomas F. Grady, Congressman William Sulzer, Charles A. Towne, and W. Bourke Cockran are expected to speak. Herman A. Metz, Patrick F. McGowan, and James W. Osborne will speak with Mayor McClellan.

Charles F. Murphy declared yesterday that he had not given any more than the usual instructions to district leaders at this time in regard to their canvass of their districts. He said he had paid no particular attention to the Hearst campaign.

"Tammany keeps up a canvass all the year around," he said, "and the organization now is doing nothing more than its ordinary campaign work. We are not worried."

At the same time it became known that Mr. Murphy and his leaders are not taking any chances, but are getting at the bottom of the real situation, so as to know what sort of campaign must be made. This afternoon the west side leaders, south of Forty-second Street, and some of the lower east side leaders, will meet Mr. Murphy in private conference to discuss the situation in their particular districts, where the Hearst men have been especially active.

In the day a delegation of hackmen and cabdrivers, headed by James Brown, President of the Independent Hack Drivers' Association, with headquarters at 1,546 Broadway, called at Tammany Hall accompanied by Edward Mehr, Secretary and Treasurer of the Public Hackmen and Cabmen's League. They protestetd against the published statement that James Prince, President of Mehr's organization, had been authorized to assure William R. Hearst that the league would support his candidacy for Mayor. The delegation declared that Prince had no authority to make such a declaration, and that, on the contrary, the two organizations were arranging to hold a joint McClellan meeting on Saturday night at Eighth Avenue and Forty-ninth Street.

HEARD IN THE CAMPAIGN.

The Hammer Hard Worked—Mr. Ivins Having Fun—Banner Blunders.

"What do you think of the campaign?" asked Gen. Furlong of "Pat" Relihan in the Amen Corner last night.

"Looks to me like Flanagan was in danger of losing his record," said Relihan.

"Who's Flanagan?" asked Gen. Furlong.

"The champion hammer thrower."

William M. Ivins, Republican candidate for the Mayoralty, reads fluently German, French, Italian, Spanish, and Portuguese. Mr. Ivins was asked last night if he intended to speak in these languages in the campaign.

"No," he said. "I shall speak only in one language—English. But I'll have fun in several."

***

Alderman Frank Gass, the Tammany nominee for Register, raised a laugh at the Democratic Club yesterday afternoon when formally notified of his nomination. Mr. Gass rose to accept the nomination, and did so.

"And it is my very great honor," he said, "to be on the ticket headed by dot great statesman, 'Charles' B. McClellan."

***

Several district leaders in Tammany are looking for the scalp of the man who made their campaign banners. The discovery was made yesterday that not a single one of the Tammany banners already displayed has the names of the candidates correctly—not even the handsome big banner which yesterday was hung out in front of Tammany Hall itself.

"Say, what's the matter with you?" asked Florrie Sullivan when he entered the hall yesterday. "Can't you spell the names of your candidates?"

Then he pointed to the name of Judge Joseph E. Newburger on the banner. It was spelled "Newberger."

When the leaders took stock of all the banners it was found that all had the "Newberger," and most of them had left out the middle initial in the name of George F. Shrady, Jr. The banner maker will have a busy time making repairs.

***

Ex-Sheriff Thomas J. Dunn appeared at Tammany Hall yesterday after two days of sickness.

"Started out campaigning Saturday night," he explained, "and the boys shook hands with me so energetically I got into a dripping perspiration from the exercise and caught cold. No more handshaking for this harp."

HARPER'S BOOK NEWS.

With Flashlight and Rifle

This book, now creating a sensation in Germany, is the most remarkable study of wild animals that has ever been made. It is illustrated with over one hundred startling photographs, many of them taken at night by flashlight, showing wild beasts in their native haunts in the African wilds. True aspects of their jungle life are now revealed for the first time to the human eye. Mr. C. G. Schilling's adventures while taking the pictures are of graphic interest and read like fairy tales.

The Passport

A splendid romance of modern Italy by Richard Bagot, a writer to whom the public confidently looks always for fiction of the best kind. The London Academy says of this new novel:

"Once more two young people, head over heels in love, are resolved to marry in spite of insuperable difficulties, and once more we hang upon the event as if it had never happened before."

It is a wonderful picture of modern Rome, with a touch of old-world beauty in the Italian hill scenes. The love tale is of the good old-fashioned and thoroughly satisfying sort.

THE POWER OF DISMISSAL.

The new order as to dismissals issued by the Presidsnt makes a considerable change in the tenure of office in the Federal service. The change in soms respects will be for the better, in some respects it will not.

The essence of the change is the withdrawal from an employé of the right to be heard in his own defenss on charges served on him before dismissal. Under the old rule there was no "trial" required, nor was it necessary that the charges should be specific or that they should be sustained by evidence. The appointing officer simply sent the employé whom he wished to discharge for any cause, other than ths political reasons which are forbidden by law, a statement of the causes of removal, gave him a chance to be heard, and then exercised his discretion as to the dismissal. That discretion was really very little hampered; it is hardly too much to say that it was not hampered at all except by the reluctance of the heads of departments to face the employés with their reasons. Under the new rule the heads of departments, or the President, still must state their reasons for removal in writing and file them with the Civil Service Commission, and can then go ahead. That saves a little time, and it saves the feelings of the high officials. It is not, so far as we can see, a great saving. Efficient heads of departments can act more promptly, and some of them will act who before were timid, and that is for the better. On the other hand, it will be easier for those heads of departments who wish to get rid of men for political reasons, and are willing to conceal their motives under a general statement as to "inefficiency," to accomplish their purpose, and that is decidedly for the worse.

The story that the President proposed the change in the rules because he found he could not sufficiently swiftly secure the discharge of a Government chauffeur who had annoyed him fits well enough with the second provision of the order, which is as follows: "When misconduct is committed in the view and presence of the President or head of executive department, removal may be made summarily and without notice." Unfortunately it also fits only too well with the President's rather impatient temper. If the order means, as it seems to mean, that the President or head of department making such a dismissal as this need not state his reasons in writing or file them, it is not a good thing; it is liable to serious abuse.

LABOR IN THE SOUTH.

Apropos of the need of "help" in the South to which we have frequently alluded, we note with interest a very sensible article in The Charleston News and Courier of the 16th on "Textile Expansion and Immigration."

Referring to the addition of 4,000,000 spindles in the cotton-spinning mills of Lancashire, "nearly half the whole number in the South," within a year, The News and Courier points out that if the South were in a position to meet the growing demand for cotton textiles, as Lancashire is meeting it, "it would to-day be earning incomparably larger profits." "All natural conditions join to make the Southern American States the locality most favorable on the planet for spinning as well as for growing cotton," but they cannot increase their output primarily for the lack of labor. "Twenty per cent. of our spindles, so it is stated, are idle now," and the "reservoir from which the supply of operatives comes has been exhausted." The tillers of the soil are kept on their farms by the high price of cotton, and the negroes are not fitted for the factory work. "The Appalachian Mountains contain some hundreds of thousands of people who could probably better their lives by moving to the mills, but to convince them of this would be a difficult and expensive undertaking."

The News and Courier says:

> The conclusion of the whole matter is that if more mills are to be built in the South, the people to run them must be brought here, not by twos and threes, and dozens and scores, but by the hundreds and thousands continually. In short, only a large immigration of mill workers will make possible any considerable taking on of new growth by the Southern textile industry. The present population is not adequate to the present spindlage. No prospect is to be discerned that it will materially increase, except at a slow pace, unless accretions are obtained through concerted efforts on a large scale to induce new-comers.

This is not an appeal for "indiscriminate" or "undesirable" immigration. It is an argument for increasing the available labor, and, therefore, the available assets of the South. The Chattanooga Conference surely should not be deaf to such an argument.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

Speaking of the local "government" of Newport particularly, Admiral CHADWICK, in his capacity of Newporter, has been moved to write a letter to The Newport Herald, of much interest and suggestiveness. The Admiral begins by noting the consensus of foreigners, and the concession of natives that the weak point of universal suffrage is shown in municipal government. There is no gainsaying that. From DE TOCQUEVILLE, if there had been any municipalities worthy of the name in his time to have evoked the criticism, to BRYCE, the impression of the foreign observer must have been the same. There is really no dispute about the facts. If there were, the chronic example of New York and the acute example of Philadelphia would suffice to quiet it. The remedy is another mattsr, which has engaged many good minds. As an eminent pathologist once put it, diagnostics are more advanced than therapeutics. Admiral CHADWICK has his notion of a remedy, and the gist of his letter lies in the following:

> Every community wants the best streets, the best drainage, the best water, the best schools, the best protection from firs and thieves, and the most beauty and comfort which can be had for the money it can afford to pay. In other words, the community wishes to do for itself as well as the individual property holder wishes to do for himself. For, rightly considered, (and this is the gist of the whole question,) a town is but an aggregation of property owners who, finding themselves neighbors, choose to appoint a committee to look after their roads, drainage, lighting, and protection, instead of each one doing for himself. To this end we form a corporation which in no essential sense differs from any other property corporation, say the Pennsylvania Railroad. We have stock in this corporation according to the valus of the property we hold in it, and we contribute to its expenses according to ths valus of this property, exactly as the stockholder in the Pennsylvania Road contributes to the expenses arising from its up-keep and betterments. In the one case ws pay in assessments; in the other it is taksn out of ths dividends, which are reduced by so much. A city corporation being thus of the same character with ths railroad, every ons owning stock in it and contributing to its support should havs a vote in the election of the committee which expends the contributions, and the law of Rhode Island limits, and rightly limits, this voting power to members of the corporation; in other words, to the taxpayers. This seems to some an injustice, but it is in no sense more so than the limitation of the voting powers in ths election of the officers of the railroad to the stockholders. One who chooses to abide in ths corporation without becoming a stockholder is simply in the situation of a passenger on ths railroad. His comfort and his protection are looked after, the only difference betog that he pays ths railroad for his presence and the town nothing. Such a vote is entirely dissociated from suffrage in general. It has nothing to do with the election of lawmakers, in which the vote is and should be, general, because the Legislature and Congress make laws affecting ths liberty and rights of every individual. Ths town does nothing of this; it is not a lawmaking institution; it in reality governs nobody; it only administers funds and exercises certain powers under the laws of the Legislature. The phrase "city government" is thus a misnomer; it is not a government; it is an administration.

It is difficult to dispute the justice of this view. But a corollary of the Admiral's theorem seems to be that, if a municipal government, so called, is merely a matter of administration, and a municipal corporation a joint stock corporation, not only are non-stockholders, or "passengers," according to his suggestive simile, not entitled to vote, but stockholders are entitled to vote precisely in proportion to the number of shares they hold. It does not matter whether the shares are held by women, children, aliens, or persons any otherwise debarred from the general suffrage. Admiral CHADWICK mentions this consequence of the application of his theory, and we cannot say he shrinks from it. But the practical application of it would evidently work a revolution in more things than municipal administration.

Of course, the theory is not new, nor yet is the attempt to reduce it to practice. It is just about thirty years since Gov. TILDEN, impressed with those failures of our municipal government with which all students have been impressed, since and before, appointed a commission to recommend such changes in the system as to it might seem needful or desirable. The eminence of the members of the commission and its nonpartisan character were not challenged. It consisted of political theoriats and, to a less degree, of political practitioners, and included the names of WILLIAM M. EVARTS, OSWALD OTTENDORFER, WILLIAM ALLEN BUTLER, JAMES C. CARTER, Judge LOTT, E. L. GODKIN, SIMON STERNE, JOSHUA VAN COTT, EDWARD COOPER, and SAMUEL HAND. The commission made a most cautious and guarded tentative, quite illogical in its compromising quality, proposing a "Board of Audit" of city expenditures, with a veto power only, to be chosen only by taxpayers. Carefully guarded as it was, the proposal was yet so radical that it fell almost stillborn, and brought into some political odium the men who had recommended it. It was in fact a proposal that universal suffrage should abdicate and by its own act divest itself of powers already vested in it. That was what made it "academic," and we judge must make academic any other effort in the same direction. It did not, in fact, fall quite stillborn, for the approval of one Legislature kept it precariously alive until the meeting of the next, when it was put out of its misery by the orders, as was believed at the time, of ROSCOE CONKLING, then the Republican "Boss" of New York. We can see no better chance for any future effort in the same direction.

A PENALTY OF OBDURACY.

Republican statesmen who prefer retaliation to reciprocity are learning that, while it takes two to make a tariff bargain, a single nation may pursue such a stiff-necked course as alone to produce a customs quarrel. "He who will not when he may, when he will shall have a nay," is a couplet especially applicable to our Northern relations. Nothing could have been more friendly than Canada's almost suppliant attitude through long and unbending extortion on this side the border, until finally Canada adopted preference for British commerce and is now on the verge of adopting a more stringent tariff. For seventeen years Newfoundland gave our fishermen exceptional privileges in hopes of securing commercial advantages to both countries, and now, too, Newfoundland is estranged and reducing her concessions in bitterness of spirit.

It is not a question of codfish except upon the surface. It is not intrinsically even a question of the entire commercial relations between ourselves and our Northern neighbors. Undsr the surface there are political questions of larger importance. Closer commercial relations across our border could but ripen the Canadian plum. For this we have substituted the development of Canadian resources with American capital and by American emigrants whom we might have retained. And, instead of detaching Newfoundland from the Dominion, we have thrown it into the confederation.

There is a marked lack of sympathy with the wail from Gloucester, whose song is so different from yesteryear's. And there is joy in the bosoms of our transatlantic cousins at a policy which helps them in some of their family dissensions. We see nobody to blame except the gentlemen at Washington who make our laws, and the voters who allow it to be said that the laws they make are to the Nation's liking.

THE YOUNG LADY OF THE WHITE HOUSE.

The Asiatic press was unable to understand Minister ROCKHILL'S treatment of the President's daughter, so much like that he would have accorded to any other young lady, and was outspoken in its criticisms of such singular conduct. What will be the amazement of the editors of our respected antipodean contemporaries to find that the presents lavished upon her by her hosts will cost her father in customs duties a pretty sum?

It is very well to preserve the majesty of the law, which knows no distinction of persons, and of the social conventions, which leave no room for an American Princess. But even among us there are public and private persons of both sexes, and the President's daughter has an individual quality which the most rabid Americanism must recognize. Of course, when the question which never should have been asked of him was put to our American Brutus, he replied that no exception should be asked for his daughter from the burden of the tariff which all Americans hate and dodge in their personal capacity, although as voters a majority of them have heretofore supported it.

There are precedents enough for lifting the bars in such cases. The Washington museums are full of interesting objects placed there by those who have received them in a personal capacity which was about equally public and private. Buckingham and Windsor are adorned as the White House should be with similar trophies of travel and social tributes. Congress might well allow these objects to enter the country free of duty and permit such of them as their owner pleases to be deposited in a fitting place as a perpetual memory of her graceful presence in the Capitol. Nothing could more firmly fix her name beside her father's and beside those of our other famous first American ladies.

For our part we think those gifts are simply priceless, and we refuse to abate a tael or a yen from the telegraphic estimate of their value. Still the chief constituents of their value lie not in their precious materials or cunning workmanship. Such personal associations dwarf the value even of gold or gems or artistry, and do so without adding a cent to their market value in the country of origin.

The President is not quite consistent. In defending the dismissal-on-the-spot order he argues that no man fit to be in the Cabinet would abuse the power conferred. But on the very next day he issues an order forbidding the Cabinet officers to give news to newspaper correspondents, or to be seen consorting with them; hereafter all news of Cabinet meetings will be given out by the faithful LOEB. That looks as if the President felt that he could not trust his Cabinet officers to talk. We should think the President's muzzle would chafe some of the faces upon which it has been strapped.

The revolt against Mr. GORMAN and his machine in Maryland has received an important recruit in Senator ISIDOR RAYNER. He denounces the amendment as placing in the hands of the registration officers the power to disfranchise 80,000 white voters in the City of Baltimore alone, and declares:

> The whole truth of the matter is that this amendment will effectuate one purpose, and one purpose alone, and that is to place in the hands of the "organization" the absolute control of the registration offices of this State. Every Democrat, therefore, who is in favor of continuing in this body the power that it has arrogated to itself in ths past will undoubtedly vote in favor of this amendment, and every Democrat who is opposed to the assumption of unlimitsd power upon the part of any dictator who assumes that the organization and the party are synonymous terms will oppose it.

Without naming Mr. GORMAN, Senator RAYNER makes it perfectly plain that he intends to fight that gentleman to the end. He could not do a better thing for Maryland or for his party in the State and in the Nation.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

"Honor" Among Students.

Many boyish peculiarities are prettily illustrated by the verge of the Columbia spohomores in their effort to save an unlucky three of their number from punishment as hazers. The curious thing which passes for "honor" among young males of the human species compels them to see as unendurable injustice the fact that ths suspended members of the class did nothing more or worse than was done by many others, or, at least, did nothing more or worse except that they allowed themselvss to bs caught in their sinning. Therefore havs those who escaped drawn up and presented to the Faculty a beautifully naive document setting forth, first, that the signers had a full share of the nefarious joys, and second—that they deserved punishment and were ready to take it? Oh, no—boy logic is of no such inconvenient straightness. Their "second" is that if the Faculty will conclude from the injustice of putting upon an unfortunate three a penalty earned by many that it should put the penalty upon none, the many will promise to do in futurs what they can to prevent repetitions of the offsnse. The clear, though of course unseen and unrealized, implication of this promiss is that if ths requested leniency is not shown ths preventive efforts will not be made and offenses will multiply—an implication not less impudent than obvious, and, for a logician, perhaps quite the most serious phass of the whole affair. But the boys didn't mean any such thing, nor did they sven suspect that, undsr ths noble generosity that enabled them to confess their guilt, there lay a reassuring confidence that there was safety for all in numbers—that the university authorities would find it both inconvenient and injudicious to suspend a considerable group of students for participation in proceedings, which, after all, did not entirely exhaust the possibilities of human depravity. They simply intended to do the right thing as they saw it and to buy mercy for their friends at such slight cost to themselves as the circumstances of the cass demanded. College professors are accustomed to handling complex little problems of this sort, and no doubt those of Columbia will work out a solution for this one.

A Strike for a Few Minutes.

That 700 men in a Michigan shipyard should have gone on strike for no greater grievance than that they were expected to work twenty minutes a week longer than their contract with their employer as they understood it demanded, will doubtless be made ths text for many lay sermons on the suicidal folly of "labor" and its mad readiness to disturb business on trivial provocation. And ths scoldings will be deserved, at least in the sense that men who limit ths work they will do for their pay with any such keen regard to the relation bstwsen service and present remuneration are most unlikely to accomplish what is called "getting on in the world," for they are setting themselves obstinately against all accepted notions and violating the ancient conventions ss to the rights of employers and the duties of the employed. It is not by this careful counting of minutes against pennies that the "self-made" men, who consider themselves and are considered by most of us such brilliant exemplsrs of success, arrived at their goal of millions to give away and other rather mors numerous millions to keep for their own uses. Without any exception they all kept their eyes from the clock as knocking-off hour approached, and, by doing as much as they could as long as thers was anything to be done, they sought to earn, not the day's or week's agreed wage, but the recognition that opened opportunity at first to greater wage, and then by one route or another to the larger profits that lie in paying wages to men less industrious or less able than themselves. Innumerable biographies sing the praises of these wiser ones, and each, directly or indirectly, turns the harsh frown or the pitying eye upon those who from fear of doing too much for the boss do too little for themselves and remain poor all their days. And yet, somehow, one cannot help remembering that if the disputed twenty minutes a week is too absurdly little for the men to make a fuss over, it is not a bit larger for the employer to insist on getting, and that, as a matter of fact, the traditional expectation ususily—by no means always—leads to a loss small only because it is divided among many, and to a gain that, taken in whole by one, is really of considerable size, particularly when it extends over a long period.

A Rebuke from an Expert.

Mr. IVINS, it seems, can be unintentionally amusing, as well as intentionally interesting, and, well developed as undoubtedly is his sense of humor, it occasionally fails him. One of the occasions was when, in what appeared to be entire seriousness, Mr. IVINS described Mr. JEROME as "an unnecessarily belligerent man," and warned him that he "could not treat mankind as a punching bag and then expect everyhody to fall down and worship him." That Mr. JEROME really is at times and places more combative than is needful will be admitted by most of his friends as well as by all of his enemies, but Mr. IVINS is not himself always so sweetly speaking and sweetly smiling after the manner of LALAGE that he should be the first to call Mr. JEROME'S attention to this fault, and some might say that he should be, if not the last, at least among them. He could easily get up-to-date information on this point, we think, by consulting not a few eminent Republicans whose Mayoralty candidats he is now supposed to be. And possibly Mr. JEROME doesn't expect to be worshipped by quite everybody and isn't doing his punching to that end. However that may be, he has managed to attract no small number of devoted followers who seem to be inspired with enthusiasm for his personality even more than for his work. Far be it from us to say that Mr. IVINS carries his own combativeness to excess. Even if he has hit most of the heads in sight during the past week, we do not at the moment recall any howl of agony or any half-suppressed "Ouch!" that did not come to the ear with a pleasing sound.

GEO. HAVEN PUTNAM'S REPLY.

To the Times's Strictures on the Citizens' Union.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In an article printed in your paper on the 17th inst., headed, "Mr. Ivins's Platform," the writer uses the following expression: "But the Citizens' Union has gone stark, staring mad."

This is but one of a number of more or less similar utterances which have appeared during the past few weeks on the editorial pags of THE TIMES. Soms of us who have done what we could to make the work of the Citizens' Union effective for the present campaign, and who hold to ths belief that the organization can be maintained and ought to be maintained for influencing better municipal government in campaigns to come, are naturally not a little concerned in reading such utterances from a paper whose influence and support for citizens' movements have in ths past been so valuable, and whose readers include a large portion of the constituency upon the support of which the Union has depended. While we have had occasion to note these sharp criticisms as to the action (or lack of action) on ths part of the Union, I do not recall reading in THE TIMES (or for that matter in any other journal) any practical suggestions as to what the Union might more wisely have done under the existing conditions in connection with the present municipal campaign.

Ths members of the Union have expressed themselves as in favor of a policy looking toward municipal ownership. It seems to them important that the demoralizing influence that has been increasingly exercised by certain corporstions through successive administrations of our city, and that hss been securing an increasing and an undue shars of the resources of the city, should be checked, controlled, and lessened.

It is the belief of the majority of the Citizens' Union members that this control can best be exercised under such system of municipal ownership as shall provide for short-term contracts and for a readjustment at the end of each term of the market value of the use of the franchiss. The majority of ths members are not in favor, at least under any conditions now existing, of the municipal operation of thess franchises. They believe that action in regard to ownership should be taken conservatively and with due regard to a wise limitation of ths indebtedness of the city.

They are averss to placing under the control of municipal administrations the larger powers and opportunities that would come to them through the use of the resources required for operating franchises, snd through the control of the great group of employes, who would, in connection with such operation, come under the direct management of the city officials. It is the belief of these members of the Union that we must make much larger progress than has as yet been made in the "civilizing" of our municipal administrations and in the securing of the continued control of the City Government for the interests, not of political-commercial gangs, but of the citizens as a whole, before such administrations can be intrusted with thess larger powers and these enormous resources. There is at least fair probability that the gang which has in the past put into power men like Devery, Oakley, and Gardiner will burden the city in the future with officials of a similar type. The City of New York ought not to run the risk of seeing a Devery in charge of its surface railroads or subways, or of seeing ths management of its gas plant put into the hands of a man of ths type of Oakley.

A group in the Union is in favor of a much more comprehensive and more immediate extension of the powers of ths city in regard to ownership and in regard to operation than the majority has thought wise. It was evident, however, at the conventions of the present Autumn that this group was in a minority, and it was not permitted to direct the policy of the Union.

The larger portion of this group is therefore at present supporting the candidacy of Hearst. It includes (in addition to some demagogues) a number of earnest, public-spirited citizens, who think that the gain to the citizens as a whole that can be depended upon through city operation is sufficient to offset the serious disadvantages of the candidacy of a man of the character of Hearst.

The Union having taken its stand in regard to a conservative course in this present question of city ownership, did what was practicable to secure, in cooperation with the Republican organization snd with such other organizations as were interested, an effective Fusion ticket.

The members of the Conference Committee took the ground that it was in order to present for this election to the voters of New York as candidate for Mayor a Democrat, as these voters, in large majority Democrats, had under three successive Citizens' movement been asked to support a Republican. They submitted as their recommendation the name of a Democrat, a citizen of excellent repute, and the value of whose service to the community had already been tested, Mr. Robert Grier Monroe.

In connection with this recommendation, thsy made the condition, which to all of us appeared an essential condition, that the Fusion ticket must contain the name for District Attorney of William Travers Jerome. The Republican conferees refused to accept the condition aa to the District Attorney and declined even to consider the name of Mr. Monroe. It seemed evident from their repeated postponements and evasions that they were not in earnest in the desire to place before the voters any Fusion ticket which had a chance of success.

The Republican Party in this city includes in its membership some of our best citizens. These citizens have, however, permitted the management of the organization to come into the hands of a set of political tricksters, fair representatives of the Odell machine, who are more interested in "peanut" politics and in dickering arrangements with Tammany than in securing good government for the city.

The Citizens' Union had, therefore, no alternative but to withdraw from the conference. Ths failure of the conference rendered it impossible for the Citizens' Union to shape a municipal ticket that had any prospect of success. It did not seem to the managers wise to apply to our backers for money with which to carry on a campaign simply as a protest.

It was decided that it was the better policy, as far as the general ticket was concerned, to reserve the force and the resources of the Union for action in future years, when it might prove practicable to secure the full co-operation of all the groups interested in good government.

We are not prepared to agree with certain of the writers in THE TIMES that the Tammany Mayor has given to New York "a good city Government." It seems probable that McClellan has done as well as was possible in view of his obligations to the Tammany organization and in view also of certain political ambitions the realization of which must depend upon retaining the continued support of this organization. An administration which is responsible, however, for such heads of departments as Hopper, Oakley, and Pallas, and which leaves the executive management of the police in the hands of a convicted misdoer like McAvoy, (whose influence may be considered as largely responsible for the increasing demoralization of the force,) an administration which has permitted the emasculation of the tenement-house system, created by De Forest, (a system which resulted in the saving of the lives of thousands of the children in the tenement district,) is not entitled to the name of "a good city Government."

Some improvement on Van Wyck was not so difficult, but the real purposes of ths present Tammany campaign are indicated when it presents on the ticket as the President of the Board of Aldermen, and as the probable next Mayor of ths city, an associate and protégé of the discredited Oakley. Mr. McClellan must be held responsibis for the character not only of those who have been managing the city departments under his administration, but of the men with whom he now permits his nams to be associated on the Tammany ticket. We are not prepared, therefore, under the circumstances, to give a vote which would express an approvsl of McClellan's administration of the use of his influence in the shaping of the next administration.

It was further decided, however, that the efforts of the Union should be concentrated upon the rs-election of Mr. Jerome, whose candidacy stands emphatically for good government and for citizens' action. The campsign committees of Mr. Jerome are made up practically of the membership of the previous campaign committees of the Citizens' Union, and the Union as a whole is committed to doing what may be practicsble to secure for the city the continued service of a man whose service has proved so important and so valuable, and who is oppossd by ths several machines simply becauss his service has been capsble, courageous, and without bias. It is, of course, possible that the decision of those who are responsible for the policy of the Union in regard either to action or to inaction may not have been wise, and that the outsiders who are now criticising what has been done and what has been left undone might have been able tbrough some other methods to secure a larger service for the community.

It would certainly be vsluable, however, if only as a suggestion for the policy for future years, to have a more specific statement of the blunders of the Union and of the ground on which a paper like THE TIMES, which is supposed to represent good citizenship, can use such a description of its action as that above quoted.

GEORGE HAVEN PUTNAM.

New York, Oct. 18, 1905.

Once upon a time a man much suspected of being insane was put upon the witness stand, and for one whole afternoon wss subjected to a ceaseless fire of questions put to him by counsel with a view to determine whether he was crazy or not. The questions had been suggested by expert and soulless alienists, but that witness answered every one of them promptly and with a simple lucidity that carried conviction of his sanity to the mind of every juror. Finally one of the alienists, who was sn old fox in such matters, suggested to counsel that he ask the witness if he could tell him who was the King of France. "Do you happen to remember," asked the lawyer blandly, "who is King of France at this present time?" "I am the rightful King of France," replied the witness tranquilly, "but I am kept off the throne by the mschinations of the Roman Catholic Church." And that settled it.

Mr. Putnam answers all the common test questions beautifully. But the grand question is, Why in the name of Bedlam, if the Citizens' Union has not gone stark, staring mad, is it altogether out of this electoral fight when a hardened old municipal reformer of its own kind, William M. Ivins, is running for Mayor? The Citizens' Union was organized specifically for municipal reform, yet in this campaign it is devoting itself exclusively to the District Attorneyship, which is not a municipal office. Mr. Putnam's excuse that the Union could do nothing with the Republicans because the Republican machine would not listen to reason cannot be accepted. If ths Citizens' Union, organized for municipal reform and to support sound principles of government, had not gone off on a crazy Socialistic chase after municipal ownsrship, as an ill-trained bird dog will sometimes tske up a rabbit's trail, it might have spoken in the preliminary campaign with sufficient force and authority to make the Republicans listen to resson. If the Union could not make up its mind to nominate Mayor McClellan or indorse his nomination, it ought beyond all doubt to be now marshaled among the supporters of ths Republican nominee. Although Mr. Ivins was a practical, efficient worker in the reform field long before the Union was organized, the Union gives him no support and apparently its only excuse is that he has been nominated by unreasonable and unregenerate Republicans.

You are one of those who will not serve God if the devil bids you.

A Word More About Angels.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

If ths subject of angels has not yet been barred by you from THE TIMES, permit me to offer a suggestion or two to those interested, especially John Gray Beach, who has a note in to-day's issue. The little bit of theology which I know, or think I know, is based largely on Martensen, late Bishop of Zeeland, Denmark. What he says of angels is, I think, generally accepted by scholars. So much for authority.

Angels are a distinct order of beings, they are not men nor were they ever such, and men will never become angels.

"What philosophy calls ideas, and mythology calls gods, receive in Revelation the name of angels." Angels must be represented to our minds as pure spirits, and not, like men, attached to bodies. But in trying to represent them to our eyes we must necessarily depict them in the only form possible, i. e., of persons.

Angels are sexless, neither male nor female, hence if we must needs picture them it makes no difference as to what sex is chosen as the medium. If the female form is the more suitable for the purpose let such be employed; no violence will be done to any truth—it is simply a question to be decided upon artistic grounds. The Scriptural references to Gabriel and Michael simply show that at the time the names were used the prevailing conception of the time attached masculinity to those particular messengers or angels. JAPANESE HONESTY.

An American Missionary Resents What He Calls a Prevalent Slander.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It would be difficult to find better evidence of the honesty of a people than that furnished in the clipping you published yesterday from The London Times setting forth the fact that less than 1 per cent. of the Japaness subscribers to the Encyclopsedia Britannica failed to pay their installments on the day they were due. That is certainly a remarkable showing. The article ought to have been in larger type so that it would have attracted more sttention, for no misrepresentation of any people has been more persistently circulated than that which impugns the honesty of the Japanese in matters of business. That glaring instances of dishonesty upon the part of Japanese can be cited is true enough, but these cases are no more glaring and no more common than in our own country or any other.

I have over and over heard the assertion made that the Japanese banks all employ a Chinaman to handis the cash, because they cannot trust their own people. The fact is that all foreign banks in Japan—American, British, Russian, &c.—employ a Chinaman for this purpose, whereas only a few Japanese banks do so. Yet this assertion is passed from one to another and believed. It is a good illustration of how slander is propagated. Ths fact of the matter is that both the Japanese and foreign banks employ Chinamen to handle cash because they ars so wonderfully accurate and rapid in that kind of work.

Out of many years' experience in Japan I have no hesitation in declaring that no people on earth have a higher sense of honor than the Japanese people.

A Chance to Rebuke the Bosses.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The editorial in this morning's issue of THE TIMES, "Mr. Jerome and the People," is most excellent, and I heartily indorse your strong advocacy of Mr. Jerome for election.

I am enrolled as a Democrat, and I sincerely wish that I could vote the straight ticket, but I am not a blind partisan, and while I shall vote for Mr. McClellan, I will not vote for the District Attorney nor for the Borough President named on that ticket. It is time that Mr. Murphy and Mr. McCarren learned that thers are enough independent voters in tbis city to frustrate their schemes when they place one good man at the head of the ticket with the hope of electing the others of doubtful character and ability on the strength of the influence he will exert in his own behalf.

You are doing a great service to the community by urging the election of such an excellent man as Mr. Jerome.

An Irish Girl's Advice.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Regarding that letter in your issue of Oct. 16 by "War Cry," the "English Irishman." I wish to say that personally I do not think much of any man who denies his country. The few Irishmen with whom I come in contact in business are far below the average type, but so far I have failed to meet one of the type of "War Cry" who has denied his country. I am an Irish girl myself, employed where I am the only Irish person, and am drawing a larger salary than any of the other female employes.

I do not deny my country, and I can say that I am highly respected by my fellow-employes. If "War Cry" would admit his being an Irishman he would be more highly respected than he probably is now by his fellow-workmen. M. O'SULLIVAN.

President's Anti-Railroad Campaign.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorials on Roosevelt's scheme of railroad rate regulation make it very plain that you think he is not competent to deal with the matter at all. A few years ago he was for "tariff reform," but was obliged to desist by a "sore leg" or "weak or overworked speaking tubes," but he had not then been nominated for the high office that he holds. And it was important not to offend the protected interests. It was lately announced that he would concentrate his "recommendations" to the regulation of railroad rates and let the tariff go untouched. There is need of tariff legislation, but Roosevelt stands pat. How much did "the good and the bad trusts" (a la Roosevelt) give to Cortelyou, the "Wiskinkie" of the Presidential candidate? D.

"Thon" the Word The Chronicle Wants

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The London Chronicle will find the composite pronoun it craves ready for use in the Standard Dictionary. It is "thon," a contraction of "that one." The inventor of this ingenious and desirable neutral pronoun is an Englewood gentleman, Charles Crozat Converse, LL. D., well known in musical circles as a talented composer, and to the general reader as a writer on many themes and in many styles. His pronoun exactly fills the wide demand for "a portmanteau word to express both sexes without specifying either," the felt need of which probably led THE TIMES to copy the appeal of its London contemporary.

Did Tammany Pull the Wires?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Would it not be interesting for the public generally to know what Tammany politicians pulled the wires that led to our weak-kneed Police Commissioner to degrade one of the few honest men he had on his force—Acting Capt. Eggers? I do not notice that one newspaper in this city makes any effort to find this out, at least no paper publishes this information. Is this because you cannot find it out, or are you all afraid to do it?

Historic Sandwich.

From The Springfield Republican.

The good work of marking historic places steadily spreads. The Village Improvement Society at Sandwich has appointed a committee to do this work there. The first white settlers on Cape Cod took up their abode in Sandwich and the first house of worship and the first mill on the Cape were also built there. It is also proposed to erect a monument over the grave of Edmund Freeman, the first settler, and his wife. These graves are now marked by two stones, resembling a saddle and a pillion, which were chosen by Mr. Freeman, who said to his sons: "The stones will serve to remind you of your parents as they rode to the house of worship, and of your duty to God."

LEADERS HELPING ODELL; IVINS GOING IT ALONE

Workers in Nine Districts Join Hands with Hearst Men

TO MAKE ASSEMBLY SAFE

Ivins Banner Up with Only His Name and No "Republican"—Low Praises Him.

The story of the alliances being made between the Republican district leaders and the district municipal ownership organizations on candidates for Assemblyman and Alderman, printed in THE NEW YORK TIMES on Sunday, received further confirmation yesterday from some of the best-known Republican district leaders.

They said that combinations between the Republican and Hearst forces on local tickets had been effected or definitely arranged for in these Assembly districts: Third, Fourth, Seventh, Eighth, Tenth, Twelfth, Fourteenth, Sixteenth, and Thirty-first. In every case, it was said, the Republican candidate for the Assembly either had or would be indorsed by the Hearst men. In some cases the Republican candidate for Alderman also had been indorsed; in other cases the Hearst candidate for Alderman.

Although the Republican district leaders who have been securing indorsements for their local candidates insist that they have acted on their own responsibility and without any understanding with the powers higher up in the organization, the fact that State Chairman Odell is to have the fight of his life in the contest over the Speakership and needs every Assemblyman he can get, was lost sight of by the politicians in accounting for the Republican-Hearst district alliances.

It was said in some quarters that since Mr. Ivins, the Republican candidate for Mayor, had declared he did not expect to consult with Mr. Odell in the campaign, Mr. Odell had decided to look out for his own interests to the exclusion of those of Mr. Ivins.

The paramount interest of Mr. Odell is to get control of the Assembly, for the leader who controls the next Assembly and elects the next Speaker in all human probability will control the next State Convention and nominate the Republican candidate for Governor.

When Mr. Ivins's attention was called last night to the combinations being effected by the Republican district leaders with the Hearst men he declared his unconcern about district politics and asserted his confidence in the good faith of the Republican leader toward his candidacy.

It is an interesting fact, although Mr. Ivins maintained last night that it was not significant, that, coincident with the spread of the information of the combinations made between Republican district leaders and the Hearst men, Mr. Ivins decided to have flung across Broadway to-morrow a banner with this device:

For Mayor,
WILLIAM M. IVINS.

The strangeness of the device lies in the fact that Mr. Ivins omits all reference to the fact that he is the Republican candidate for Mayor, and omits the names of his Republican associates on the ticket. When some of the district leaders learned of the nature of the banner that Mr. Ivins had decided to display in front of his headquarters in the Hotel Breslin, they remarked that it was evidently the intention of Mr. Ivins to "go it alone" in the campaign, and they expressed the belief that Mr. Ivins had been moved to his course by the attitude which many of the leaders had taken toward his candidacy in effecting alliances with the Hearst forces on their local tickets. Mr. Ivins was seen last night at his headquarters and asked what he thought of the Republican-Hearst district combinations. He said:

"I have supreme confidence in the complete good faith of every Republican leader. I know every one of them. I am willing to take all the chances of that good faith. It is an old policy here to weaken a man's confidence in his chances by saying that his friends are selling him out. I may remark that I have never been sold out by a friend in my life, and I do not believe that I will be sold out now."

"Don't you consider that such combinations will prove prejudicial to your candidacy?"

"I have no reason for any belief in the matter. In the first place, I have no knowledge of the fact; in the next place, it is entirely uninteresting to me, and in the third place, I have not got time to inquire into other people's business. I am minding my own. I have infinitely more fear of cowardice in this election than I have of cunning."

"Why will the fact that you are the Republican candidate for Mayor be omitted from the banner which you will have put up to-morrow in front of your headquarters?"

"I regard myself as the candidate of the people, and I want the vote of every man, Democrat or Republican, who feels that I am worthy of that vote. I am appealing to the people on the ground of experience, capacity, and willingness to do what I mean and what is right in the event of my election. I was asked to-day if I were willing to prophesy the result.

"I am neither a prophet nor the son of a prophet, and I don't know the order we are coming out, but I am coming out at the head of the list. I feel just as confident of my election as I do of going to bed to-night. One of the reasons for my confidence is that Mr. Hearst is going to divide Tammany Hall, but without chance of election himself.

"When Mr. Hearst takes the honest element out of Tammany Hall the remnant will not be able to elect anybody. There are honest men who have been misled year after year into voting for Tammany Hall, because Tammany Hall had put up figureheads who succeeded in accomplishing nothing after the election."

Low Writes to Ivins.

Mr. Ivins was much gratified yesterday by the receipt of this letter from ex-Mayor Seth Low:

I congratulate you upon the opportunity that has come to you to show that the citizenship of the City of New York is neither supine nor content with such an administration of its affairs as Tammany Hall can give. You and I know, and every one knows who knows anything of what has gone on under the surface, that the only difference between the Tammany Hall of to-day and the Tammany Hall that has disgraced the city so often in the past is that to-day it is wearing a more attractive mask. The same process of deterioration is going on in every department that always marks the Tammany regime, and the same enrichment of political leaders, by indirection, at the public expense is taking place. Tammany's role as a governmental agent is periodically to reduce the city to a desperate strait; then to suffer defeat, and to return to power to carry on the city once more upon the impetus given to the city during its absence from power.

To-day Tammany is boasting of the public schools built during the last two years; of the city's progress toward municipal ownership; of the city's electrical plant, and the provision made for an enlarged water supply.

The schools have been built with appropriations made when Tammany was out of power.

The Staten Island Ferry was municipalized by its predecessors, and two years have scarcely sufficed to enable Tammany to get a single boat running after all the preliminaries were arranged.

The Tammany Commissioner of Water Supply surrendered the city's vantage ground in relation to both gas and electricity, and a public uprising was necessary to compel the administration to adopt the policy of its predecessor, both as to fighting the gas monopoly and as to the erection of a city electrical plant. The administration lost a year in dealing with the water question, and finally had to throw overboard the plans of its own department, because absurd and inadequate, and take those made ready to its hand by the administration that preceded it. If it has made one single progressive step during these two years on its own initiative, it would be a public service if it were pointed out.

The Tammany Water Commissioner who betrayed the city's interests, and who conspicuously revealed his inefficiency, remains in office by grace of the very Mayor who has been obliged to disown his actions and who turned down his plans, while the Tammany candidate for President of the Board of Aldermen, who will become Mayor if Mayor McClellan should die or be elected to another office, in the event of his re-election, lauds the same official as his political leader and model.

It is passing strange that the City of New York should be so blind to these things, and you are doing public service of the highest order in compelling the city, if it is to follow such leadership, to do it with its eyes open. Every one who knows you knows that you will bring to the service of the city, if elected, absolute independence of judgment and an equipment of experience equalled by very few.

Mayor Hewitt, after two years of experience, said that no one could be Mayor by Grace of Tammany Hall and be such a Mayor as he ought to be. What Mayor Hewitt could not do Mayor McClellan cannot.

For twenty years and longer the city has been struggling to secure good government on its merits, absolutely independent of National political party considerations. There is no doubt that, in this campaign, you stand for this principle, and that you deserve the hearty support of all who believe in it.

William Halpin, President of the Republican County Committee, made his first call at the headquarters of Mr. Ivins last night. The absence of Republican workers from the headquarters of the candidate has been a subject of remark.

Ex-Senator Slater joined the force at the Ivins headquarters yesterday and will have charge of the speakers' bureau.

IVINISMS.

Yesterday's Cup of Good Things Said by a Live Candidate.

I have not seen or heard from Mr. Odell to-day or any day for the last twelve years. I don't expect to see or hear from him during my campaign.

It is an old policy here to weaken a man's confidence in his chances by saying that his own friends are selling him out.

I have infinitely more fear of cowardice in this election than I have of cunning.

When Mr. Hearst takes the honest element out of Tammany Hall, the remnant will not be able to elect anybody.

I will not wait for Mayor McClellan to answer my letter. I will write him another. He can't elude me by silence.

PLATT BALKED AT 13.

And Now There's No Floor 13 and No Room 13 at the Gotham.

There will be no floors numbered thirteen in the new skyscraper hotels. They must change their numerical base. The Gotham, Fifty-fifth Street and Fifth Avenue, is the pioneer in the anti-thirteen crusade. The others will follow. When the Gotham was opened a few weeks ago it had a floor bearing the unlucky numeral, but it has one no more. It is now fourteen, impervious to superstition and feared by none.

Senator Thomas C. Platt of New York was one of the first guests to register at the Gotham. When he entered the hotel he was met by its manager, Frank V. Bennett, who ministered personally to Mr. Platt's wants.

"Senator," he said, as he turned the register for Mr. Platt to inscribe, "I'll give you a suite on Floor 13."

Mr. Platt interrupted his registration long enough to look up and smile knowingly. He said nothing, but there was a world of wisdom in his smile.

"Oh, yes, certainly," interposed Mr. Bennett, perceiving the predicament, for Mr. Platt's inquiring expression told the story, "I'll put you on Floor 12." Mr. Platt didn't occupy rooms on Floor 13.

The next guest to register was W. B. Hibbs, a Washington broker.

"Room 1,313, Mr. Hibbs," said Mr. Bennett.

"Mr. Bennett," said the broker, "you ought to know better. Cut it out; likewise cut Floor 13 out. Put it on the roof, in the cellar, take it to the morgue, anywhere."

The Gotham manager accepted the advice, and there is no longer a Floor 13 in the house.

THREATS AGAINST BERNHARDT

Cubans May Retaliate for Her Reported Opinion of Them.

Unless Sarah Bernhardt denies that she once made a statement to the effect that Cubans are but half-civilized negroes who wear evening suits, it may not be safe for her to make a trip to Havana on her tour this season.

On a previous tour in this country, after having played a successful engagement in principal Cuban cities, Mme. Bernhardt talked for publication about her opinion of the Cubans. The declaration ascribed to her was cabled to Cuba at once, and caused no end of excitement.

Mme. Bernhardt's managers, the Shuberts and W. F. Connor, early in the year made arrangements for a Cuban tour. Manager Guiterez of the Tacon Theatre in Havana was addressed, but did not answer the letter. An agreement was made after a delay.

Yesterday the managers received word that the posters announcing Mme. Bernhardt's coming had been angrily torn down in Havana, and threats had been made that the actress would not fare well if she visited the city. The Shuberts cabled to Paris for Mme. Bernhardt to deny that she ever made the insulting remark. The decision as regards her tour of Cuba will rest on her reply.

"WIZARD" MAY GO TO LONDON

Liebler-Frohman Plan to Take American Cast Over Sea.

George C. Tyler of the firm of Liebler & Co. sails to-day on the Deutschland for Europe to arrange the future engagements for two of the Lieblers' important stars, Ellis Jeffreys and Eleanor Robson. In the production of Alfred Sutro's new comedy, "The Fascinating Mr. Vandervelt," the Lieblers will be associated with Charles Frohman, this being the first time that the two theatrical firms have joined interests in a big venture.

Miss Jeffreys's new play probably will have its first presentation at a Frohman theatre in London. At the end of the season Mr. Tyler and Mr. Frohman will bring the entire production intact to New York, where it will again be placed in one of Mr. Frohman's houses. In regard to the play, the managers are enthusiastic. Mr. Tyler declares it will be an epoch maker.

For Miss Robson, Mr. Tyler hopes to close a deal with a playwright of international renown for a manuscript already completed. Should this be obtained, the play will be put on while Miss Robson is at Daly's Theatre this year, following the new Clyde Fitch play.

Arrangements have been made with the estate of the late Fred R. Hamlin and with Julian Mitchell to present "The Wizard of Oz" in London if bookings can be obtained, with the American cast complete, including Montgomery and Stone, the chorus, scenery, and effects.

On Mr. Tyler's return Elsie Janis will be starred in the new play being written for her under the management of the Lieblers, as has been announced.

SUES OSCAR HAMMERSTEIN.

Charles Frohman Claims American Rights in Karno Pantomime Co.

Charles Frohman, through his attorney, Abraham Hummell, has begun proceedings to restrain Oscar Hammerstein from assuming the American rights in the Fred Karno pantomime company, now playing at the Victoria. Mr. Frohman contends that these rights belong to him.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

A new play-producing theatrical company was formed yesterday under the name of the Clark & Converse Company. Its first play to be put on will be "The Gingerbread Man," by Frederic Ranken and A. Baldwin Sloane. It will be put on in about five weeks at a Broadway theatre. Arthur J. Clark, the senior member of the firm, has been a company manager for Henry W. Savage for several years.

Mme. Modjeska and her husband, Count Bozenta, attended the performance of "Zira" at the Princess Theatre last evening. After the third act, in which Margaret Anglin does some remarkable work, Mme. Modjeska went behind the scenes and congratulated Miss Anglin.

The first full rehearsal of the fifteen Spanish dancing girls who have been brought over from Madrid by C. Malden-Ercoles for the production of "The White Cat" was held yesterday afternoon on the New York Roof. The girls present all the principle dances of Spain, and they are all examples of Spanish types.

HINDOO ROMANCE TAKES HIPPODROME STAGE

Real Princess and Rescuer Narrowly Escape Horses' Hoofs.

KILLER KHAN TAKES A PLUNGE

Girl's Abductor, His Relatives, and Their Caravans Go Down to Stage Death After Defeat.

Realistic Oriental settings, including a mountain path in the wilds of India, which did not look at all like Central Park, proved too much for a New York horse and nearly caused the upsetting of the plans of Princess Sopiyowlat and her favored lover who had rescued her from abductors, at the Hippodrome last night. It was the first presentation of the "Romance of a Hindu Princess," the East Indian dramatic spectacle, which is to replace "The Raiders" on the boards of the big Thompson & Dundy playhouse.

The accident, which for a time seemed to threaten disaster to the leading characters, came at the end of the second scene which closes the play. Frightened by the booming of the guns of the bewhiskered Sihke who rushed to the defense of the Princess, the white horse threw Hira Lal as he was starting up the mountain path bearing the Princess in his arms. The lovers fell amid the horses of their retainers and were apparently being trampled.

The young Oriental rose up smiling, however. Hira Lal started to fight his way up on foot, while the Princess skipped up the mountain path behind him unattended.

The audience had another scare thinking that a lot of elephants were drowning. The hydraulic machinery had caused trouble, and made a long delay between the scenes. When a lot of the animals were in the tank, a hitch occurred, and attendants, rushing to the side, held up the trunks of the elephants above water. In a few seconds the floor of the tank was raised to the level of the stage, and the elephants walked off with a final trumpeting to the audience.

The first scene of the new spectacle represents the exterior of the palace of Saujaolie, Emperor of Pabeng, on a fête day. Picturesquely attired nautch girls flit across the stage jingling bangles and sequins as they go. Hindus with ferocious black whiskers and enormous turbans stalk gloomily to and fro.

Suddenly the dances cease, and an Indian officer comes on waving the beggars and dancers aside.

"Make way! Make way!" he cries, "for the noble Princess Sopiyowlae, the Protector of the Poor."

The Princess is borne in upon a royal palanquin carried by eight slaves and surrounded by a large retinue of fan-bearers, fly-chasers, and other necessary adjuncts to an Indian Princess. Killer Khan, a Manri Chief whom the Princess has rejected, kneels at her feet and makes a final appeal for her love. She scorns him and he swears by all the gods to be avenged.

Hira Lal, the favored lover, appears on the scene. He has heavier whiskers than his rival, which has probably won the Princess's admiration.

Horns and cymbals are heard. The natives abase themselves until their foreheads touch the stage as they salaam to the great Indian Emperor who enters, riding upon an elephant with his guard of warriors mounted on elephants, camels, and milk-white steeds, all in Oriental trappings.

When the Emperor learns from his father that his daughter loves Hira Lal he dismounts from the silver-mounted howdah on the back of the royal elephant and blesses the young couple. At the Emperor's command the dancing girls, beggars, fakirs, turkey rhubarb merchants, Mahouts, and pilgrims of all kinds make merry to celebrate the betrothal of their Princess. Killer Khan and his band of Indian warriors stand aside and hold a council of war. Then he dispatches them north, east, west, and south to bring in all his warriors, Mahouts, war elephants, camels, and horses, to make an attack on the palace at midnight and abduct the Princess.

In the midst of the dance and song shots are heard. The sentries on the ramparts give the alarm, and Killer Khan rushes on, at the head of his army, mounted upon a tall elephant, which enables him to step into the Princess's apartments without ascending the staircase. For a few seconds the stage is full of whiskered Hindoos clad in embroidered raiment, who blaze away at each other with intense zeal. The faithful retainers are beaten down, and Killer Khan seizes the Princess and carries her away on his elephant.

The Emperor, who is distinguished by pale blue whiskers, weeps distractedly for his daughter, and then starts off in pursuit of the abductor.

The second scene, which depicts a camp in the mountains, drew forth several rounds of applause. The captive Princess is seen to the left, lying in a hut made of shawls, while the elephants, camels, and Indian warriors lie in picturesque confusion on the mountainside. Sentries pace up and down on the mountain summit looking out for their pursuers.

The pursuers come in due time over the hills and valleys with a rush and carry everything before them. The Princess is carried off by her lover, and Killer Khan, driven to despair, plunges into the lake on his favorite elephant, followed by his faithful retainers.

Claire Heliot and her lions, Louise and Robert Cottrell, the daring bareback riders, and Marceline, the droll clown, were the important features of the earlier part of the programme. The house was filled with an enthusiastic audience, among whom were John W. Gates, Judge Gildersleeve, Fire Commissioner Hayes, Charles A. Marshall, owner of the schooner Atlantic, and others.

FOOD.

COFFEE NEURALGIA

Leaves When You Quit and Use Postum.

A lady who unconsciously drifted into nervous prostration brought on by coffee says:

"I have been a coffee drinker all my life and used it regularly, three times a day.

"A year or two ago I became subject to nervous neuralgia, attacks of nervous headache and general nervous prostration, which not only incapacitated me for doing my housework, but frequently made it necessary for me to remain in a dark room for two or three days at a time.

"I employed several good doctors, one after the other, but none of them was able to give me permanent relief.

"Eight months ago a friend suggested that perhaps coffee was the cause of my troubles, and that I try Postum Food Coffee and give up the old kind. I am glad I took her advice, for my health has been entirely restored. I have no more neuralgia, nor have I had one solitary headache in all these eight months. No more of my days are wasted in solitary confinement in a dark room. I do all my own work with ease. The flesh that I lost during the years of my nervous prostration has come back to me during these months, and I am once more a happy, healthy woman. I inclose a list of names of friends who can vouch for the truth of the statement." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason.

Ten days' trial leaving off coffee and using Postum is sufficient. All grocers.

JOLT FOR ELEVATED TRAIN.

It Hits Bag of Iron Which Fell on the Track.

Passengers on a northbound Sixth Avenue elevated train were alarmed last night when about 100 feet above the 104th Street station the train jolted violently and came to a standstill. The passengers were thrown from their seats by the shock.

Investigation showed that the train had hit a bag of iron junk which lay across the track. It had been dislodged from a pile between the tracks by the vibration of passing trains. Repairs have been going on at that point. The junk was removed and the train proceeded. It was thought for a few minutes that the front car had been derailed.

AUSTIN'S TRIBUTE TO NELSON.

Poet Laureate Writes a Poem for the Trafalgar Centennial.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES
Special Cable. Copyright, 1905.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—The feature of The Times's Trafalgar centennial number, to be published to-morrow, will be a poem by the Poet Laureate, Alfred Austin, entitled "Wardens of the Wave." It reads:

Not to exult in braggart vein
Over our gallant foes,
Nor boast of victories on the main
Which Heaven alone bestows.
Vainglorious clarion, clamorous drum,
For which the vulgar crave—
Not these, not any such become
The wardens of the wave.

No, but when slumbering war-hounds wake
To one's last gasp of breath,
Face combat for one's country's sake
With male disdain of death.
'Twas thus did Nelson live, did die,
Far from his land and home,
Making his roof of stormswept sky,
His pillow of the foam.

And, if to-day our race recall
His last triumphant doom,
Place wreaths on his unfading pall,
And flowers about his tomb,
'Tis to remind us still to keep
Aggression's lust in awe,
And, with dominion of the deep,
Guard freedom, peace, and law.

Nor yet alone upon the waves
That sentinel our shore,
Service that disciplines, not enslaves,
Should rue us as of yore;
So that our island citadel
May tranquilly respond,
With the clear signal, All is well,
To every sea beyond.

LYMAN BLOOMINGDALE'S WILL

Widow and Children Share Estate and May Continue the Business.

The will of Lyman G. Bloomingdale, who died at Elberon, N. J., last Friday, was filed for probate in the Surrogates' office yesterday. There were three codicils attached to the will, the last of which was dated ten days before Mr. Bloomingdale's death. The will itself bears the date of May 27, 1904.

The testator's son, Samuel J. Bloomingdale, is named as his successor as patron in perpetuity of the Metropolitan Museum of Art. He is also to receive an absolute bequest of $100,000. The widow, Hattie Bloomingdale, is to receive $100,000, with the furniture of their home and all her husband's horses and carriages. The widow is also to receive two-sixths of the residuary estate. The son Samuel J. Bloomingdale is to get a one-sixth share of the residuary estate. One-sixth is to go to the son Irving I. Bloomingdale, and one-sixth to the son Hiram C. Bloomingdale.

The remaining sixth share of the residuary estate is to be divided into two shares, one of which is to go to the testator's daughter, Corinne Poppen, absolutely, and the other to be placed in trust for her benefit, the income from this trust fund to be paid to her annually until she attains the age of thirty years. Then if the trustees deem it prudent they may turn over the principal to her. In his lifetime the testator declares he advanced for his daughter's benefit $143,349.09. This is to be charged against the share payable to her at the time of the testator's death.

The trustees and executors named under the will, the widow and three sons, are empowered to continue Mr. Bloomingdale's business for a period of not to exceed five years, as they may deem judicious. The sons are requested to acquire the business if possible, and if they do so the executors are empowered to invest funds of the estate in the business.

The value of the estate is not given.

History Held Not Worth Price.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Oct. 18.—The publishers of a four-volume history of Cornell University, the publication of which was directed by Prof. Hewitt, were to-day defeated in a suit they brought for the purchase price of the volume against K. L. Wu, an imperial Chinese student. Wu's defense was that the history was so full of errors that it was worthless.

Mrs. Lucy Sexton of 97 Second Street, Brooklyn, who was 100 years old two months ago, was found in the yard there yesterday morning, her skull fractured and with internal injuries. Her physician says she cannot live. She has long been a sufferer from asthma, and when thus attacked would seek air to get relief.

From Refugee to Ambassador

Who was it that, fleeing from a political prison in his own country, was sent back to Europe by his adopted country, America, as ambassador to one of the old aristocratic courts?

That is one of the intensely interesting events in the Autobiography of Carl Schurz which begins in the November McCLURE'S.

HEARST AND COLER IN BROOKLYN TO-NIGHT

"Remember Kishineff" a New Issue in the Campaign.

MAY ORGANIZE SURVIVORS

But Tammany Isn't Frightened—They Can't Vote—Republicans Enroll for Municipal Ownership

William Randolph Hearst, candidate for Mayor on the Municipal Ownership ticket will open his campaign in Brooklyn to-night when he will address three meetings in the Williamsburg district. Ex-Controller Bird S. Coler, candidate for Borough President in Brooklyn on the Hearst ticket, will speak at all three meetings.

The Hearst managers are putting forth a strong effort to capture a big vote in Brooklyn. They expect to accomplish this partly by using Mr. Coler, who is popular there, as a bait to catch the independent Democratic voters who have been at outs with the McCarren machine. Mr. Hearst's managers have planned to make his invasion of Brooklyn as spectacular as possible. The party will start out from the Hoffman House to-night in seven automobiles and cross the Williamsburg Bridge. Beyond the East River his Brooklyn leaders will do the rest with torch-light parades and plenty of red fire.

News was received yesterday at the Hoffman House headquarters of a landslide for Hearst in the Brownsville district of Brooklyn. It was announced that the Democratic Club of the Twenty-first Assembly District there, the regular Tammany organization, had taken official action to support the Hearst ticket, and that Joseph Falk, a real estate dealer of 1,712 Pitkin Avenue had been nominated for Alderman, and Alexander S. Rosenthal, formerly United States Consul to Leghorn, Italy, for Justice of the Municipal Court on the Municipal Ownership ticket.

It was learned yesterday that the Hearst managers are trying to get under way a movement to organize the survivors of the Kishineff massacre who became fugitives and at present live in this city. There is a large colony of these in the Brownsville district of Brooklyn and another in the Bronx. Adopting as their slogan, "Remember Kishineff!" the Hearst organizers have asked all the survivors to rally to the Hearst banner. As the massacre occurred only a couple of years ago, none of the Kishineff fugitives have the right to vote, and Tammany men who heard of the movement yesterday regarded it as a joke.

The appearance of Hearst as a Mayoralty candidate is responsible for a big row within the Socialist Party. A Socialist leader said yesterday that at a meeting held last Friday in Brooklyn one of the largest Socialist organizations in that borough came near being disrupted because some of the younger element were in favor of the organization coming out for Hearst and the Municipal Ownership ticket, while the dyed-in-the-wool Socialists are uniformly against Hearst and all he stands for. The matter was not settled and will be brought up again at a meeting to be held to-morrow.

The Hearst Republicans, under the leadership of William Graham Brown, who was the right-hand man of the late William Brookfield in his independent Republican movement, opened headquarters yesterday at 32 West Twenty-third Street. Nearly 1,000 Republican voters pledged to support the Hearst ticket were enrolled at the new headquarters.

Calvin Tomkins, Chairman of the Municipal Art Commission, wrote to ex-Senator Ford yesterday pledging his support to Mr. Hearst. He said that as the campaign progressed municipal ownership would be indorsed by all the parties, and that the only issue would be the question of good faith on the part of the candidates.

The Finance Committee of the Municipal Ownership League met yesterday afternoon and issued an appeal for funds.

PEDDLERS WARN THE MAYOR.

Demand That "Our Beloved Candidate" Give Quickly All They Want.

J. M. Benjamin, with three others representing the Citizen Peddlers' Association, left at the Mayor's office yesterday a petition to which they asked an answer before Monday.

The petition, addressed to "Mayor McClellan, our beloved and indorsed candidate," asks that peddlers' licenses in future be issued only to citizens of the United States; that markets for peddlers be established, and that until such markets are built the peddlers be left "in peace by the police and other departments."

Secretary Hassett promised to submit the petition to the Mayor.

"Tell him to act at once," said Benjamin. "The quicker he does something the better."

"What does that mean?" asked Hassett.

"Well, if the Mayor won't look after our interests we must take our activities elsewhere."

"I thought you said there were no politics in your petition?"

"There are no politics," replied Benjamin, "but every man has to look out for himself."

MR. WULFF IS NOT MISSING.

He Says the Curb Can Get Him as Easily as American Lacing Stock.

If any one in the curb market wants to find Mr. Wulff, promoter of the American Lacing Company, he is right here in town, and can easily be discovered. Mr. Wulff himself came to THE NEW YORK TIMES office last night to say so. He also said:

"I have not been out of the city for six months." As to his contract with Arturo Fonts of 11 Broadway, by which he is alleged to have engaged to sell 7,000 shares of the company's stock for $5 a share, (par value $25,) on account of which Mr. Fonts has paid $500, Mr. Wulff said: "That is an involved legal matter."

NO POOL, SAYS HOADLEY.

Bookkeeper's Entries Errors—Shouting That Woke His Brother Joseph.

George W. Hoadley, brother of Joseph H. Hoadley, went on the witness stand in the Supreme Court yesterday and told of his transactions with Cyrus Field Judson in International Power Company stock. In the suit brought against Joseph H. Hoadley and Joseph Leiter by Franklin, Soott & Co., the defendants deny that they were interested in the International Power pool with Judson when the Power stock crash came. The plaintiffs, who were the brokers operating in the stock, lost $65,800 in handling the account known as the "Judson Special Account." This they allege was the pool account.

Hoadley testified that his brother had simply lent Power stock to Judson, and was not in a pool with Judson when the crash came.

The day after the crash, Hoadley said, he went to his brother's apartments in the Chelsea. Joseph Hoadley was still in bed. Judson soon came in. The witness said he spoke to Judson about going to certain banks to raise money, whereupon Judson declared:

"It's no use going, George. I've used up all of the collateral."

Hoadley asked Judson what he meant. Then Judson said, according to the witness, that he had used up all of the collateral, and did not have anything left. Hoadley said that he became so angry and shouted so loudly that his brother woke and came out in his bathrobe to inquire what the row was about. Joseph suggested that they get an attorney to settle any dispute that was on over collateral. George testified that he himself said:

"You don't need an attorney. You need a Sheriff."

They talked things over, however. Judson admitted having lost $400,000 of Joseph Hoadley's stock and $600,000 of Joseph Hoadley's cash. The Hoadleys then took possession of Judson's offices.

The witness said he had never heard of the pool which the plaintiffs assert existed at the time. Then counsel for the plaintiffs produced a book labeled "Ledger No. 1—C. F. Judson Pool Account." Hoadley said that this should have been labeled Judson account, and that it was a mistake made by their bookkeeper, Miss Franklin. He gave a similar answer in reference to other books labeled "C. F. Judson—Old Pool" and "C. F. Judson—New Pool."

The trial will be continued to-day.

RUSH TO RESCUE JEROME.

An Early Morning Murder Cry Due to "Frenchy's" Morphine.

Somebody in the Criminal Courts Building yesterday morning cried out that somebody else was "trying to murder Jerome." Back of the trouble was a morphine-inspired dream of one Jacob Meyer, generally known as "Frenchy," who was once a witness against Capt. Herlihy when the District Attorney was endeavoring to put that officer and Inspector Cross off the force.

Janitor Coppers was at his breakfast, and the courts and offices had not opened. Suddenly there was a violent pounding on the third floor, and cries of "Murder! Jerome!" filled the air.

Coppers rushed into the hallway leading to the District Attorney's office and found a shaggy and ragged man whom he recognized as "Frenchy" on his knees pounding on the closed door of the anteroom to Mr. Jerome's office.

"Just let me at him! Jerome! Jerome! I'll murder him!"

Coppers grabbed the man, but "Frenchy" escaped, yelling as he ran downstairs. Two flights down Coppers was joined by Policeman McCartney and an elevator attendant named Hoffman. The three at last led "Frenchy" captive into the Tombs Court, where Magistrate Moss was just taking the bench. The prisoner's clothes yielded a bottle of morphine.

"Oh, it's just dope," he said when arraigned. "I've been hitting it up some days. No, I didn't want to do anything to Jerome. He's done nothing to me but played square, but others—"

"Blackwell's Island will be a fine Wintering place for you," said Magistrate Moss. "Six months."

SAYS MR. ROOSEVELT LEADS THE ADVERTISERS

Charles Emory Smith to the Association of "Ad" Men.

POINTERS FROM JOB HEDGES

The Advertiser Bets on What He Hopes Some Think He Is—Meeting Ends with a Dinner.

The second annual convention of the International Advertising Association wound up last night with a banquet at the Waldorf-Astoria, where the association was in session for two days. Job E. Hedges was the toastmaster. He said he was glad of it because he wanted a chance to get even with certain persons, and he was glad to be in a place where a lawyer might learn how to advertise.

"This is the night of my revenge," said Mr. Hedges. "Toastmasters have no sentiment, and I can prove it. They talk too long. No matter if we listen to speakers from San Francisco and Philadelphia, I speak before and after each one of them. Two men have disappointed us, and I am going to deliver their speeches for them. I've read 'em both; they're fair. Mr. Beck says:

"'For the last two days I have had influenza. I spent a few houre in my office, but that left me very weak, and I have to appear before the insurance investigation committee to-morrow.' Beck sneezed before the committee yesterday.

"Mr. Ridgeway says: 'I am not physically able to attend the dinner. I am burning up with fever now.'

"This advertising art is quite an art," continued Mr. Hedges. "I have given some thought to it myself. It is the expression of the consciouenes of an interior worth. The advertiser bets on the credulity of the public. He bets on what he hopes some one thinks he is.

"My friend, Charles Emory Smith, comes over from Philadelphia to advertise his town. It needs it! They sit up at night over there watching each other. They do not debate on what shall be done with what they have got, but what shall be the ratio of division. It is not a question of what to do, but what shall be done with it. This question comes up in Philadelphia at least once in every ten years.

"Now, Mr. Smith will tell about this Cabinet business; he will tell about the work done; he will put himself aside and immolate himself for his country's good. He will deliver a panygeric on the American flag; I've heard it seven times already, and it's always good."

"Im very glad that I did not send a letter to the toastmaster," said Mr. Smith in response. "It was hard for me to be present, but still harder to be absent. Mr. Hedges has availed himself of the preferred position, that is, he has reserved for himself the right to speak before and after every one else. He has the last word.

"I am glad to come here, even from Philadelphia. It is true that we sit up all night there. Isn't that enough to make a man famous, to sit up all night? I am glad to come from Philadelphia and meet other advertisers.

"The newspaper is a philanthropic institution, but its prosperity rests entirely with the advertiser. It is Liberty holding aloft the torch to enlighten the world.

"Advertising, to be effective, must be iterated, iterated, and reiterated, and right here I shall say that the very best advertiser in all the world is Theodore Roosevelt. He is the best in the hunting path or on the tennis court. He grasps the broadest and widest policies. He is always in the best position to put our country on a broad and solid basis. He is the best politician in the world because he puts the best thought forward in all the land.

"He is the best diplomatist, because he seizes the best moment to bring the warring nations at the feet of this Nation to secure peace.

"Mr. Toastmaster, you said I came here to advertise Philadelphia," continued Mr. Smith. "I will tell you what is going on in our town of public interest. Every newspaper with the exception of one is advocating certain municipal reforms, and that one paper is having from one-half to a page of advertising matter printed in the other papers every day advocating the principles it stands for.

"It requires peculiar skill to advertise. The great art is in the presentation of the matter. Thousands of dollars might better have been poured in the Delaware River than expended in this advertising that I have referred to."

"Advertising in Philadelphia papers does not cut any ice, apparently," said Mr. Hedges in response. "We will confine ourselves to New York newspapers. Mr. John McNaught of The San Francisco Call will now tell us what New York is and what San Francisco ought to be."

"Mr. Roosevelt gets his advertising free," said McNaught. "He knows how to do it, but it is better to pay for it at space rates."

Mr. McNaught then besought everyone to go West, and described San Francisco as the city of "a hundred loves, a thousand beauties, and innumerable joys."

Congressman Samuel L. Powers of Boston, who arrived late and was accused by the toastmaster of changing his clothes in a day coach, made a speech, in which he declared that Gov. Douglas got a plurality of 85,000 because of systematic advertising for years.

Several papers were read at the convention yesterday dealing with the question of advertising from every point of view.

These officers were elected for the ensuing year: T. W. Cassidy, President; Delavan Smith, First Vice President; Barney Link, Second Vice President; John L. Mahin, Third Vice President; Winslow Mallory, Treasurer, and Thomas Bolmar, Secretary.

MR. SAGE LOST $91,079.

But the Financier Now Gets a Judgment for $108,862.33.

Russell Sage obtained a judgment yesterday in the Supreme Court for $108,862.33 against William A. Boland, Frederick Cocheu, Daniel L. Lewis, H. W. Hedenberg, Patrick H. Flynn, and John McCarty on a claim for $100,000, the face of a note made by Boland on Nov. 1, 1902, the other defendants guaranteeing the payment of the note.

As security for the payment of the note there were deposited with Mr. Sage 108 first mortgage $1,000 bonds of the Jackson and Ann Arbor Railway Company. After the note had gone to protest the collateral given by Boland and the others was sold in March last, but only $9,000 was realized from the sale. The expenses of the sale brought the amount down to $8,921. The interest on the claim amounted to $17,783.33.

Several of the persons named as defendants did not appear to defend the action, and Justice Leventritt directed the jury to return a verdict for the full amount claimed.

KILLED BY AN ELEVATOR.

Woman in Car at the St. Hubert Knew Nothing of Man's Death.

Daniel Sweeney, a porter in the St. Hubert apartment house at 122 West Fifty-seventh Street, was crushed to death by the passenger elevator there yesterday afternoon.

Sweeney, who was a new employe, was sent to relieve the regular freight elevator man, and was taking some baggage to the top floor, when the car stuck at the seventh floor. He got out of the car and went to the passenger shaft gate to adjust a wheel operating the weights of the freight car.

As he reached across the passenger car shaft the passenger car, containing Chief Clerk Marcotte, a woman who was looking at apartments, and Wentworth Tucker, the negro elevator boy, started to descend from the eleventh floor.

Sweeney heard the car coming and sprang back, but the car struck him across the back and bore him to the edge of the floor in the gateway. He died instantly. The elevator boy in the passenger car reversed the power, but it was too late. Then he started his car up again and brought it to a stop on the floor above.

While Edward Clutterback, another porter, was removing the body from the gateway the clerk engaged the woman in conversation. When the body was out of sight the passenger car descended to the first floor, and she knew nothing of the accident.

COY MAID WAS SET BACK AND GAMARA GOT RACE

First Horse in Handicap Stake Disqualified for Foul.

FOUR POST CHOICES BEATEN

Gold Rose and The Southerner Were the Successful Favorites at the Jamaica Track.

Results at the Jamaica race course yesterday were as varied as the weather, and that ran the scale from bright sunshine in the early part of the afternoon to dense fog that shut out all view of the racing except when the horses were directly in front of the stands in the last race. A crowd of about 12,000 visitors made the most of the variety provided and bet on ordinary horses in big fields with splendid enthusiasm, but without profit, as, though favorites won two races at fairly good prices, the post choices were beaten in the last four events on the card, and the run of four beaten choices left the balance for the day all in favor of the bookmakers.

Aside from the mixed results, action by the Stewards on a complaint of foul riding changed the finish of the chief event of the day by putting the first horse last and placing the second horse up as the winner, a decision that led to a vast amount of argument, though the ruling did not materially affect the crowd financially, as all the placed horses were at long prices. The sufferer from the disqualification was the fast and courageous filly Coy Maid, owned by Gen. Fred C. McLewee, who races under the name of the Kenilworth Stable. Coy Maid, after getting home first in a hard-fought finish, losing on the claim of foul made in behalf of Gamara, which ran for the first time in the name of M. L. Hayman, who bought him at the R. T. Wilson, Jr., sale last Saturday.

The race, the fourth on the card, was the Southampton Handicap, at one mile and a sixteenth, for three-year-olds, and eight horses of the thirteen named on the programme went to the post, with Woodsaw the top weight and the Canadian-owned colt Tongorder the favorite, Tongorder opening at 10 to 7 on and going back in the betting to 13 to 10 at post time, while Rose of Dawn, True Wing, and Black Prince were about equally backed to beat him. Coy Maid, ridden by the very small boy Notter, with the rail position, broke best and went on in front, followed by Incantation and Gamara to the far turn, while the favorite galloped close up, two of the supposed contenders never being in the race, as Rose of Dawn and Black Prince were left at the post. On the far turn Gamara moved to the front, followed by Tongorder, the two going to the last turn in that order, with Coy Maid third and Woodsaw fourth. The foul riding and jostling, which lasted to the winning post, began there, where Woodsaw, on the outside, bore over on Gamara and Coy Maid, the latter holding the rail on the last turn and saving ground enough there to get to the front again. Tongorder dropped out of the contest as soon as the straight was reached, and Woodsaw, Gamara, and Coy Maid bumped against each other to the end, Coy Maid swerving out of her course when Notter drew his whip on her, and jostling Gamara, who at the same time was bearing in on the filly, after having been bumped by Woodsaw. Coy Maid proved the best at the finish and was drawing away when she passed the post, a scant length before Gamara, second, a neck in front of Woodsaw.

On the complaint of Perrine, who rode Gamara, and Notter's admission that Coy Maid had jostled that horse, the Stewards disqualified Coy Maid and placed Gamara first, Woodsaw second, and True Wing third.

Another sensational finish was provided in the fifth race, for which Usury led into the stretch, with Delude second, Delude then going up to the pacemaker and in a fighting finish beating her a head on the post.

In the opening race Gold Rose, who has been backed persistently as a "good thing" ever since her advent in the East in the Spring, finally found company that she could beat, and, starting as a hot favorite, jumped out to the lead at the raising of the barrier and won all the way, far off before Frontenac, second. The time of Gold Rose's race was 1:12 1-5—a new track record for six furlongs, the old mark being 1:12 2-5, made by Orthodox in 1904.

The distance of the second race, a mile and a quarter, made the erratic horse The Southerner win, as he came on at the end when the others were tiring.

The horses in the last race, a mile and a sixteenth, for maidens, with Chrysolite the even-money favorite, plunged into fog the moment they passed the stand after the start, and not another glimpse of them was had until they plunged into view again almost on the post, with Banker in front, Banker winning, ridden out, before Brilliant, second. WILL SELL FAST HORSES.

Dispersal Sale of Famous Billings Stable Begins This Afternoon.

A horse sale of unusual importance will be held at Durland's Riding Academy this afternoon, beginning at 2:30 o'clock. It marks the first act in the dispersal sale of probably the greatest stable of trotters and pacers ever brought together by one man. Owing to a prolonged absence in Europe with his family, C. K. G. Billings will sell all his trotting and show horses and carriages, which have cost him more than half a million dollars. The sale this afternoon will be the first of a series and confined to saddle and harness horses and carriages from his Madison Avenue stable.

The big sale of Mr. Billings's trotters and pacers will take place at Madison Square Garden on Nov. 20. With the exception of Lou Dillon, Major Delmar, and Hontas Crook, every light-harness horse in Mr. Billings's stable will be sold.

GROSVENOR HORSE SALE.

Great Stable of Show Ring Winners Under the Hammer.

One of the most important dispersal sales of prize winning high steppers and saddle horses ever held in this country will take place to-night at the American Horse Exchange, when Mrs. J. B. M. Grosvenor's stable of show horses will go under the auctioneer's hammer. The sudden death of her husband caused Mrs. Grosvenor to cancel all Horse Show engagements and dispose of her entire stable. The list includes all of the Grosvenor prize winners, for which a small fortune was paid. Mrs. Grosvenor has been one of the most conspicuous figures and largest exhibitors at the National Horse Show and other leading exhibitions in the East and West. One of her first notable purchases was at the Durland Horse Show last year, when she paid $5,000 for Rosebery, which has developed into the champion of his class.

Patchen Wilkes Farm Changes.

Special to The New York Times.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 18.—Peter Duryea, President and General Manager of Patchen Wilkes Stock Farm here, has handed in his resignation, to take effect Nov. 1. He says he will engage in the breeding of trotting horses for himself and has secured an option on a blue grass farm and has offered George Starr $10,000 for the trotting stallion Director General. Patchen Wilkes Farm here is owned by a company. W. E. D. Stokes of New York has been selected to take the place of Mr. Duryea.

Harvard Tennis Championship.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 18.—The university tennis tournament at Harvard all but reached the semi-final stage to-day, after four long rounds, in which nearly 100 players competed.

The surprise to-day was the defeat of F. W. Cole, 2 L., last year's champion, by F. J. Sulloway, 2 L., in a two-set match. Summary:

Fourth Round—R. B. Dresser, 2L., defeated F. T. Stackpole, '07, 6—3, 4—6, 6—1.

Fifth Round—P. L. Miller of L. defeated A. J. Werthelmer, '09, 8—6, 6—2, 6—1; F. W. Howland, 2 L., defeated H. C. McClintock, 3 L., 8—6, 6—1; F. J. Sulloway, 2 L., defeated F. W. Cole, 2 L., 6—2, 6—4.

Cornell Honors Its Crews.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Oct. 18.—A great crew celebration was held to-night in the Cornell Armory over the victories which the Cornell crews won last June on the Hudson. Because all three of his crews had not been victorious Coach Courtney could not be induced to speak at the meeting. Enthusiasm was stirred up in all other branches of athletics, however, in honor of the audience. Among the speakers were President Schurman and Dr. Henry van Dyke of Princeton.

Hammerkop Wins the Cesarewitch.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—At Newmarket to-day the Cesarewitch Stake, a handicap of 25 sovereigns, with 500 sovereigns added, for three-year-olds and upward at two miles and a quarter, was won by Hammerkop. Merry Andrew was second, and Wargrave was third. Nineteen horses started.

Notes of the Thoroughbreds.

Sonoma Belle, owned by the parents of Jockey H. Cochran, and a starter in the selling mile and a quarter at Jamaica yesterday, entered to be sold for $1,000, was claimed out of the race by T. E. Mannix, owner of St. Roma, for $1,670.

While at the post for the fourth race, the Southampton Handicap, at Jamaica yesterday, the colt Black Prince was kicked and crippled while in the crowd before the barrier. After the kick Black Prince hung back, and, with Rose of Dawn, was left at the post when the barrier was lifted.

Jockey "Mickey" Crimmins, on W. H. Snyder's Goldsboro, was held responsible by Starter Cassidy for the long delay at the post before the horses were sent off for the third race, and as punishment was suspended for the remainder of the Jamaica meeting.

La Sorciere, bought by C. E. Rowe in St. Louis for a price said to have been $16,000, and the medium of a big betting coup at Belmont Park in the Spring, made his first appearance in a selling race at Jamaica yesterday, when he was entered to sell for $1,700, and won in easy style. La Sorciere has failed so consistently to live up to his Spring promise that there was no bid on him, horsemen seeming to believe that he properly belongs in the selling class.

The anxiety of horsemen to run their selling class animals made itself manifest in the entries sent in for the selling six furlongs at Jamaica for to-day, the number excluded under the track rule, seventeen, being larger than the number accepted, as the track will permit only fifteen horses to start from the six-furlong post.

The horse Rossmond, owned by J. S. Ward, and heavily backed at a long price in the second race yesterday, was so full of running that after finishing his mile-and-a-quarter race he bolted with Jockey W. Buchanan when returning to the scales, and tried his best to run away the wrong way of the track. Buchanan pulled him up after he had raced past the stand on the return trip.

The stake programme announced for the Winter meeting on the Oakland track, San Francisco, will close next Monday, Oct. 23.

Jockey Walter Miller, the star lightweight rider of the Belmont Park meeting, showed something like his form of a week ago yesterday, when he landed with two winning mounts, Gold Rose and Delude, and finished second in another race on Oro. Miller was the only jockey to ride two winners.

Crossways, owned by August Belmont and trained by James Boden, was cut down in her race, the third, at Jamaica yesterday, and was so badly injured that she probably will not be able to run again for some time.

LOSSES TO FOOTBALL BY VARIOUS CAUSES

Yale, Princeton, and Harvard Favored Among Big Fellows.

PENNSYLVANIA'S HARD LUCK

Drop Kicking Coming to the Fore Again This Year—The Day on the Various Gridirons.

With the accession of new players to the Columbia eleven other teams are deploring new losses. Particularly is misfortune of this sort felt at West Point and Pennsylvania. A few days ago one of the coaches at the Academy was heard to remark that the players seemed to be made of glass.

Yale and Princeton from being the weakest teams in the field, as predicted by those who look on football superficially, now appear to be the strongest, placing Harvard as more or less of an unknown quantity, with big possibilities either way. The Princeton team is probably working smoother and better than any other team in the field at present, and will continue to do so.

Pennsylvania has been most unfortunate this year in the loss of six men, five of whom were counted on for regular places on the 'Varsity. The injury of Weede and Hollenbeck deprived Pennsylvania of two of the men she counted on for ends, Weede being considered by many the equal of any end in the colleges, not excepting Tom Shevlin. To top these misfortunes off Sinkler, who played regularly at end last year, retired on account of illness. This left the Quakers badly off where they looked strongest, and while Scarlett is a good man, the other end is causing worry.

Then came the hard blow inflicted by the disqualification of Reynolds, certainly the best punter in the country.

The most severe blow, however, was the loss of Ziegler at guard, who was the last man to go, stricken with an attack of typhoid fever. Ziegler was the steadiest of forwards and the mainstay of the defense.

Harvard is busily engaged trying to build up the right side of her line. The Crimson forwards are many, and seem physically able, but it takes time to infuse the spirit, lack of which has been responsible for recent failures. On the whole Reid is progressing well with the team. The addition of Knowlton, the old tackle, to the squad ought to improve matters a bit. He is another man who, like Nicholls, has been out of the game for two years, and has been brought out once more by Reid's system of canvassing. If that right side of the line can be built up to its proper strength there seems no reason why the Harvard eleven should not be about the most evenly balanced team on the field.

The drop kicker is gaining prominence again this year. Crowell of Swarthmore is the best all-around man in this that has played for years, and is so goood an all-around player that to overloook him in all American selections seems a great injustice to an exceptionally capable man. Shuster of Lafayette loomed up on Saturday as a great performer in this respect, dropping three goals in the course of the game. From a good man last year he seems to have developed into an exceptionally accurate and regular kicker. Cunningham of Wesleyan has also been doing great stunts in this respect.

Yesterday's secret practice at Columbia was of a discouraging nature, and Coach Morley is none too well satisfied with the prospects for the Amherst game. Hard scrimmage was indulged in, and the 'Varsity team could do little with the scrub. The hard luck which has been persistently following the Morningside eleven reached a climax yesterday when it was learned that Philip Van Seltzer, the big tackle, who has shown promising form, had wrenched his knee. He met with an injury to his leg in the early part of the season, and had nearly recovered when the second accident occurred. It is doubtful whether he will be able to line up against Amherst. His absence will be severely felt, as Bates, another of the big men, has given up football, as he claimed that he could not do justice to his studies. The one encouraging feature of the work was the play of Echeverria, the 'Varsity guard of last season, who appears to have returned to his form of last year. It is unlikely, however, that he will replace either Ross or Ryan in the 'Varsity line-up. Douglas, who was declared ineligible to represent Columbia on the gridiron this year, played on the scrub yesterday. During the scrimmage he was severely kicked in the head and rendered unconscious.

The work of the Yale 'Varsity was mostly secret yesterday, and the players came out tired from one of the hardest drills of the year. In the open practice only Erwin, Tripp, Jones, and Morse of the regulars played. The Blue team has now a full second set of linesmen except one tackle and guard, and two full extra strings of backs, there being more first-class substitute material on hand than for several years. The scrimmage was short between the 'Varsity and the scrubs, and resulted in no scoring. Coach Owsley directed a long punting practice by Wylie and Roome, the punts of the former averaging fifty yards, with plenty of height. Wylie is a freshman, and is one of the finds of the Yale season.

Princeton's 'Varsity had no scheduled game for yesterday afternoon, so a formal contest was played with the scrub team and resulted in four touch-downs for the regulars. The 'Varsity played with a rush during the entire contest, and showed up well in the heavy attack, making repeated gains through every position on the second team. There was still a marked tendency to fumble the ball without even the excuse of a slippery field. This fault has been frequently noted during the present season, and the protests from all the coaches does not seem to have lessened it to any extent. Another weakness which must be eradicated is the nervousness of the linesmen in jumping into the play and consequently getting off side and suffering repeated penalties. In yesterday's game this was evident, and Rafferty appeared to be one of the chief offenders. For the first time this year Tooker was called upon to practice drop kicking. He showed his old ability in this department of the game, and made repeated goals, one from the 40-yard line. Simons was again in the game for the first time in ten days, but was knocked out when tackled and carried from the field with an injured knee. O'Brien, one of the leading candidates for end, has received an injury to his spine which will keep him out of the game the remainder of the season.

Harvard's football practice was featured yesterday afternoon by the appearance of Burr, a freshman at left guard on the 'Varsity team. Burr is a young giant, and the best punter on the squad. His kicks average at least 55 yards. Several changes were made in the line-up. Speare, who has been tried at end for the past two days, was shifted back to right tackle and his place taken by MacDonald, a good tackler and a fast runner, who has just been pronounced eligible. Right end was covered by Whitman, the tennis player. Dan Knowlton played at full back in the scrimmage for the first time this year, and gave a good account of himself. In the game between the 'Varsity and the scrub, the former showed unusually offensive strength. Defensively, however, the 'Varsity showed up poorly, especially toward the end of the game, when the second plowed through them for long and successive gains.

Hard practice was the order at West Point yesterday, which resulted in more injuries. Abraham and Erwin had to stop on account of being hurt. Weeks and Wilhelm were in the game, and apparently all right. Smith is still out, and will not be able to play for some time, and Philoon will not be able to play any more this season. The practice yesterday started off with a few preliminaries in the way of falling on the ball and tackling the dummy. After these there was a line up in which the men played with some fierceness, but no skill. The first team scored twice on the scrubs by line plunges, Weeks carrying the ball over first, then Ellis. During the game the scrub carried the ball a good deal, the first team not being able to take it away from them. How the team will line up Saturday is as yet unknown. It will depend on how many of the cripples get well.

Athletic relations have been severed between New York University and Trinity as a result of the unpleasantness at last Saturday's football game at Hartford, Conn. This decision was reached at a mass meeting held yesterday at University Heights, when the Trinity team was accused of unsportsmanlike actions on the field.

AUTOISTS HONOR LANCIA.

Italian Chauffeur's Sportsmanlike Speech Cheered at Press Club Banquet.

Lancia, the Italian chauffeur who drove the 120 horse power Fiat car in the recent Vanderbilt Cup race, carried off the honors and received the major part of the applause at the dinner given to the cup contestants by William J. Morgan at the New York Press Club, 116 Nassau Street, last night. Owing to the departure for Europe to-day of Hemery, the winner of the cup was unable to be present, as he was busy all day getting his car ready for shipment. To the surprise of some of the guests, Lancia showed that he can make as good a speech as he can drive a racing machine. He does not speak English, but his remarks were interpreted by E. Rand Hollander, through whose efforts the Fiat cars came to America for the contest.

"I can rightly call you my American friends," said Lancia in Italian, "and also the thousands that lined the course in what will be the memorable Vanderbilt Cup race of last Saturday. No driver could expect the warm reception that was extended to me during the race just run. And I can assure you that when I return to Italy it will be my great pleasure to tell the Italian people and our beloved King of the warm reception accorded to the sons of Italy in the United States. The Italian King, as you know, is an enthusiastic automobilist, and believe me, when I say he is a driver of great ability.

"It is regrettable that an accident happened to my car, as the time made and which your friendly press has told about shows that if nothing had happened a world's record would have been made. I do not believe for a moment but what the accident was one that might happen in almost any race and I absolve Mr. Christie from any intention of doing me or my machine any harm."

President George H. Roe of the Press Club welcomed the automobilists, saying he was glad to see so many of the automobile aristocracy in the rooms of the Press Club. Ex-President Winthrop E. Scaritt of the Automobile Club of America spoke in eulogistic terms of the remarkable showing made by the foreign drivers in the recent race. E. R. Hollander, in speaking on behalf of the Italian cars, paid a worthy tribute to the American competitors.

W. J. Morgan and W. M. Leets, the representatives of the Automobile Club of Great Britain and Ireland; Barney Oldfield, A. R. Pardington, and M. G. Bernin made short talks. Szisz, the Renault car driver, was present. He will sail to-day for Europe on the steamer La Savoie, and on the same steamer will be Hemery, Wagner, and Duray.

Among those who sent regrets were William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., and Foxhall P. Keene. The latter wrote that last Saturday's race "was undoubtedly the greatest sporting event ever seen in America."

Miss Bishop, last year's National champion, did not play because of illness. Miss Mackay, the present champion, defaulted. The six who qualified for the first cup are: Miss Helen Carrington, 94; Mrs. E. F. Sanford, Essex County, 97; Miss Edna Sapen, Wee Burn, 100; Miss Maud Van Boskerck, Plainfield, 104; Mrs. Julia Mix, Baltusrol, 107; Miss Ruth Badgely, Essex County, 107. Freight Traffic Golfers' Meet.

The qualifying round in the three-day tournament of the National Freight Traffic Golf Association was played yesterday on the links of the Fox Hills Golf Club, Staten Island. Two sets of eight qualified for the two cups, and the match play rounds will be held to-day and to-morrow. C. N. Bates led the field, finishing the eighteen-hole round in the good score of 91 strokes. Those who qualified for the chief trophy were: C. N. Bates, 91; L. L. Riley, 93; H. J. Whittaker, 96; C. N. Bright, 96; F. S. Seiger, 98; H. B. McClellan, 98; L. W. Donnalley, 98; W. T. Musick, 99.

ABOLISH FOOTBALL, SAYS HARVARD BULLETIN

Or Radical Changes Will Have to be Made in the Game.

PLAYERS COACHED TO "SLUG"

Scathing Condemnation of Present Rules, Which Make Game Unfitted for Human Body.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 18.—President Roosevelt's plea for changes in the rules governing college football found hearty support and indorsement in an article published to-day in The Harvard Bulletin, which it is asserted represents graduate sentiment. It declares that football ought to be substantially changed or else altogether abolished. Charges are made that the game is growing more uninteresting and that it is the testimony of a well-known surgeon, who has coached football teams, that the human body is not fitted to endure the game as it is played in the American colleges. It is pointed out that the rules are not enforced by the officials in many of the important games and refers to the playing of two or three men in last year's Harvard-Pennsylvania game as barbaric. It is distinctly stated that it is known that certain players are coached to "slug" and to violate the rules, with the reservation that they must not be seen by the officials.

It is pointed out that when a game becomes so dangerous that several players are sure to be hurt in every contest between two teams there is somthing radically wrong with the game, and demands changes to eliminate the dangerous elements of the game. The article, which is certain to create a sensation in college football ranks follows:

Something is the matter with a game which grows more and more uninteresting every year, which takes the time and attention, not only of the player, but also of the undergraduates as a body until for weeks they talk and think about nothing but football, which requires the constant attention of skilled surgeons who conduct on the field what one of the most eminent has called a hospital clinic, which injures men so that they are crippled for weeks and in some cases made permanently unfit for athletic exercise. It is the testimony of a well-known surgeon who has coached football teams that the human body is not fitted to endure the game as it is played in the American colleges.

If one could see the straps about the ankles, the bandages on the knees, the harnesses on the shoulders, the padding all over the body, to say nothing of the headgear and nose guards which he can see, and would then recollect that, in spite of all these protections, men are injured day after day so that they cannot play for weeks—if one could see and understand these things he would admit that the game was not the kind which boys ought to play.

Of course, the rules of the game ought to be enforced, and it is a notorious fact that the officials of most of the important contests have not enforced them, but it is not easy to live up to rules in a game like this. Mr. Lewis repeats a statement often made by the defenders of football when he says: "A man who slugs a man, who violates the rules, as a rule is of little or no value to the side upon which he plays." If that assertion is true, why are men coached to "slug" and to violate the rules with the reservation that they must not be seen by the officials? We know that players are so coached. To be a little more concrete, everybody who watched the Pennsylvania eleven in Cambridge last Fall saw two or three men whose playing was simply barbaric, but no one can deny that they were very effective men for their side.

Enforcement of the rules or the suppression of publicity will not cure the defects of football. There is something radically wrong with the game. It ought to be substantially changed or else abolished. We do not want the young men in the American colleges to play ladylike games or to give up any form of athletics because it may cause injuries. Rowing, baseball, lacrosse, association football are strenuous enough, and have a moderate risk of injury, but no one objects to them. When, however, a game becomes so dangerous that several players are sure to be hurt in every contest between two teams it is time to admit that something is wrong.

WANT ROOSEVELT'S SUPPORT.

Britishers Will Explain Advantages of Association Football to President.

President Roosevelt will be unable to witness the playing of the English Pilgrim Association Football team. Capt. Fred H. Milnes and Vivian Woodward returned from Washington yesterday, where their mission was to offer to play a football match before President Roosevelt and his Cabinet to illustrate the advantages of the "Socker" game over that at present played at American colleges. The Britishers were anxious to play in Washington next week, but the President left for his Southern trip yesterday, and was unable to accept the invitation.

The Englishmen are determined to explain the principles of the game to the President, whose recent efforts to eliminate the objectionable features of the college game have led to the hope that he will favor association football, and with this end in view Capts. Milnes and Woodward will remain in this country two weeks after the departure of the other members of the team, for the purpose of enlisting the sympathies and support of the President in their game. The two Britishers will remain at Washington until the return of Mr. Roosevelt from the South.

The game between the Pilgrims and a team selected from all New York which will be played at the Polo Grounds next Saturday, is attracting considerable attention. A number of seats have been ordered by the Columbia University students, and a big delegation of Yalensians will be on hand. The local team will include the best players in the Metropolitan Association Football League. Armstrong of the Brooklyn Field Club will captain the New York eleven, and Fred Milnes will again lead the visiting eleven.

McGOVERN IN OLD FORM.

Ex-Champion Whips Tommy Murphy In Less Than a Round.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 18.—Tommy Murphy of New York was badly beaten by Terry McGovern to-night at the National Athletic Club. It took McGovern only two minutes and two seconds to gain the victory. Murphy was so helpless before the blows of the former featherweight champion that the referee stepped in and saved Murphy from probable serious injury. The defeated man was game to the end. McGovern showed his old-time form, fighting hard and fast from the sound of the gong.

The clubhouse was so crowded that hundreds of persons were turned away. Announcement was made that McGovern and Corbett had agreed to meet in a six-round bout at the club in a short time.

VICTORY FOR YALE IN GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

Princeton Defeated for Team Honors by 22½ Points to 7½.

KNOWLES MAKES GOOD SCORE

Smith and Partridge, Leaders of the Winning Team, Meet Defeat on Garden City Links.

Yale won the intercollegiate golf team championship yesterday on the links of the Garden City Golf Club by defeating Princeton in the 36-hole final round by 22½ points to 7½.

Bruce D. Smith, Captain of the New Haven team, made a slight change in the position of the leaders, taking first place himself and placing Dwight Partridge, the Yale freshman and the interscholastic championship holder, below him. The change did not assist the team in any way, for to the surprise of the critics both Smith and Dwight Partridge were beaten, Duncan Laird, the Princeton leader, beating Smith by 8 holes in the 36-hole round. Yale's victory by actual number of holes won was 37 to 11.

Yale secured a big lead in the morning play, finishing the first 18-hole round with 21 holes to 9 for Princeton. More than half of Yale's score was made by Ellis Knowles, who beat D. H. Barrows by 11 holes.

Notwithstanding the shifting of positions among the leaders on the Yale team, it was the tallenders who scored all the points. Abbott and Clow were each 5 up on Clarke and West, respectively. Bruce Smith, the Yale Captain, was badly off his game, his driving being very wild, and he fell an easy victim to Duncan Laird, who got a lead of 7 holes in the morning round. To the disappointment of the Yale crowd, Laird continued to win in the afternoon. Smith improved in his long work, and Laird added but one more hole to his score, but by the intercollegiate scoring system Laird earned 5 points for Princeton, one for the match plus half the number for the holes won.

Ralph Peters, Jr., was the second victor for the Jersey college. He beat Partridge by 3 holes in the day's play. Phelps of Yale and Gee of Princeton had the closest game of the day. Gee led by 1 hole in the morning round, but Phelps did some high-class golf in the afternoon, and beat the Princetonian by a single hole. Knowles also added to his morning lead over Barrows. The players and scores, showing the results by holes and points, are:

YALE.	Holes.	Pts.	PRINCETON.	Holes.	Pts.
Bruce D. Smith	0	0	Duncan Laird	8	5
D. Partridge	0	0	R. Peters, Jr.	3	2½

The eighteen-hole qualifying round for the individual championship will be played this morning.

UNIVERSITY GOLFERS PLAY.

Haviland of Cornell Leads the Veterans on the St. Andrew's Links.

N. E. Haviland won the University Club golf handicap yesterday on the St. Andrew's Golf Club links, near Chauncey, Westchester County. Over forty members started in the thirty-six-hole match, and twenty-three completed the double round. Haviland is a Cornell graduate, and he beat A. B. Halliday of Harvard by five points. The latter made the second best gross score of the day, 183 strokes. He had 24 strokes handicap, while Haviland received 32 strokes and made a net score of 154 from 186 gross. W. R. Innis of Yale, and a veteran St. Andrew's golfer, tied with George P. Sheldon, also a Yale alumnus, at 164 for third place.

W. R. Thurston of Williams won the gross score prize. He was the only scratch contestant, and played the double round in 176 strokes. Judge Francis M. Scott finished both rounds in a net score of 173 from 36 handicap. Those who finished the match were:

23 CHILDREN, ALL ALIVE.

Father's Yarn That Moved a Judge to Free the Son.

Henry Hasselberg of 359 West Forty-seventh Street appeared in the Children's Court yesterday to ask Judge Zeller to remit a fine of $10 against his son, who, with six other boys, was arrested on Oct. 11 for throwing stones in the street and hitting another boy. Mr. Hasselberg is 60 years old.

"Your Honor," he said to Justice Zeller, "I cannot afford to pay the $10, and yet I cannot bear that my boy should remain in an institution. He is now in the Catholic Protectory, you know."

"How many children have you?"

"Only twenty-three, but they are all alive."

"Good, Sir, good! The boy's fine shall be remitted. I will send up and have him brought down."

"No, no," said the multitudinous father. "No, please give me the order and I will go for him. I cannot wait to see him."

He got the order. When a reporter called at the Hasselberg home the son had been brought from the protectory. But even then the children were only seven. Asked what he meant by telling the Justice that he had twenty-three children, he answered:

"Oh, I had to fix up some kind of a story to get my boy out. I thought that would work."

HAMBURGER A SUICIDE.

Young Pittsburg Man Who Lived in New York Shoots Himself.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—Alfred Hamburger, son of Philip Hamburger, a retired Pittsburg distiller, ended his life to-day by firing a bullet into his brain while he was in his room at the Morrison Hotel. He was 35 years old, and apparently was in good health. On a table near his bed were several notes, one of which read:

"I wasted life—all my own fault—and wasted opportunities."

Hamburger was graduated from Princeton about ten years ago. Two years ago his father retired from business and started on a tour of the world. He is now in Vienna.

The young man went to New York, but meeting with slight success there, he came to Chicago last Sunday, determined to secure a position and to win recognition from his father, who, it is said, had partly cast him off. To his failure in this endeavor is ascribed his despair.

Alfred Hamburger had been a resident of New York at various times in the past five years. During that time he had lived mostly at the Hotel Endicott, at Eighty-first Street and Columbus Avenue, and at the Hotel Hargrave, 104 West Seventy-second Street.

At the Endicott last night it was said that Hamburger was a man of pleasing address and polished manners. He is said to have had plenty of money which, it was stated, was furnished by his father.

He left the Endicott on Oct. 14 for Chicago, where he said he intended to secure a position and to work for a living. He intimated to some of his friends that his father had served notice that he would furnish no more funds to him.

Hamburger was cheerful up to about three weeks prior to his departure for the West. Then his friends noticed that he became melancholy at times. He is said to have had a large number of friends in New York.

OFF GOES BOURKE'S HEAD.

McAdoo Takes His Former Favorite Away from Mercer Street.

Commissioner McAdoo transferred Acting Capt. Edward Bourke yesterday from the Mercer Street Station to do desk duty at the Union Market Station, sending Capt. William Hodgings from the Oak Street Station to take command at Mercer Street. The Oak Street vacancy will be filled later.

Nine months ago when Commissioner McAdoo promoted Edward Bourke from a Sergeant to an Acting Captain and sent him to Mercer Street, he talked very enthusiastically about him. He then said he had every confidence in Bourke, and that if he was ever transferred it would be to Police Headquarters, where he could be at the right hand of the Commissioner.

Asked yesterday why he had transferred Bourke, Mr. McAdoo answered:

"For the good of the service, and for good police reasons."

The Mercer Street post is considered a very hard post. Capt. Tighe was fined thirty days while there, Capt. John O'Connor fifteen days, and Inspector Titus thirty days, all on account of charges against them for failure to suppress poolrooms and disorderly houses.

VOTE FOR McCURDY SHRINKS.

Show of Sentiment at New Haven Road's Election of Directors.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 18.—The annual stockholders' meetings of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company, the New England Railroad Company, and the Naugatuck Railroad Company were held to-day at the general offices of the New Haven Road in this city. In each instance the Board of Directors was re-elected. All the officers of these companies were re-elected.

At the meeting of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company 429,725 shares of stock were represented, and this full number was voted for all the Directors except Richard A. McCurdy, who received but 426,867 votes. The vacancies caused by the death of John M. Hall and William D. Bishop were left unfilled.

The stockholders had before them the question of purchase of the property and rights of the New England Road, but as the required two-thirds capital stock was not represented the meeting was adjourned for one week.

Stocks Lower—Call Money Rates 4@5¼ Per Cent.

Market Moves Irregularly—Sterling Exchange Rises and Cotton Prices Advance.

Before the opening of the local stock market yesterday London was discussing a number of rumors the most sinister of which had to do with the health of a prominent financier of this city. This was a baseless fabrication, but it seemed not wholly unconnected with the lower prices for American stocks in the London market and the moderate sales for that account in this market. These developments were responsible in large part for the sharp declines at which stocks opened here, and served to usher in a day in which unpleasant news predominated, save only in the matter of money, where rates worked as low as 4 per cent., although the bulk of the loans was made at a higher quotation. The trading was on nearly the same scale as obtained on Tuesday, but offerings were not well taken during most of the day. At no time did the active issues as a whole approach Tuesday's level of prices, and at the close, which was heavy, losses were general, and American Locomotive common stock moved in sharp contrast to the general tendency of prices. On transactions of some 100,000 shares, making up about one-sixth of the entire business, the shares advanced 4⅞ points. General Electric stock gained 2½ points, and owing to the recent election of the President of this company to the locomotive company Directorate an effort was made to connect the two movements. There was an inclination, however, to give more credence to the theory that these movements had more to do with the position of highly speculative interests whose official connection with the American Locomotive Company is now terminated, but who are still connected with the International Power Company, the stocks of which broke 6½ points yesterday.

Demand sterling again advanced yesterday, standing at the end of the day at 4.8650. The repeated advances in exchange have led to reports that preparations are under way for remitting the Japanese funds now in bankers' hands here, but these reports have received no confirmation. In connection with the exchange situation the trade figures for September are of interest, showing, as they do, that our imports were larger by $18,000,000 and our exports by $1,700,000, the excess of exports being some $16,272,000 less than in September, 1904. The advance of over $1 a bale in cotton yesterday also possesses interest owing to its bearing on the cotton exporting position, although the price of spot cotton advanced more moderately. Shortly before the close of the market the failure of an Allegheny (Penn.) bank, with deposits of $2,000,000, was announced, and this development plainly affected sentiment. The local money position was a trifle easier during the day, and thus far in the week the banks have gained nearly $2,000,000 from the Sub-Treasury. Funds were also in easier supply abroad, the discount rate in Berlin declining a fraction as a result of the better bank showing. In London there was less apprehension of an increase in the bank rate to-day.

Crucible Steel Company Rescinds Its Plan for a $7,000,000 Output.

The stockholders of the Crucible Steel Company yesterday voted to rescind the authorization of the seven-million-dollar bond issue authorized in 1904, the issue of which has been made unnecessary by the improved earnings of the company. That such action would be taken was indicated in the recently published annual report of the company. In that report it was said that $808,000 of the earlier bond issue, which was to have been refunded by a part of the $7,000,000, had been paid off out of earnings. A further sum of $675,000 has been paid since the publication of the annual report.

In regard to the resumption of the dividends on the company's preferred stock, a Director said yesterday that it was more than probable that payments on the preferred would be resumed in March at the rate of 4 per cent. None have been paid in nearly two years.

LONDON STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—Money was in active demand in the market to-day and changed hands freely in connection with various dividend distributions and the payment of $5,000,000 on the last exchequer bond issue. Discounts were maintained, though there was an easier feeling and less apprehension about an increase in the Bank of England's rate of discount.

Trading on the Stock Exchange was more cheerful, but quiet, owing to the uncertainty of money. Consols were steady, sustaining kindred securities. They closed a shade off.

Americans opened dull at about parity, advanced a fraction, reacted later, and closed flat and slightly above the lowest quotations on moderate New York support. Grand Trunk was steady on the traffic increase.

Japanese imperial 6s of 1904 were quoted at 101⅞.

Bar silver steady at 28 11-16d per ounce.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Madrid, 27.65; Lisbon, 5.

The gold premium at Lisbon has advanced to 5.50.

The amount of bullion taken into the Bank of England on balance to-day was £143,000.

IRON TRADE CONDITIONS.

Reviewing the situation in the iron trade The Iron Age says in its issue of to-day:

The leading interests in the steel industry are more and more emphatically taking a position adverse to any violent upward price movement. They are endeavoring to keep not alone values of raw material within bounds, but are holding down prices on finished iron and steel. This is shown by the character of the buying of pig iron on the one hand and by the success in keeping the official price of plates at the old figure.

The markets for pig iron have stiffened. This week it is the East and the Central West which have marked up quotations. Some of the large Southern interests have practically withdrawn from the market entirely, but there is still some, though little, iron available on the basis of $12.50 for No. 2 at Birmingham.

In the Central West the news of greatest interest is that the Steel Corporation has purchased 20,000 tons of iron for October delivery at $15.50 at furnace, and 20,000 tons for November delivery at $18, thus establishing an advance. The quantities purchased, however, are smaller than expected.

There has been further good buying in the Eastern markets, and prices have been advanced to $16.50 to $16.75 at furnace for No. 2 foundry and $17.50 to $17.50 delivered for basic pig. A leading Buffalo interest has to-day put prices up 50c. per ton.

The reaffirming of the official price of $23 for steel billets by the makers interests nobody, since the "official price" has long since been inoperative. What transactions have taken place during the last few months have been at considerably higher figures. In the Eastern markets very considerable quantities of open hearth steel have been selling lately at $28.

The pressure upon the car builders and locomotive shops is enormous. It is figured out that there are contracts in sight for 80,000 steel cars, which include the 20,000 cars just being figured on for the Pennsylvania system. The locomotive builders are crowded and are covering liberally for their materials. One large interest has contracted for a total of 75,000 tons of bars, plates, &c.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

The bull crowd in American Locomotive common occupied more room in yesterday's stock market than is often yielded to a single manipulative performance. With the general list distinctly heavy, that stock advanced more than five points, and was further distinguished by an activity of 100,000 shares, as compared with only 60,000 shares in Union Pacific, 55,000 in Reading common, 43,000 in Steel common, and an average volume of perhaps less than 20,000 shares for ten other normally active issues. The movement began shortly after the opening, and continued throughout the session. The highest point was reached in the afternoon. The stock closed at a recession of only ⅞ per cent. from the highest eighth, showing a net advance of 4⅞ per cent. The buying appeared to be rather more general than had been the case before, and at intervals it was so urgent as to warrant the suspicion that some large bear accounts were being closed out involuntarily at heartbreaking losses. Houses supposed to be acting for private banking interests were large buyers on the advance. The incident was sensational enough to give rise to a great many rumors. One which had the authority of constant iteration was that the Hoadley crowd had been caught heavily short of the stock. At the annual meeting on Tuesday the Hoadley element was put off the board, and Mr. Hoadley and his associates must have known beforehand that this was going to be done.

* * *

From around 55 up, a certain class of traders have been fighting this rise in American Locomotive, and yesterday's extraordinary advance, no doubt, was engineered largely at the expense of the short interest. A good deal of the urgent buying had all the familiar characteristics of short covering. As for the Hoadley crowd having been caught short of the stock, that is largely surmise. The curtailment of its influence in the property, at any rate, is regarded by many persons as a strong argument in favor of the stock. The chief weakness of the market position of American Locomotive common hitherto has been that Wall Street was extremely distrustful of the Hoadley manipulation of it. This new leadership is certainly as aggressive as the Hoadley leadership ever was; the point to be determined is whether it will not be more consistent. Among other rumors relating to the property was one suggesting a physical alliance between the General Electric Company and the American Locomotive Company, but no well informed persons seemed to take it seriously. General Electric advanced sharply, however, and was unusually active. A curious incident was a break of 7 points in International Power, a stock which is supposed to be controlled in the market by Mr. Hoadley and his associates.

* * *

American Locomotive is now being referred to as a Morgan stock. Considered as an addition to the Morgan group of securities, it was the only one that showed strength yesterday. The Steel stocks and Erie common were conspicuously heavy throughout the day's trading.

* * *

Although the general market made no response to the great strength and immense activity of American Locomotive, and was, on the contrary, moderately reactionary in its narrow movements, it exhibited a stubborn resistance to miscellaneous selling. Brokers maintain that there has been a good deal of genuine selling in the last two days, some of which has had the appearance of coming from quarters hitherto bullish. There was some further Western selling yesterday. London sold stocks freely in the forenoon, especially Union Pacific, the Steel shares, and Erie. Houses not associated with speculative cliques have been selling stocks on a pretty extensive scale. Other houses of highly speculative tendencies have been reported both as buyers and sellers of different stocks at the same time, from which it is inferred that professional and semi-professional operators who move into stocks and out of them with astonishing rapidity have been shifting around a good deal in the market in the last two or three days.

* * *

The ease with which the market, in its present narrow condition, has been absorbing stocks is highly encouraging to the bull element. It is probably true that various pools have been increasing their lines to keep control of a certain percentage of the floating supply of stocks. There seems to be nothing else for them to do if they would hold their positions. A distribution of stocks in the present market is certainly not feasible.

* * *

It seems hardly necessary to cite instances showing the narrowness of the market, but they are more or less interesting. When Steel common was standing on the tape yesterday at 37⅜ an order to sell 200 shares at the market brought the following report from the floor: "Steel common quoted 37⅛ bid, ⅝ asked; no better market at present. Have stopped 200 at 37⅛." The lowest actual quotation for the stock was 37¼. The market for Steel common is generally kept in eighths. A difference of ¼ per cent. between bid and asked is unusual. In another case an order to sell 100 shares of Southern Pacific at the market, the last transaction having been at 68⅝, was executed at 68¼.

* * *

Chicago Subway stock reached a new low point yesterday forenoon, selling at 39½, and then recovered sharply in the afternoon. It is now believed that inside support has been withheld from the stock because of the undesirable manner in which it was bulled by a crowd of speculators whose company became undesirable. Indeed, persons supposed to be well informed about the stock have been heard to say that it would sell lower still unless certain speculative interests let go of it. The general impression is that a Western crowd was landed with a lot of inside stock above 80. In the course of that campaign, it is said, stock was bought and received by Western houses who discovered suddenly that as collateral for bank loans it was no longer available on the usual terms. The beginning of the first violent break from around 80 to 50 was the calling of a large loan on Subway stock. The reason that the stock's decline has not caused any uneasiness in quarters where large amounts of it are permanently held is that such holders got it very cheap in the first place.

* * *

It looked as if some of the Amalgamated Copper stock bought on Tuesday for a turn on the dividend was being returned to the market yesterday. This selling was based upon a change of feeling concerning the possibility of another increase of the dividend at to-day's meeting. Ever since the increase of the dividend to a 5 per cent. rate three months ago Wall Street has been vaguely expecting another advance at this period to the rate of 6 per cent. This expectation suddenly gives way to an impression that no change will be announced to-day. Boston predicted on Tuesday that the dividend would be increased. If a straw were needed to determine the matter that prediction might be the straw. If the dividend is not increased speculators will infer at once that those who control the financial policy of the Amalgamated Copper Company are not in the mood for providing bullish ammunition. Others will go even further and find in the Amalgamated Copper dividend a reflection of stock market feeling at 26 Broadway. The last increase in the Amalgamated Copper dividend, it may be remembered, came quite unexpectedly. It had not been preceded by any special activity in the stock.

* * *

International circulation was given yesterday to rumors of a calamitous nature, none of which apparently had any basis in fact. There was a rumor that Mr. Morgan was seriously ill. It had to be denied. There was another, originating evidently in London, of an impending failure in this market. It elicited anxious inquiries from correspondents in London and interior cities on this side.

MERGENTHALER PROFITS.

$2,204,520 for the Year—Sale of Linotypes, $2,436,978.

The net profits of the Mergenthaler Linotype Company for the year ended Sept. 30, were $2,204,520. The gross receipts were $3,749,678, the largest item being receipts from the sales of machines, $2,436,978. The report submitted by President Dodge to the Directors yesterday gave these sales of machines:

Standard linotypes	603
Double-magazine linotypes	228
Junior linotypes	20
Monoline machines	16
Total	868

"It is gratifying," says President Dodge, "to state that the gain from ordinary sources was the greatest in any year of the company's existence. The profits of the preceding year were swollen by a large order from the Government and by many large orders resulting from the great fire in Baltimore. Excluding these gains, the business of 1903-4 was materially less than that of the year just closed."

Besides the 868 machines sold, 447 were leased. There was an increased demand for the double magazine machine, carrying 360 characters.

The company has acquired the patents for the monoline machine and for the tools used in its manufacture. Within the year stockholders received the right to subscribe at par to a new issue of $1,000,000 of stock.

New York, October 2, 1905.

TO THE HOLDERS OF

First Preferred, Second preferred and Common Stock

OF THE

ERIE RAILROAD COMPANY

On September 20, 1905, the Board of Directors authorized the issue of $12,000,000 of the Four Per Cent. Convertible Gold Bonds of the Erie Railroad Company secured by its General Mortgage dated April 1, 1903, for the purpose, among other things as specified in said mortgage, of acquiring more than a majority of the shares of common capital stock of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railway Company.

These new convertible bonds are to be designated as Series B. The bonds are to be dated October 1, 1905, maturing April 1, 1953, with interest payable semi-annually on April 1 and October 1, and at the option of the holder they are to be convertible at par into common stock of the Company at $60 per share, at any time after two years and before twelve years from the date of the bonds. Their issue has been authorized by the Board of Railroad Commissioners, to whom application will be made to authorize the stock increase necessary for such conversion.

The General Mortgage authorizes the issue of $50,000,000 convertible bonds. $10,000,000 of such bonds (designated as Series A and convertible into common stock of the Company at 50 as therein stated) have heretofore been issued and appropriated as proposed in the Erie Circular to stockholders dated February 16, 1903. Upon the issue of the $12,000,000 Series B bonds above described, the total amount outstanding under the said General Mortgage will be $22,000,000. The General Mortgage covers the railroad, property, and franchises of the Erie Railroad Company therein described, and also will cover the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railway stock acquired with proceeds of the Series B bonds.

There is now offered to the registered stockholders of the Erie Railroad Company on October 21, 1905, a preferential opportunity ratably to subscribe for and to take the $12,000,000 Series B bonds at par and accrued interest. The Company has entered into a contract with Messrs. J. P. Morgan & Co., as Managers of an Underwriting Syndicate (in which themselves and other members of the Board of Directors are included), whereby the Underwriting Syndicate, for a commission of 2½ per cent. of the par amount of said $12,000,000 Series B bonds, has agreed to take any and all of said $12,000,000 Series B bonds which shall not be taken by the stockholders under this offer.

For the purpose of determining the right to subscribe to said bonds, the stock transfer books of the Company will be closed at three o'clock P. M. on October 21, 1905, and will be reopened November 15, 1905, at ten o'clock A. M.

Only stockholders registered as such on the transfer books on October 21, 1905, will be entitled to subscribe for the Series B bonds. Holders of First Preferred, Second Preferred, or Common Stock will be entitled to subscribe for $6.75 of the Series B bonds for each $100 par value of stock registered in their name. Suitable subscription warrants will be issued to each stockholder specifying the amount of bonds to which such stockholder is entitled to subscribe.

Payments for the Series B bonds are to be made in full on or before November 27, 1905, at par and accrued interest. The privilege of subscription may be sold in whole or in part, and the warrants will bear an appropriate form of assignment for this purpose.

No subscription or assignment thereof will be recognized unless made on the warrants furnished by the Company.

Stockholders residing in Great Britain or Europe may make their subscription and payment at the office of Messrs. J. S. Morgan & Co., 22 Old Broad Street, London, E. C., England, who are authorized to receive the same for transmission to New York at a rate of exchange of which due notice will be given.

Holders of Stock Trust Certificates must exchange the same for Stock Certificates so as to be able to subscribe.

By order of the Board of Directors.
ERIE RAILROAD COMPANY.
By F. D. UNDERWOOD, President.

A quarterly dividend of 1½ per cent. has been declared on the preferred stock of the American Light and Traction Company; both this dividend and one of 1 per cent. on the common stock will be paid Nov. 1.

According to the report of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, it had outstanding on Sept. 30 5,324,217 instruments, a gain of 1,043,016 instruments over the number outstanding at the same date last year.

H. L. Carpenter has been appointed manager of the local office of Scully, Painter & Beech of New York and Pittsburg. Charles A. Painter, President of the Pittsburg Stock Exchange, is the firm member at 30 Broad Street.

A NEW COPPER PRODUCER.

The last six months' work of the San Luis Mining Company has demonstrated by actual results that it will soon become one of the principal copper producers of North America. The lead of the upper levels of its mines is being replaced by copper in the lower levels, and the precious metals—particularly the gold—also increase as the copper increases. We are already shipping ores and mill products in large quantities, and the production is constantly increasing.

The extent of the San Luis holdings of mineral properties is so great that it will take at least half a century to exhaust them, and their richness is now fully demonstrated.

The strength of our position as a copper producer is that the precious metal values will pay the entire cost of production, leaving the copper all profit. Of no other Company except the George A. Treadwell Mining Company can this be said. Professor Treadwell's foresight in selecting these two properties—the San Luis and the one that bears his own name—as the two most promising copper properties on the continent because of their great precious metal values is now fully justified by the results.

The San Luis and the Treadwell can make handsome profits even though the price of copper goes down to a point which will close up all other copper producers. No investor can afford to overlook this fact.

The earnings of the San Luis Mining Company already pay all the expenses of production and a handsome profit applicable to dividends besides, and its earnings are steadily and rapidly increasing. The Company now offers for sale the balance of its Treasury stock in order to provide an additional fund for betterments, which consist in the increase of its equipment and in the opening up of mines so as to still further increase its earnings.

Prices will be quoted on application.

THE OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Chicago Subway, Once at 39½, Received Support.

It Has Fallen 40 Points in a Month—Uncertainty Probable Cause of Collapse—Mercantile Marine Strong.

After falling to 39½ yesterday, Chicago Subway received support which fixed 40 as the lowest limit. Gradually the stock worked its way up until it reached 43, and it closed at 42½, a gain of 1½ for the day. Now a share of Chicago Subway is worth just half what it was worth thirty days ago. Rumors of internal complications, franchise flaws, &c., can find no confirmation. Nobody seems to know just what the freight subway in Chicago is going to amount to, and this uncertainty is sufficient explanation of the stock's collapse. The success of the project is a matter of guess work. Dispatches from Chicago report even more decided weakness in the stock there than here. At the rate of fall of the last month there will soon come a day when the holders of Chicago Subway stock will feel no alarm, for there won't be any room for it to fall further.

Mercantile Marine preferred closed at 36¼ yesterday, and Standard Oil at 672½. There was a net loss of ¾ in Interborough. Mitchell Mining, the value of which was the cause of a fistic dispute between two curb celebrities, closed at 8⅝, the top price of the day. Greene Copper was strong, closing at 27⅞. Bethlehem Steel preferred sold at 88.

The principal transactions reported yesterday in the outside market, with high, low, and last prices, were as follows:

Chicago Terminal Company Election.

The Directors of the Chicago Terminal Transfer Company met yesterday and re-elected the old officers. They transacted no other business. According to one of the Directors the question of the future disposition of the property did not come before the meeting.

LOCOMOTIVE UP.

Wall Street Thinks Both Movements Due to the Same Cause.

The five-point advance in American Locomotive common yesterday attracted much attention to that stock. Short covering was offered as an explanation of the advance. The coincident six-point decline in International Power led to the theory entertained in some quarters that both movements were related to the changes in the Board of Directors of the American Locomotive Company, announced on Tuesday.

One of the rumors current was that the American Locomotive Company had made an important contract with the General Electric Company. This was denied by a representative of the American Locomotive Company. The report was presumably based on the fact that the two companies have been co-operating in the manufacture of electric locomotives, principally for the New York Central Railroad, and on the election of President Coffin of the General Electric Company to the Directorate of the American Locomotive Company.

There has recently been much talk concerning the possibility of the declaration of a dividend in the near future on Locomotive common. The dividend policy of the management of the company was outlined yesterday by one of the Directors as follows:

"The Directors intend to pay no dividend on the common stock this year. If business continues good the question will undoubtedly be taken up next year, but so far the board has not even discussed the question of a dividend. It is the policy of the management to postpone dividends on the common until such time as the Directors feel convinced that the dividend, whatever it may be, can be continued indefinitely, irrespective of ordinary fluctuations in business. The Directors desire to make the common stock an investment issue."

TRADE BALANCE CHANGES.

Proportionately Fewer Exports, But a Greater Volume of Business.

The statement of imports and exports for September, issued by the Bureau of Statistics yesterday, shows an increase of $18,005,485 in the imports for that month over the figures for the same month last year, an increase of $2,738,707 in exports and a decrease of $16,266,778 in the preponderance of exports over imports. The balance in favor of this country, although much smaller than last year, was about $5,000,000 over the balance for September, 1903. The imports and exports of merchandise for the month and for the nine months ended with September compares as follows with the figures for last year:

	September 1905.	September 1904.
Imports	$102,138,031	$84,132,546
Exports	136,005,822	134,267,115

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 18.—The tone of the local market was heavy, due more to the 2-point decline in United Gas Improvement than anything else. The stock was sold, first because of the promised rival to the Public Service Corporation in Hudson County, N. J., in which concern the United Gas Improvement is heavily interested, and, second, to a growing fear that success of the city party at the polls next month will be construed as a bear raid upon the stock.

The Lehigh stocks were also under pressure, Valley receding a full point, while Coal and Navigation Trust certificates suffered a similar loss. Pennsylvania Steel preferred was up ½, and there was good buying of Philadelphia Company common and Philadelphia Rapid Transit, but the supply of stock was ample, and no appreciable change in price occurred. Reading and United States Steel common were fairly active. Total sales, 29,012 shares; $84,000 bonds.

IRON TRADE CONDITIONS.

Effect of the Car Shortage—Upward Trend of Prices.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 18.—The Iron Trade Review to-morrow will say:

Complaints of car shortage are being made with increasing force. The movement of ore is being hampered, and in many places it is difficult to obtain prompt delivery of coke. In some sections the car shortage is also felt in the slow delivery of pig iron. That the railroads keenly appreciate present conditions is shown by the very large orders for all kinds of equipment which are being placed.

The Pennsylvania Railroad system, which recently placed orders for 16,000 cars, is about to order an equal number. The Vandalia system is also expected to order 16,000 steel cars, and the Central of New Jersey has placed an order for 1,000 steel hopper gondolas. The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad has authorized the purchase of 71,000 tons of rails, and other heavy orders are pending. The principal sales of the week were: New York Central, 125,000 tons; Clover Leaf, 11,000; Soo Line, 6,000; miscellaneous sales aggregated fully 60,000 tons.

The continued buying of rails following the unprecedented business of a few weeks ago is indeed remarkable, and indicates that all of next year's product will be contracted for before January.

The upward tendency of prices is still the leading feature of the pig iron market. Prices for Southern brands show quite a wide divergence in different territories. While iron has been sold in the Cincinnati district in limited amounts on the basis of $12.50, Birmingham sales have been made elsewhere at $13. In the Northern market considerably higher prices are prevailing, especially in Chicago and Cleveland. In both of these cities the withdrawal of local producers from the market has made it necessary to ship long distances, Buffalo being drawn upon for large tonnages. It is possible to ship iron from Buffalo by boat on the basis of $17.75 Chicago.

Advance in quotations of coke and increasing difficulties in obtaining prompt delivery are causing considerable anxiety among consumers.

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—Securities experienced selling much of the day, and closed rather weak. It was one of those days of evil rumors when the speculative community mulled over every bit of derogatory gossip that idle mongers were able to manufacture out of whole cloth.

Subway shares held fairly steady. At the opening here the stock sold as low as 40, which is its local low-record price. Later a small demand set in, probably from shorts, and the price rallied to 41. President A. G. Wheeler of the Illinois Tunnel Company returned to the city to-day. He said he could not explain the motive back of the bear manipulators in Subway stock.

The following were the sales on the Chicago Stock Exchange to-day:

GOULD NO LONGER CHAIRMAN.

Resigns as Head of Wabash Board, Perhaps Because of Missouri Law.

George J. Gould resigned yesterday as Chairman of the Directors of the Wabash Railroad Company and was succeeded by E. T. Jeffery, President of the Denver and Rio Grande and a Director in many of the Gould properties.

The retirement of Mr. Gould from the Wabash Chairmanship was generally regarded in the financial district as a recognition on the part of Mr. Gould of the fact that were his tenure of the office while holding an executive position in the Missouri Pacific to be brought before the Missouri courts it would be held that he was breaking the laws of that State.

It was recalled that in the recent injunction proceedings brought by Joseph Ramsey, Jr., to prevent the voting of the Wabash securities held by the Missouri Pacific the question was raised but not adjudicated by the court. The Judge in that case stated, however, that while it was evident to him that the law of the State had been broken in some respects, Mr. Ramsey was not competent to sustain the action.

No other changes were made yesterday in the officials of the Wabash. A. C. Bird, however, owing, it was said, to his ill-health, was not re-elected to his position as general manager in charge of traffic. That position was left vacant for the time being. So, too, was that of First Vice President, which was made vacant by the promotion of F. A. Delano to the Presidency of the road to succeed Joseph Ramsey, Jr. E. T. Welles is now Second Vice President, W. H. Blodgett Third Vice President, and E. B. Pryor Fourth Vice President and Assistant Secretary.

GATES STILL IN CONTROL,

But Not More So Than Before, Says Republic Steel's Counsel.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Republic Iron and Steel Company, held yesterday in Jersey City, all the stock represented at the meeting was voted for the same Directors, confirming the recent statement of officers of the company that there would be no contest at the meeting. W. H. Hassinger and John Crerar retired from the board, and their places were taken by E. J. Berwind and F. G. Cooper. The other Directors whose terms expired this year, including John W. Gates, were re-elected. The question of the Presidency of the company did not come before the meeting. The Directors will meet to-day and elect officers for the current year. Whether President Thompson will retire, according to recent reports, several of the Directors who were asked the question refused to say.

Harry Rubens, general counsel of the company, said that whatever action was taken by the Directors would be unanimous, as had been the election of the Directors themselves. Asked whether Mr. Gates was now to be considered in control of the company, Mr. Rubens said:

"I do not know that he is any more in control than he has been all along. Despite the unfortunate reports to the contrary, there never was any friction in the company between Mr. Gates and the other Directors. Mr. Gates has been a Director of the company for a long time, and he has been re-elected. Mr. Gates has been a valued Director, and his advice has always been sought."

Grant B. Schley in Bacon's Place.

Grant B. Schley has been elected a Director of the Northern Pacific Railway Company, announcement to that effect having been made yesterday. Mr. Schley replaces Robert Bacon, who recently became Assistant Secretary of State. Mr. Bacon has also retired from the United States Steel Corporation and from other companies with which he was connected as Director.

Boston and Montana Dividend Rumor.

The Directors of the Boston and Montana Copper Company, it was reported yesterday, have declared a dividend of $10 a share, the amount of the last dividend. The report could not be confirmed at the office of the company. The Boston and Montana is one of the subsidiary companies of the Amalgamated Copper Company. The Directors of the Amalgamated are expected to meet to-day to act on the quarterly dividend.

Ramsey Out of Western Maryland.

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 18.—The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Western Maryland Railroad Company was held this morning in the offices of the company in the Continental Trust Building. Five new Directors were chosen—Frederick A. Delano, who succeeds Joseph Ramsey, Jr.; Howard Gould, Gardiner M. Lane of Boston, E. L. Fuller of Scranton, Penn., and W. A. Wilbur of South Bethlehem, Penn.

Distillers Securities Co. Doing Well.

The Distillers Securities Corporation held its annual meeting in Jersey City yesterday and re-elected the old Directors. The financial statement showed that the earnings for the year were $2,472,029.95. Interest on the bonded debt paid was $903,149.23, in addition to which $251,871.72 was set apart for dividends, leaving $1,317,009 to be added to surplus. The outstanding stock is $29,926,682.93, the authorized amount being $32,500,000.

WOMAN SECRETARY SUES.

Files Bankruptcy Petition Against Gaylord Co. on a Claim for Salary.

A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against the J. Alden Gaylord Company, dealer in investment bonds at 35 Wall Street, by Yuditha E. Gaylord, Secretary and Treasurer of the company, on a claim for salary for thirty-eight weeks from Jan. 25 to Oct. 11 at $25 per week and $19 for expenses to Pittsburg, Penn. It was alleged that the company is insolvent, and committed an act of bankruptcy by paying the salaries of other officers of the company weekly from Aug. 5 to Oct. 7 to prefer them over her and other creditors. These payments were to Loren H. Mershon, President, $62.50 per week; Guy Wendell Burne, Vice President, $50 per week, and Frank Durand, manager of the industrial department, $20 per week. The company was incorporated on Jan. 2, 1905, with a capital stock of $200,000, of which it is said $10,000 was paid in cash, and succeeded to the business of J. Alden Gaylord, who died on Nov. 21, 1904.

Mr. Gaylord was a bond broker who had been in business here for thirty-two years. He was originally in the banking business in St. Louis, and came to New York in 1872. He established the firm of Gaylord & Hoffman, who continued together until 1883, when the firm was dissolved. Mr. Gaylord continued in business alone up to the time of his death. Mrs. Gaylord, the petitioning creditor, is his daughter-in-law. Loren H. Mershon was formerly President of the American Bond and Mortgage Company.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Carding Machines and Their Clothing Dutiable as an Entirety—Other Decisions.

In a decision by I. F. Fischer, the Board of United States General Appraisers yesterday sustained a claim filed by the H. G. McKerrow Company, Limited, of Boston, and held that carding machines and card clothing therefor must be regarded as entireties for purposes of customs classification. The board holds that the machines are properly dutiable as "manufactures of metal" at the rate of 45 per cent. ad valorem. The action of the Collector in levying an extra duty of 45 cents per square foot on the card clothing is pronounced illegal.

General Appraiser Sharretts wrote a decision for the board partially sustaining claims filed by Loeb & Co. and others of New York regarding the rates of duty applicable to imitation pearls. In a number of instances Collector Stranahan's assessment of 20 per cent. is cut to 10 per cent.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Oct. 18.—The local money market is unchanged. The usual table of rates, &c., follows:

Call loans, 5½@6 per cent.; time loans, collateral, 5 per cent.; time loans, mercantile paper, 5@5¼ per cent.; Clearing House loans, 5 per cent.; New York funds, 5c discount. Clearings, $27,937,723; balances, $1,476,143; Sub-Treasury debit, $25,245.

Early trading to-day centred in Adventure and Michigan, both making a good gain. There was realizing to be seen throughout the remainder of the list, and in some places considerable stock was distributed, but these sales were well taken and the market maintained a good tone throughout the day. There is a good deal of interest displayed in the coming Amalgamated dividend. Should the Directors increase the rate the shares will probably have a continuation of the bullish tendency for some time.

Yarn That J. P. Morgan Was Ill.

Reports that J. P. Morgan had been taken ill originated in London yesterday, and were circulated in Wall Street. Some color was given to the rumor by the fact that Mr. Morgan was not at his office. It was due much to the fact that he was attending meetings uptown. He will be there to-day at the usual hour, it was said at J. P. Morgan & Co.'s. Also he is not ill.

OTIS IN CONSPIRACY TO CONVICT ME---CARTER

Court-Martial an Infamous Farce, the Ex-Captain Declares.

TELLS OF PERJURY AT TRIAL

Defendant Says Personal Papers Impertant to His Case Were Seized by Army Officers.

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—"I was condemned and sentenced to prison on secret testimony at a hearing where neither myself nor my attorney was allowed to be," said ex-Capt. O. M. Carter at the hearing before Special Examiner Wyman to-day. "That is why I was insistent on obtaining a trial in a court of justice, where I could confront my accusers and summon witnesses. If I could have met my father-in-law, R. F. Westcott, in open court I know he would have told the truth. As it was, he was a feeble old man, and the Government representatives worried him into signing the statement which is now used as his testimony.

"The investigation by court-martial was an infamous farce. Gen. Otis, the presiding officer, was found one night in the office of the prosecuting attorney plotting to have me convicted. My attorney and myself learned that Gen. Otis had left the hotel secretly to conspire with the prosecuting attorney, and we made an investigation and found he and other members of the court-martial in secret conference with the Government attorneys. They walked a mile and then climbed five flights of stairs after the elevator stopped running so as to be alone.'

"You charge, then, that Gen. Otis and other members of the court-martial entered into a conspiracy to send you to prison?"

"I do, and I know what I am talking about," replied the witness. "The late President, William McKinley, was an honest man from the top of his head to his toes, but I was advised that some of his official family were corrupt."

Carter described the manner in which his books and private papers were seized by Government officers while he was absent in Europe in October, 1897. Certain papers, he said, which he intended to use to prove that many of the prosecution's witnesses committed perjury at the investigation by the court-martial were missing. He accused the officers of the court-martial and hoard of inquiry of having taken them in order to deprive him of the use of the documents at his defense.

He accused Capt. Gillespie, a member of the court-martial, and others of having copied many personal letters while the documents were in their possession. He also accused the Government officers of neglecting to return several pieces of personal property which he highly prized. One was a piece of the flag which floated over Fort Sumter when the fort was first fired on in 1861. Another was a letter from his wife, signed "Sweet Ann," containing a lock of her hair.

The witness was questioned at length regarding a contract made with his uncle, L. D. Carter, in 1897 for $10,000 a year to work for Capt. Carter's release from prison. The Government attorneys showed that L. D. Carter had about $50,000 worth of the defendant's securities at the time he was supposed to be drawing a salary of $10,000 a year for legal services.

"BARNEY" LYNCH THE HOST.

Third Avenue Helps Celebrate His Daughter's Wedding at a Feast.

The biggest weddinug feast Third Avenue has attended in years was served last night in honor of the marriage of Loretta Irene Lynch of 2,371 East 174th Street and John C. Clinton of Davidson Avenue and 183d Street.

Loretta is the daughter of "Barney" Lynch, who was an important witness in the "Sam" Parks trial, and is well known to labor leaders. The wedding was at the Church of the Holy Spirit, in the Bronx. Afterward "Barney," with 500 friends, adjourned to the Tuxedo Hotel, Madison Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street, where they had a supper. For years "Barney" and his brother "Pat" kept a saloon on the corner of Fifty-ninth Street and Third Avenue.

GRAFT, GOLD, AND GLORY.

It's "The Three Gs" Now, Says Col. Supplee to Underwriters.

Nearly fifty casualty and surety officials of the United States attended the second annual banquet of the Board of Casualty and Surety Underwriters at the Hotel Manhattan last night. John F. Stone of Baltimore presided, and speeches were made by J. Frank Supplee, A. W. Masters, William Smith of Hartford, and Edson S. Lott. Col. Supplee called this the era of "the three Gs, graft, gold, and glory." He urged his colleagues to keep clear of graft.

The board yesterday adopted a report recommending united effort to remove the hurden of special deposits now required by many States from companies incorporated in other States. The committee held that all such deposits ought to be made in a company's home State and a certificate of good standing there should entitle a company to do business in any other State.

The following officers were elected: President—John T. Stone of Baltimore; Vice President—Francis B. Allen of Hartford; Secretary—Walter C. Faxon of Hartford, Treasurer—W. T. Woods of New York; Chairman of the Executive Committee—George F. Seward of New York. The board will hold its next convention in this city.

ROCKEFELLER PAYS HER.

Woman Probation Officer Gets Salary from John D., Jr.—All Examined.

The State Probation Commission examined yesterday the women probation officers attached to the Magistrates' courts of New York, and then found time to question a few men probation officers. Homer Folks, Chairman, presided. One woman, Miss Smith, said she receives a salary for her work from John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

It was the unanimous opinion of the women officers, most of whom serve from humanitarian motives, that a central bureau would greatly facilitate probation work. With a single exception they declared that direct bribes had never been offered them.

In the case of the exception the officer said that a negro had told her that if she would obtain the release of a woman of his race who had been committed to Blackwell's Island he would pay her $100. She had reported the offer to the Magistrate in whose court she was working.

All the women who were examined were asked to formulate suggestions for the improvement of the probation service. They promised to do so. The Manhattan probation officers work independently. The Brooklyn women have an association.

CONSPIRACY AGAINST DOOLEY.

McAdoo Finds It and Warns Crooks That He's Behind the Captain.

Commissioner McAdoo told the reporters at Police Headquarters yesterday that he believed there was a conspiracy on foot in the Tenderloin to injure the administration of Capt. Dooley.

"I believe that there are some men," he said, "whether they are inside or outside of the department I shall not say, who are trying in every way they can to embarrass, obstruct, and impede the work of Capt. Dooley in the Tenderloin. I give notice to the crooks and their friends that infest the Tenderloin that I am aware of their actions, and that I am at the back of Capt. Dooley, and shall stand by him with all the power my position gives me, so long as he does his duty."

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

WILLIAM SHUTTLEWORTH.—William Shuttleworth, plumber of 79 Warren Street, this city, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $2,300 and assets $1 cash and plumbing tools $25, which are exempt. The debts were contracted as a partner in the firm of Shuttleworth Brothers, confectioners of 773 Flatbush Avenue, Brooklyn, who began business in January, 1904, and sold out in January, 1905. He resides at 999 Greene Avenue, Brooklyn.

LIBBY MANUFACTURING COMPANY.—Judge Holt of the United States District Court has appointed Marshall S. Hagar receiver in bankruptcy for the assets of the Libby Manufacturing Company, manufacturers of steam and water specialties at 147 and 149 Varick Street, on the application of Austin Corbin, a creditor, for $5,117, and fixed his bond at $10,000. It was stated that the liabilities are $20,000 and assets $18,000, and that there are a large number of suits pending against the company.

LOUIS PREGER & CO.—Schedules in bankruptcy of Louis Preger, doing business as Louis Preger & Co., wholesale clothing dealer at 710 Broadway, show liabilities, $40,208, and nominal assets, $21,516, consisting of stock, $12,000, in hands of receiver; stock, $3,000, in tailors' hands; accounts, $2,516, and real estate, $4,000, consisting of four frame dwelling houses at Blossburg, Penn., mortgaged for $2,000 to the Miners' National Bank. Among the creditors are the American Woolen Company, $6,754; Worcester Woolen Company, $1,846; Coronet Worsted Company, $1,338; Oakdale Worsted Mills, $1,214; A. D. Juilliard & Co., $1,700; Bacon & Co., $1,390, and James Talcott, $653.

NEW YORK CLOAK AND SKIRT COMPANY.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against the New York Cloak and Skirt Company of 31 East Tenth Street by the following creditors: French Fashion Company, $22; Passavant & Co., $204, and the Doull-Miller Company, $346. It was alleged that the company is insolvent and has transferred cash to certain creditors to prefer them. The company is a New Jersey corporation, incorporated in March, 1902, with a capital stock of $10,000. Charles Edelson, the President, went through bankruptcy five years ago. The company's statement on July 31 last showed assets $22,890 and liabilities $5,846. Judge Holt of the United States District Court appointed William Allen receiver of the assets. Stern, Singer & Barr, attorneys for the petitioning creditors, said that the liabilities are $9,000 and assets $4,000.

G. L. SCHUYLER & CO., INCORPORATED.—Deputy Sheriff Porges has received an execution against G. L. Schuyler & Co., Incorporated, wholesale dealers in lumber at the foot of East Ninety-eighth Street, for $1,434, in favor of the Booth & Lewis Lumber Company. The Sheriff put a keeper in the place, but yesterday afternoon a stay of proceedings was issued. It was said yesterday that some of the Directors had applied to the Attorney General for the voluntary dissolution of the corporation, and an order had been obtained to show cause why a temporary receiver should not be appointed. The business was started in 1835 by G. L. Schuyler, who died in 1889. The firm of G. L. Schuyler & Co. made an assignment on Sept. 23, 1901, and two days later a petition in bankruptcy was filed against them. A settlement was subsequently effected with their creditors by the formation of the present corporation, creditors taking stock in it for their claims.

THE COMMERCIAL WORLD

WHEAT—Some bullish Argentine and Indian news induced active covering of shorts yesterday, and prices advanced rapidly, closing ⅝@⅞c net higher and near the best point of the session. The leading bull operator at Chicago was credited with dealings on both sides of the market, but was said to have denied taking issue either way. The Argentine news consisted of reports that locusts had invaded Santa Fé Province, causing great damage to the new crop, which is expected to be late this season. Broomhall cabled that an official Indian report said famine conditions would prevail in the districts of Deccan and Karnatek, unless good rains fall before the end of the month. The United Provinces also want more rain. Another factor of strength early in the session was the Northwest receipts of only 570 cars, compared with 730 cars last year. The total interior movement was therefore about 100,000 bushels under the previous year. The principal change in European markets was an advance of 12 points at Budapest. Liverpool closed ⅛d net higher; there was a decline of 5@15 points at Paris, and a drop of ½ mark at Berlin. The Minneapolis wheat stock was reported to have increased 450,000 bushels, which was less than the same time the preceding week. A good cash demand was again noted at that point. According to the weather map Winter wheat States had further good rains, and crop conditions were reported to be promising. The local cash market closed firm, with No. 2 red, 91⅝c, elevator, and 93⅛c, free on board, afloat; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 95⅜c, and No. 1 Northern Manitoba, 94⅜c, free on board, afloat.

CORN—The local corn market closed ⅛@½c net higher, after a fairly active session, influenced by the wet weather all over the belt, the small receipts, and the advance in wheat. Commission houses at the West were sellers of May in the afternoon, which tended to weaken that market somewhat from top, whereas locally last prices were about best for the day. Receipts were nearly double those of last year at interior points, and Liverpool closed ⅛@¼d net higher. Exporters bought 18 loads here and 5 loads at outports. No. 2 corn was quoted 60¼c, elevator, and 60⅝c, free on board, afloat.

COTTON—The cotton market is more active and firmer on covering of shorts and buying for long account, which was inspired by bullish private estimates of the crop, big exports for the day, reports of a better spot demand, and predictions for cold weather in the Southwest. The close was 2@3 points down from the top under realizing, but steady at a net advance of 23@27 points. Sales were estimated at 350,000 bales. The opening was firm at an advance of 6@7 points in response to steadier cables, and inside of the first half hour the gain had been increased to a matter of 13@14 points on covering and bull support promoted by the better spot demand abroad and an estimate by a local authority placing the probable crop at only 10,300,000 bales. Around 9.82c for January, selling pressure increased owing to a renewal of bear pressure and realizing by buyers of the previous day; but the reaction was confined to a matter of 6 or 7 points, and after a somewhat irregular middle session the market firmed up again in the afternoon, reaching the highest point toward the close, when sentiment was influenced by the smaller receipts at interior towns, the big exports, over 81,000 bales for the day, and predictions for an increased export movement during the balance of the month, arising from reports of advance in ocean freight rates on cotton from various points. To-day's receipts at Houston and Galveston are expected to be heavy, but this is explained by hulls on the ground of a big export demand. The early weather map made a generally favorable showing, with the exception of scattering rains along the northern edge.

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 18.—Spot cotton—Good demand; sales, 10,000 bales; speculation and export, 1,000 bales; American, 9,000 bales; middling upland, 5.27d. Futures opened quiet, 3 points lower on near and 4 points lower on distant months; closed very steady, at a net advance of 1 point on near to a decline of 2 points on distant positions. Manchester—Yarns dull; cloths quiet.

COFFEE.—The recent widening of the differences between near and late months attracted some support for the near positions against sales of late months, and there was considerable switching in the market, which ruled more active and steadier owing to the smaller volume of actual liquidation. The opening was steady at unchanged prices, in line with European cables, which were no more than a response to the local losses of the previous day. During the early session prices lost a partial 5 points, but later rallied, and the market closed steady net unchanged to 5 points higher. Sales were reported of 76,000 bags, including the Exchanges. The general situation seemed to show little change. Receipts at primary points continued fairly liberal, and so far for the month of October have exceeded those of last season, when the movement was very light, by about 194,000 bags. For the season so far Brazilian receipts are still 338,000 bags behind those from the 10,000,000-bag crop of last year, however, so that the present moderate bulge in the movement is not necessarily an argument against the recently adopted small-crop views. There was no further news from Brazil concerning the coming crop, but the rate of Brazilian exchange was 1-16d lower, now standing at 10d. Of the primary markets Rio was 50 reis lower, but Santos was unchanged. Havre closed ¼@½ franc lower, and Hamburg was ¼@½ pfennig lower. The market for spot coffee was quiet, with quotations on the basis of 8 9-16c for Rio No. 7.

LONG ISLAND. FOR SALE.

$18 INSURANCE AND STOCKS $18 Octopus of Men's Homes.

A LOT. A LOT.

You Are the Judge. Which of These Three Suits You Best?

LIFE INSURANCE. STOCKS. REAL ESTATE.

85,000,000 of people who represent the pulse and heart of this Great Republic move backward and forward in the great channel of life for the struggle of fortune.
The great thirst and hunger for money leads the mind of man to investment, and he alone practically gambles with the future to increase his wealth and attain prosperity.
The public Press of to-day feeds the entire community with columns of deception practiced by the huge life insurance corporations of this country, who receive their cash from the hard earnings of the wage-earner and expend same in the channels which apparently increase their own personal wealth and their aims. Surrounded by friends, relatives, and political influence, whose motto evidently lies in the theatrical success of this last season in which the humorous horse trader, "David Harum," pursued but one method—"Do others or they will do you."

LIFE INSURANCE HAS PRACTICALLY PROVEN TO BE A ROBBERY

or, rather, to be more diplomatic, "A PROFESSIONAL COURTESY," to absorb the policyholder's cash. Statistics have already proven that only about sixty per cent. of the people's money is turned in for the purpose of mutual benefit and applied in the channels of insurance. Forty per cent. is simply taken care of by the promoters of these huge corporations, and they are made the Giants of Finance.
600,000 people in this Great Metropolis—one in every seven carry a policy of life insurance. All hard-earned money wrought for and paid by the sweat of the wage-earner's brow and laid away in the vaults of the Life Insurance Corporations, with the Trust Companies of New York used as a lever to buy and sell men's souls and wipe out any righteous individual who would dare to contend or question the methods of Life Insurance practiced by the officers of these corporations.

INSURANCE AS WRITTEN IN THE POLICY—INSURANCE AS PROMISED BY THESE COMPANIES—

looks like a star of wealth shining in the Heavens and making bright the path of future to every man who invests his dollars there. But the last three months by the Investigating Committee of the State of New York have proved that there are better channels for the wage-earners than the Life Insurance Companies of America.
Stocks in Wall Street lie in the same category. The streets downtown to-day are filled with the souls of millions of men whose echoes for years have filled the air. "KEEP AWAY," "KEEP AWAY," "DON'T BE A BRAINLESS FOOL."
Every investor there is but a pebble of sand on the seashore of time, to be wiped away by the great waves of greed and hurled far into the deep sea of eternity.

You Ask Yourself the question, WHERE WILL I INVEST?

WHERE WILL I GET VALUE FOR MY MONEY?—BUY A PIECE OF LAND.
PLACE YOUR FOOT ON A PIECE OF UNCLE SAM'S TERRITORY. YOU WERE BORN TO OWN AND POSSESS A PIECE OF THIS EARTH.

The good Book says that Moses led his people to the Land of Promise. We are not posing as Ministers of the Lord, but we do claim that we are the good Samaritans capable of revealing the truths of the land of promise in and around New York.

WE ANNOUNCE TO YOU THE GREAT HARVEST FIELDS OF PROFIT.

LONG ISLAND, THE LAND OF PARADISE.

For 5 years we have been buying and selling 5,000 acres in and around what we consider the wage-earner's and the Investor's Paradise. Our volume of business, disposing of nearly $1,000,000 worth of land to more than 5,000 people, gives evidence it is progressing and developing to the welfare and profit of the Investor.

WHY ARE THEY ATTRACTED? WHY DO THEY BUY?

Located right where the development is taking place, right in line of every and all improvements, which in a few years will make this point the recognized centre for vegetable gardens, chicken raising, and suburban homes for the rich and the poor at

F. B. LOOMIS REMAINS IN STATE DEPARTMENT

Takes Possession of Kasson's Clerks and Reciprocity Bureau.

MYSTERY AS TO HIS PLACE

Acts as Confidential Adviser to Root and Bacon—No Provision for Such a Post.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—Persons inimical to Francis B. Loomis who have rejoiced over his departure from the State Department did so prematurely. He has not departed. He is still in the Government service, and the understanding in the State Department is that he will remain. The place he now occupies is vaguely defined as "confidential adviser to the State Department." This is not its name; it does not seem to have any name yet.

Mr. Loomis wanted to be an Ambassador. He had to give that idea up because the opposition to him was so strong. When his retirement was announced at Oyster Bay it was stated in response to inquiries that no provision had been made for his political future. However, the defect has been remedied.

There is no such place as "confidential adviser to the State Department." It seems that Mr. Loomis's ultimate niche in the department has not been fully decided upon as yet. What he actually has done is to take possession of the offices and clerks left over by John A. Kasson when that indignant official threw up his place as reciprocity Commissioner in disgust. Mr. Loomis does not seem to be taking the exact place that Kasson left, but whatever he is doing or is to do for the department is done or to be done with the staff that Kasson left.

It has been the impression that Kasson's place would never be filled, but would be abolished by law. When the tariff makers reformed the customs schedules upward under the guidance of Nelson Dingley, they threw a sop to the advocates of revision downward by making elaborate provision for reciprocity treaties, and they went so far as to create a special reciprocity bureau.

Kasson, a sincere advocate of reciprocity, was made Commissioner, and proceeded to negotiate a number of reciprocity treaties. The Senate then developed the real importance of the reciprocity bureau by allowing every treaty quietly to die. After years of this Kasson indignantly resigned, declaring that the bureau was a farce. Although no attempt was made to fill the vacant position, his three clerks are still there, and the office never hae been abolished.

Whether Mr. Loomis is actually to succeed Kasson and take up that official's fruitless labor by attempting to negotiate a reciprocity treaty that can get a hearing in the Senate or whether he is to perform some other labor under the title has not yet been developed. At present his duties are confined to giving advice to Secretary Root and Assistant Secretary Bacon.

CALLER WITH A PISTOL.

Drops In on Lawyer Sully with a Demand for Money Quick.

Lawyer Wilberforce Sully was sitting in his office, 29 Broadway, about 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when a man stepped in and put a pistol at his head.

"Give me that money now," said the man with the pistol.

Mr. Sully's first movement was to grab the pistol, and turn the point in another direction. Then his secretary, who had sat motionless and amazed, made a jump for the visitor and grabbed the pistol. In a minute the two had overpowered the fellow.

From the Wall Street Detective Bureau, in the Stock Exchange, came Detectives O'Connell and Armstrong. They took charge of the man, and had him locked up at Police Headquarters within half an hour. He said he was Edward Brown, a broker, of Hempstead, L. I.

At his home in Yonkers last night Mr. Sully described his sensations at the suddenness of the man's appearance and threat.

"I was sitting there as calm and quiet as I ever was in my life," he said. "Before I knew what was happening this man had his pistol at my head. If he hadn't been so close to me that I could grab the barrel of the gun I suppose he'd have shot me. But my secretary and myself soon had him powerless.

"Oh, yes, I know the fellow. His brother is a good friend of mine, and this man himself has often tried to get money from me for no apparent reason, except that I was his brother's friend. He has very good family connections."

"Who is the brother?" the lawyer was asked.

"Well, I don't think I'd better tell his name. It wouldn't do any good. He is a decent man. The father was a lawyer of ability, and all the other members of his family, as far as I know them, are all that they should be. This fellow went wrong a long time ago. No, he's not a broker. He doesn't do anything that I know of."

Mr. Sully is well known in the University, Lawyers', and New York Athletic Clubs.

OFFICE BOY'S BAD FIRST DAY.

Tried to Pawn Clothes He Collected—Began by Stealing Pears.

After being employed just one day as office boy for Doll & Co., tailors at 140 Nassau Street, 16-year-old John Tyrrell was sent to two customers to collect clothes for repair. He got $150 worth. With this booty he made a bee-line across the Brooklyn Bridge to a Court Street pawnshop, where he offered to pawn the clothes for $2.50.

"What's your address?" asked the clerk.

"Make it 328 Pearl Street," said Tyrrell. As that happened to be the clerk's own address, he asked the boy to wait, and made straight for the telephone. In five minutes two detectives were on the spot, and took Tyrrell and the clothes away.

When arraigned in the Tombs Police Court yesterday, the boy was asked if he had ever stolen before.

"Only some pears once," he replied. "But I wasn't caught with the goods then."

He was held in $500 bail for examination.

PUNCHING BOUT ON THE CURB.

The Mitchells, Mining Experts, But Not Related, Get Together.

Harry Mitchell, brother of George Mitchell, President of the Mitchell Mining Company, met William Mitchell, a mining expert not related to the other Mitchells, in Broad Street yesterday afternoon. The meeting was brief but interesting while it lasted, according to those who saw it, that is until William G. Gallagher and some other curb brokers succeeded in separating the combatants.

The result of the fight was that William Mitchell retired to his office for a while and Harry Mitchell remained in Broad Street to tell about it, and W. G. Gallagher went home to nurse the bruises sustained in separating the two Mitchells. The controversy arose over statements said to have been made by William Mitchell about the Mitchell mines.

POLICEMAN TWICE STABBED.

Gilligan May Die of Wounds Inflicted by Noisy Reveler.

Patrolman John Gilligan of the West Thirty-seventh Street Station was stabbed twice in the neck and ear early this morning in West Forty-second Street, near Tenth Avenue, by Emil Schaeffer of Fourth Street, Union Hill, N. J. The man said he was a bartender, but the police disbelieve him. They say he was intoxicated. He was locked up after a fierce fight with Policeman Joseph Daly of the West Thirty-seventh Street Station, and Detective Sergeant Francis Peabody of the Central Office, who knocked him out with a blow on the point of the chin. Detectives Kreutzer and Finn of the West Forty-seventh Street Station and several other policemen from that station joined in the fighting.

Gilligan spied the man staggering up Forty-second Street from the West Shore Railroad ferry house. He was boisterous, according to Gilligan. He took hold of him, telling him he was a prisoner. The man resented arrest. But he said he would go along with Gilligan after some parleying, and they started off.

Gilligan and his man were nearing Tenth Avenue when Schaeffer suddenly drew some sharp instrument and struck at Gilligan, who tried to duck, but was not quick enough. His ear was almost cut from his head. Gilligan was still suffering from the effects of a bullet in his lungs from a thug in a gang two years ago, when he killed one of the gang, at that time at Fiftieth Street and Tenth Avenue.

The man followed up his advantage, Gilligan said, and struck him again in the neck, cutting close to the jugular vein. Gilligan went down. He drew his club and got up again, but the man was fleeing down the street. Policeman Daly of the West Thirty-seventh Street Station was on the other side of the street, the thoroughfare dividing the stations, and ran to Gilligan's aid. Gilligan made for his man, but dropped to the sidewalk after running about fifty yards. He was unconscious when picked up.

Daly grabbed Schaeffer after a short run and they rolled into the gutter, where they pummeled each other, now one being on top and now the other. Detective Sergeant Frank Reynolds of the Central Office squad, Detectives Kreutzer and Finn, and several policemen of the West Forty-seventh Street Station ran up, pounced on Schaeffer, and took him to the station. They hunted for a weapon but could not find any.

A hurry call for an ambulance was sent to Roosevelt Hospital, and the injured policeman was hurried to the institution and placed under the care of four surgeons. He may be fatally injured.

LEITER LOSES ONE SUIT.

Verdict for $69,767 Against Him—Relic of His Wheat Corner.

The action brought in the Supreme Court against Joseph Leiter of Chicago by William J. Zeller on a claim for $52,021 and interest on a promissory note made by Leiter in 1898, resulted yesterday in a verdict for the plaintiff for the full amount with interest, the judgment being for $69,767.93. The plaintiff sued as assignee on a claim assigned to him by the Allen, Greer & Zeller Company.

The note was given by Leiter in settling a running account with his brokers, and was made to cover their losses at the time Leiter was attempting to corner the wheat market. The note was protested, and Leiter in his answer to the suit declared that it was given without value received, and that under the laws of Illinois it came under the head of a gambling debt.

Counsel for Leiter gave notice that they would appeal from the verdict.

LINER'S CREW FIGHTS GANG.

Four Firemen of the Republic Hurt—Passengers in Peril.

Four firemen of the White Star Line steamer Republic were injured early yesterday morning in a fight which they and others of the ship's crew had with members of the Perry Street gang, at the foot of West Tenth Street. The Baltic, which sailed about 8 o'clock yesterday morning, lay so near the Republic that several of the passengers who boarded the Baltic early were endangered by the bricks and other missiles thrown, and one of them at last reported the fight to a policeman in Christopher Street. Two detectives then ran up to stop the fight.

The crew of the Republic had been ashore having a night's fun. They encountered a group of the Perry Street gang very near to the pier where their ship lay. The crew was quite willing to fight. So was the gang, so they went at it without stopping for excuses. For a while the gang was short of ammunition. They found some, however, on a barge loaded with Haverstraw brick. The sailors then quickly retreated into the ship, but not before four of them had been struck. When the two detectives got to the pier all they could hear was the racket made by those who were running away.

When the city begins to run the Staten Island Ferry, the first attempt in Municipal operation of a ferry next Wednesday, the following will be the programme:

The ferryboat Manhattan will be waiting to receive the Mayor and other city officials at the New York slip at 11 o'clock in the morning. The boat will then run to St. George and return. The Richmond will leave St. George at the same hour, carrying passengers from Staten Island.

NIAGARA OF WHISKY STORED IN THE GARDEN

Opening of the First Wine and Spirits Show.

ROBERT BURNS'S CHAIR THERE

And the Table at Which He Tippled in the "Toon o' Ayr"—Also a Moonshine Still.

When the American Bottlers' Protective Association started its Wine and Spirits Show at Madison Square Garden yesterday quite a number of people paid 50 cents to see it because quite a number of people were interested in bottling, corking, and labeling. It was the first exhibition of the kind ever held in this country.

As the visitor goes through the front door of the Madison Square Garden he is confronted by a display of domestic wines. Taking the avenue to the right he encounters on either side displays of Smith's whisky, Brown's whisky, and Jones's red. Further on is grape juice as a teetotal drink and grape juice as a cup that cheers and also inebriates. The programme, by the way, is bound with blue ribbon.

On the home run the visitor sees a machine bottling the demon at the rate of eighty quarts a minute; pyramids of beer bottles, their different shades backed by electric lights; tiers upon tiers of steins; a miniature model of a brewery, a cork forest in Spain, and then the front door again.

Just outside of the door is the regular café of Madison Square Garden. At this point, having made a preliminary tour of the Garden, the visitor is likely to disappear for a moment.

Last night there were about 7,500 liquor dealers of New York State in the Garden. These went about inverting bottles to the light, stroking their beards or mustaches, and behaving like men who were used to facing death. The balance of the visitors, however, were a silent lot. Their faces were solemn; their eyes were pre-occupied, but now and then they said:

"Mighty interesting, isn't it?"

At one display counter a young woman draped in green, to represent a certain brand of whisky, gave away little bottles with a smile. The smile was irresistible.

Further on, at another counter, a representative of a British M. P. invited guests in to see a source of inspiration. Inside the booth were two statues of Robert Burns, also Burns's chair from the Ayr cottage, and a table from a saloon in the "toon o' Ayr." The guide dwelt upon the amount of the whisky of his forefathers that Robert had swallowed at that table. Hence, he said, went Tam o' Shanter that Hallowe'en night when the wraiths pulled out the mare's tale. He proudly pointed to Masonic signe carved in the woodwork, the name of Tam engraved in immortal letters, and then, with much emotion, indicated one corner where deep in the woodwork were the initials "R. B."

"It was there," said the guide, "that he was wont to sit and write poems or argue with Holy Willie, or stand treat for Tam."

Although no drinks were sold in the exposition the bars within a radius of four blocks of the Garden did a roaring trade yesterday. Aside from this, the band played and the electric lights threw beautiful tints into the vari-colored bottles in the Garden. To a great many visitors it was Eden with the snake corked up.

To-day the show will be visited by dealers from Jersey. Gov. Stokes, it is said, has promised to be present. Corporation Counsel John J. Delany opened the show yesterday. Magistrate Wahle looked in and spent twenty minutes in reverie over the moonshine still. The exhibits seemed to be complete, except that a Tenth Avenue laboratory outfit was not shown. The exhibition will continue for eight days.

PACKERS LOSE A POINT.

Judge Rules That Indictment Is Sufficient for Pleading.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—Judge J. Otis Humphrey to-day gave the Government another victory in the preliminary struggle to convict the packers and agents of conspiracy to monopolize the beef business.

In his ruling he held with District Attorney C. B. Morrison that the counts in the indictment which charge conspiracy to monopolize trade are sufficient for the purpose of pleading on the part of the defendants.

Judge Humphrey gave the defendants until next Monday to enter special pleas in the case. The court also assured the defending lawyers that, whether they finally pleaded guilty or not guilty, the defendants need not appear in person.

One Boy Burglar Sent to Jail.

Benjamin Rovener and Edward Schoenfelt, the boys who were caught after they broke into the home of Max Kest at 8 West 118th Street, and who were accused of having committed more than fifty burglaries in Harlem, were before Judge Foster in General Sessions yesterday to be sentenced. Schoenfelt, who had pleaded guilty, was sent to the Elmira Reformatory. In Rovener, who had been tried and found guilty by a jury, Judge Foster suspended sentence. He has a home, while Schoenfelt has none.

Houpt & Finney of the Times Building, builders, announced yesterday the sale of the southeast corner of Broadway and Sixty-third Street, 114 feet by 145, by the City Investing Company to E. R. Thomas of the Thomas Motor Company of Buffalo, who bought it as an individual. Houpt & Finney will erect a four-story building to be used for a salesroom and garage for the Thomas cars. A lease has been executed for a long term to Harry S. Houpt. The property sold for $350,000.

LOIE SUNG'S MURDER WAS ALL A MISTAKE

But It Has Set Chinatown Watching for a New Tong War.

HIP SINGS SOUGHT MOY GUNG

But He Had Been Arrested a Few Hours Before for Protecting His Life in the Street.

Trouble was brewing in Chinatown yesterday, and it would not have surprised the police a bit if a tong shooting had started at any minute. All of this because Loie Sung, the laundryman, of 4 Mott Street, who was shot on Tuesday night, was murdered by mistake.

Loie Sung died in the hospital yesterday morning. A few hours later D. Frank Lloyd appeared in the Tombs Court as counsel for Moy Gung, a Wang Company man. Gung, who is a peaceful Chinaman by reputation, was out in the street Tuesday afternoon, when Woo Toy, a Hip Sing Tong man, shoved the muzzle of a revolver up in front of Gung, and shot his eyes in preparation for shooting. Gung wrenched the revolver away, and turned it on his assailant.

The Hip Sing Tong man fled. A policeman appeared, and Gung ran to 14 Mott Street. The policeman arrested him there. Then Woo Toy hurried up. He was highly indignant. With a great show of righteous wrath he insisted that Gung be arrested for assault. He was, but the policeman also arrested Woo Toy.

Gung was arraigned in court late Tuesday afternoon, and paroled in the custody of Mr. Lloyd. The Magistrate told Mr. Lloyd to be sure to have Gung in court yesterday.

"If he isn't killed to-night I will," said Mr. Lloyd, "but there is going to be trouble in Chinatown to-night."

The trouble came when Loie Sung was shot down. Mr. Lloyd has no doubt that the murderer mistook Loie Sung for Moy Gung.

Chinatown has been nervous for a week. When Mock Duck, the leader of the Hip Sings, was taken to the Tombs to be tried for having a part in the Doyers Street theatre shooting the Hip Sings and the On Leong Tongs patched up a truce. Chinatown stayed quiet. But a week ago Lee Toy, nephew and secretary of Tom Lee, "the Mayor," and a strong On Leong Tong man, left Tom Lee and went over to the Hip Sings.

Lee Toy is said to be a Yale graduate, and a rather thoroughly Americanized Chinsman as far as dress and attainments go. When he left Lee the On Leongs smelled trouble. They have the Wang Company men as allies now. That is because Moy Gung has been arrested for protecting himself.

Tom Wah Toy, who is charged with killing Loie Sung, was held without bail yesterday by Coroner Scholer.

TEMPER TO BLAME, BOTH SAY.

But Blums Disagreed in Separation Suit as to Whose Temper It Was.

Mrs. Sophia Blum applied to Justice Stover yesterday, in the Supreme Court, for an order to compel her husband, Jacob, to pay alimony pending her suit for separation. The couple were married in 1898. He is a member of the firm of Blum & Blum, importers of vellings at 474 Broadway. In an affidavit submitted to the court Mrs. Blum declares she advanced $5,000 to her husband to start him in the business, and later gave him $2,000 more. She says that the business is now worth $50,000, but that no part of the money which she advanced has been returned to her. His income, she adds, is $10,000 a year. She says she could not get along with him on account of his temper, and that on one occasion he told her he had "opened forty-five bottles of wine." She also says he has deserted her and her children.

Blum, in an answering affidavit through his attorneys, Levy & Unger, says he is deeply attached to his children, and, notwithstanding his wife's "unfortunate infirmity of temper and her cruel conduct, I am now and have been at all times ready and willing to live with her and my children, and I hereby offer in good faith, and with an honest desire to do, to resume such relations as should exist between a husband and wife with growing children."

On the motion for alimony Justice Stover reserved decision.

Look out for trouble if you haven't a Fall overcoat.

A cold blooded corporation should give you warm cars—but they don't, and open cars are a favorite meeting place for pneumonia germs and all their kith and kin. You don't have to look for trouble with a boy.

But you can somewhat lessen the trouble by giving him clothes that do not wear out, or fade out at the very first test.

Clothes that are made from cloths that really are all wool and fast color; clothes that are properly, strongly put together.

They cost more in the beginning, yes—but less in the end.

A double-breasted suit, warm from being double-breasted, loose and with bloomer breeches for style is one recommendation.

JEROME TO MURPHY: WHERE DID YOU GET IT?

He Says in Speech He Would Like to Ask Him Six Questions.

APOLOGIZES TO McCLELLAN

For Having Said That He Was a Disgrace to His Father—Calls Him Honest and Brave.

A crowd of 1,800 heard District Attorney Jerome in his speech at the Murray Hill Lyceum last night ask, as to Charles F. Murphy of Tammany, "Where did he get it?" Let me ask him six questions within the criminal law, said Mr. Jerome. And in almost the same breath he apologized to Mayor McClellan for having said that the Mayor had disgraced his father's name. Then he said that the Mayor had done the best he could, but that he had tried to do the impossible.

"We have had an honest administration," said Mr. Jerome. "We have had a brave and decent fellow in the Mayor's office."

The audience listened quietly to Mr. Jerome's apology. The crowd didn't remain quiet, however, all the evening. The applause came when Mr. Jerome attacked Leader Murphy and said:

"Where did he get it—Good Ground, the automobile, the liveried servants and all?"

He drew a comparison between Murphy and his predecessor, Croker—"my friend, though I fought him for twenty years," as Mr. Jerome put it.

C. C. Nadal presided at the meeting. John Brooks Leavitt and Julius Henry Cohen kept the audience occupied as they could best till the principal speaker arrived at about 8:45 o'clock. His appearance on the platform was the signal for a two-minute demonstration, with the audience standing and waving handkerchiefs, and the band playing "The Star Spangled Banner." The storm of sound was all but gone down when the band changed its tune into "There'll be a hot time in the old town to-night," and the audience broke lose again, ten times worse than before.

Mr. Jerome's Speech.

When he could speak at last Mr. Jerome set all laughing by referring to "dot liddle Cherman bant," which he loved to hear playing patriotic airs wherever he went to speak. Then he repeated many of the things he said at the Carnegie Hall meeting the night before, declaring especially that he had put the issue more clearly before the people than had ever been done in a great American city before. After a few words about his record in the office, broken by a wild outburst of enthusiasm when he called out "I have served you faithfully," Mr. Jerome said that he had spoken bitterly at times, but never to serve his own interests. Then he said:

"Where is my Good Ground? Where is my automobile, and my liveried servants? Have I grown rich in your service, with infinite opportunities? My bank account does not show it. But there is one whose foul hand reaches over you all. Foul, I say, and yet I should not say foul; he was a poo lad in this town, who had his troubles and his trials. He went into the game and fought it manfully. He came to be—most of you know the difference in New York between the one-saloon man and the two-saloon man—a two-saloon man. Give him credit; he fought his game earnestly and manfully, not honestly perhaps always, but manfully, with a brave heart. In this whole land there is not a man this day, bitter as my words against him may seem, that I have more respect for than Charlie Murphy. But is he the man you want to rule your destiny? Is he the man that you free American people are to bow down to and salaam to and say, 'Thou art the man'? And yet are you doing anything else in this election?

"Who nominated the men that are running against me? Did the people of this City of New York in free convention nominate Clarence Shearn? A decent, honest, clean little man as ever lived, and a warm friend of mine; but did you, the free electors in New York, choose him? Who nominated Flammer? [Great laughter.] Not altogether a laughing proposition, although I guess he is left at the post. Did the free electors of the City of New York in convention assembled choose him? Who nominated Jimmy Osborne, a man that was my friend—a man that I kept with me as my right-hand man—a man from whose lips I have heard sermons so sweet and true in regard to American independence that I would not dare here to emulate them? Who nominated him? Was it the man from Good Ground or was it the free electors of the American people that selected him as their standard bearer for this campaign?

"I come before you to give you a chance to show whether you have got manhood enough in you to go into the polling place and say that that man who is no man's man is the man you want.

Croker a Real Man.

"You will remember a man who was a good man, and my friend—though I fought him for twenty years—Dick Croker, a real man, a man with a jaw, a man that stood up and never lied to a friend. A man that stood firm and true whenever he gave you his word, and told you he would or he would not, and then did as he said. During his last visit back to this country, when he came here to bury his poor boy that was killed, I had a long talk with him and that question of questions, this miserable man from Good Ground, came up. He has said that I sent my confidential man to Good Ground to him and that if I denied it he would prove

SAYS GEN. GREENE PAID MATOS

Gen. Andrews Denies That Venezuelan Revolt Surprised His Chief.

Gen. Avery D. Andrews, former Police Commissioner and Vice President of the National Asphalt Company, was the principal witness examined yesterday before United States Commissioner Gilchrist in the suit of the Venezuelan Government against the New York and Bermudez Company for $11,000,000 because of the company's alleged participation in the Matos revolution in that country in 1901.

At the hearing last Tuesday Gen. Francis V. Greene, former President of the National Company, testified that Gen. Andrews, Frank W. Mack, and Arthur W. Sewall had informed him they had decided to support the Matos revolution, and had advanced $100,000 to Gen. Matos.

Gen. Andrews, called yesterday in behalf of the defendant company, admitted not only the payment of the $100,000, but an additional payment of $30,000, as well to Matos. Gen. Andrews, however, asserted that the money was really extorted and was paid to protect the property of the company.

When asked concerning Gen. Greene's testimony, wherein Gen. Greene said he was surprised to learn upon his return from Europe that his associates were aiding the revolutionists, Gen. Andrews said that Gen. Greene himself made the $30,000 payment to Matos, and that he didn't think he was so very surprised.

"Gen. Greene is a West Pointer and a gentleman, I believe," observed Mr. Dupignac, representing the Venezuelan Government.

"He is," replied the witness.

"And you, Gen. Andrews, are a West Pointer and a gentleman?"

"I am."

"And will you say here that Gen. Greene testified falsely when he said he was surprised when he found you were aiding Matoe?"

Gen. Andrews thought a moment and then replied:

"Well, he exhibited some surprise."

This ended the examination and also concluded the taking of evidence in this country.

ROCKEFELLERITIS.

New Malady Discovered by Pastor of Euclid Avenue Baptist Church.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 19.—The Rev. Charles A. Eaton, pastor of the Euclid Avenue Baptist Church, has discovered a new malady which he calls "Rockerfelleritis." He says Cleveland people have it badly. He made the announcement at the Ohio Baptist Convention at Cincinnati on Wednesday night.

"Rockefelleritis," he said, "is the latest disease with the American people.

"What's Rockefelleritis? There, there, now, don't get excited; that is one of the symptoms of the ailment. Do you feel a curiosity as to the fitness of John D.'s wig? That's another. Perhaps the delegation of Clevelanders who made a pilgrimage to John D.'s house were afflicted. Have you a gone feeling? Then take care, maybe you have Rockefelleritis, too. There seems no doubt that Dr. Washington Gladden is in a bad way. Look out for Ida Tarbell.

"My noted church member, Mr. John D. Rockefeller, is a warm personal friend of mine and I will just say this of him. It is all that is necessary to say for fifty years. The Euclid Avenue Baptist Church has held its reputation throughout the country for three things; no—put it four things—its simplicity, aggressiveness, spirituality, and unitedness. The fact that Mr. Rockfeller has so long been a member of such a church speaks for him. It is all that is necessary to say for him."

SHAKESPEARE LIKE ME—ADE.

He Says the Bard of Avon Used a Great Deal of Slang.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 19.—"So long as people clamor for slang they'll get it. Shakespeare is full of things you can't find in a polite dictionary. He reeks with slang. And why not? You can't truthfully depict a class of people and leave out their vocabulary."

George Ade thus replies to-day to an attack on slang by Prof. Henry Van Dyke, who is quoted as saying:

"If I can persuade men to see the difference between Shakespeare's writings and 'Fables in Slang,' I think I will accomplish a great task."

"Well, I don't want to say anything against Shakespeare," continued Mr. Ade.

"He couldn't reply, and, besides, I am in a position to sympathize with him. Neither of us is much of a go in New York. My 'Bad Samaritan' went to smash in Broadway because it was too innocent of slang. I guess that puts me in Shakespeare's class, all right.

"But Shakespeare has plenty of slang. Falstaff and Pistol used little else, and 'The Merry Wives of Windsor' is almost a continuous stream of colloquial English. People don't know what pressure is brought to bear for slang. I have tried my best to get away from it."

YALE FRESHMEN PUNISHED.

Penalty for Riot Means the Weakening of the Football Team.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 19.— Two hundred members of the Yale freshman class, who caused the small riot of last Sunday week, were put on special probation by the college Faculty at a meeting held this afternoon. A statement issued by Chairman Bancroft of the freshman Faculty to-night was as follows:

"The Faculty decided to take full responsibility in the punishment of the freshman class for the disorder on York Street on Sunday, Oct. 8. It was voted to put the occupants of the three large dormitories on York Street on special probation. This involves the loss of privileges of cuts and marks for the Fall term."

This action removes the privilege of staying away from any recitations or daily chapel exercises. The order will make it impossible for any freshman football player under probation to attend out-of-town games if leaving town will conflict with recitation hours. As the freshman football game against Harvard is to be played this year in Cambridge, the Yale team will be badly weakened.

The Faculty's action is more drastic than had been expected, and has caused a sensation.

$101,000 THIEF CAUGHT; HAD DESTROYED $20,000

Adams Express Co.'s Fugitive Clerk Arrested in Bridgeport.

$80,000 FOUND IN VALISE

Edward G. Cunliffe Avers That He Took Money in Pittsburg Office on an Impulse.

Special to The New York Times.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Oct. 19.—Edward George Cunliffe, the Adams Express Company's clerk who, on the night of Oct. 9, stole $101,000 from the safe at the company's office at Pittsburg, Penn., was captured in this city this forenoon in front of the Arlington Hotel by Harry Brown of the Pinkerton Detective Agency, who recognized Cunliffe as he was approaching the hotel entrance. Cunliffe had registered as J. P. Dowling. He was turned over to Patrolman O'Connell.

At Police Headquarters the prisoner was met by Henry Curtis, the local agent of the Adams Express Company, who knew him. As soon as Cunliffe saw Curtis, he said: "Hello, Mr. Curtis." Then, turning to the detectives and officers who were following, he said: "Gentlemen, I'm your man, the jig is up."

Supt. Birmingham asked him if he would answer some questions.

"Yes," replied Cunliffe, in a firm voice. "Well, Cunliffe, men trusted as you were ought not to steal."

"I know it."

"Didn't you know that you would be caught if it took ten years to find you?"

"Half an hour after I took the money I knew they would catch me if it took twenty years. I wanted to put it back, but it was too late. That was the first dishonest act I ever committed."

He said the money was in safe hands, but that he would not restore it at present. Finally, however, he confessed that he sent about $80,000 in a valise addressed to his brother-in-law, Mr. Boardman, at Bristol, and this evening Mr. Curtis and Supt. Thornhill of the Pinkerton agency started for that place to recover the money.

About midnight to-night David C. Thornhill of the Pinkerton Agency in New York, who assisted in the arrest of Cunliffe, had a talk with the prisoner in his cell and told him that the $80,000 had been recovered at the home of his brother-in-law in Bristol and pressed him to tell where the missing $20,000 was hidden. Cunliffe finally said: "You'll never get it; I have destroyed it."

Detective Thornhill at first doubted Cunliffe's story, but the prisoner stuck to it, saying he had burned the money in his room in the hotel where he stopped here. He said he was afraid that the bills would give him away, as they were of large denominations and practically marked, as they were notes of the Allegheny National Bank in Pittsburg, and that everybody was looking for them. Cunliffe said that rather than carry them around he burned them.

In an interview Cunliffe affirmed that he took the $101,000 on a sudden impulse.

"I don't know what possessed me," he said. "I had signed for $400,000 earlier in the day, and never a thought of stealing it came into my head. Finally, about ten minutes before I left the office the idea came that I might as well take that package of $101,000. Instead of throwing it into the safe, I tucked it under my arm and walked out, bidding the fellows good night.

"I went home to my family, told my wife that I was going out and would be back at midnight. Then I hurried for a train. I knew all the fast trains and I took them. I reckoned New York would be too hot for me when my train got there, and I took the first train I could out of there.

"My only regret through it all has been my wife and family. I have four children, and I knew my wife and family would be continually haunted by the detectives' search for me. I didn't write home because I knew the mail would be watched."

It appears that Cunliffe had been hoarding here part of the time with a woman, and had begun to furnish a flat for her. He will be taken to Pittsburg to-morrow afternoon. He says that he will waive extradition papers, being anxious to have the matter over with as soon as possible.

BRISTOL, Conn., Oct. 19.—Nearly $80,000 of the money stolen by George Edward Cunliffe Oct. 9 from the Adams Express Company in Pittsburg was recovered to-night at the home of Joseph W. Boardman, Cunliffe's brother-in-law. For just a week the fortune had lain in an old suit case unknown to Boardman, who was holding the valise, expecting its owner would call for it any time.

As the result of the statement made by Cunliffe in Bridgeport to-night that he had sent $80,000 of the plunder to his brother-in-law Boardman in Bristol, a reporter called at the home of Boardman, who is a young man, and the agent of the Electric Express Company of Hartford. He said he had received no money, but that on Oct. 12 a suit case came to his house from Bridgeport, and as there was no name on it he had not opened it. His wife signed for the case and Boardman placed it in a closet, thinking it was sent to him as an agent of an express company to be called for later.

Boardman suggested that the police be sent for and the case opened. Chief Meimes and Capt. Belden of the police force were summoned and in their presence the case was torn open.

Bundles of bills tumbled out on the floor, and also a black suit of clothes, a pair of shoes, and two shirts. As the money was being counted Supt. J. C. Curtis of the Adams Express Company's New England agency and a Pinkerton official drove up to the house and were shown in. Mr. Curtis then counted the money, and found a total of $70,953.55. There were fifteen hundles of $100 bills, making a total of $50,000, and the rest, with the exception of $3,55, which was in a pocket in the coat, was $50 bills.

No one was more surprised at the display of money than Boardmen himself, and his story is fully believed.

Mr. Curtis packed the money in a valise, and took the late train for Hartford.

SHAW IN WALL STREET.

Obedient to the President's Order to "Say Nothing to Nobody."

Secretary of the Treasury Leslie M. Shaw was in town yesterday and spent some time in Wall Street. He was at the Custom House for an hour. His appearance in the Street gave rise to many rumors.

Among these was a report that he was considering the question of increasing the Government deposits with the National banks, and another that he was advising with bankers in regard to the issue of bonds for the construction of the Panama Canal.

It was also said that Secretary Shaw's visit was made entirely with reference to Custom House matters.

Secretary Shaw himself would confirm none of these rumors, nor say anything on any other subject. He could not even be got to discuss the new sun spot.

PRESIDENT AND CANADA.

Favors Reciprocity, Henry W. Whitney Tells Pittsfield Republicans.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Oct. 19.—Henry M. Whitney, Democratic candidate for Lieutenant Governor on the Canadian reciprocity issue, said in a speech here to-night:

"I tell you Republicans of Pittsfield and Massachusetts that the Democratic platform touching reciprocity with Canada is the platform of President Roosevelt. I myself have it from President Roosevelt's own lips.

"In an interview at which Senator Lodge was present, President Roosevelt assured me that he was in favor of continental free trade. He declared that he would do all he could in favor of it. Senator Lodge, as I say, was present, and I challenge him to deny that he heard the President make substantially this statement."

SEARCH FOR CHUM SUCCEEDS.

Princeton Man Found in a Logging Camp—Disappeared in June.

Special to The New York Times.

TACOMA, Washington, Oct. 19.—Robert Harris, son of wealthy people at Princeton, N. J., who disappeared from Tacoma last June, has been found working in a logging camp near Port Angeles by Titus Hale, who was his classmate at Princeton.

After leaving Tacoma Harris went to Bremerton and thence across Puget Sound into the dense forest of the Olympic Peninsula. He is said to have written that he was going into the Olympic Mountains to jump over a precipice. It was believed that he had done so when months passed with no tidings of him.

Harris's mother would not believe that her son was dead. She induced Hale to come west and search for him. Hale found Harris two weeks ago, but Harris would not leave the logging camp, whereupon Hale went to work with him.

Yesterday they came through Tacoma on their way to Seattle. Hale expects eventually to induce Harris to return to his family at Princeton.

SHE HYPNOTIZED HERSELF.

Physicians' Report May Obtain Freedom for Salvation Lass.

CHICAGO, Oct. 19.—Inga Hanson, the ex-Salvation Army girl, who was sent to Joliet Penitentiary for alleged perjury in connection with a personal injury suit against the Chicago City Railway, will probably be pardoned by Gov. Deneen.

Two physicians deputized by the Governor to examine the woman declared to-day that she was the victim of autohypnosis, and that as long as she was in her present environments she would be helpless, and that death would ensue unless she were released. If she were to say to herself that she was well she could rise from her bed and walk, they say. Organically there is nothing wrong with her. The physicians declare that there is strong probability that she was first a sufferer from an injury which caused her temporary illness of the same nature as that from which she is now helpless. The case is referred to as a rare development of traumatic hysteria.

A "HARD LUCK" CHILD.

Her Many Mishaps in Attaining the Age of 6—The Last Fatal.

VINELAND, N. J., Oct. 19.—Rosie Kenely, six years old, fell into a tub of water at her home here to-day and was drowned. She was known as the "hard luck" child.

Just before she was three years old burglars entered the house and bound a cloth across her mouth, so that she almost smothered.

When she was four, she fell from a second-story window without being seriously harmed. The next year she fell into a well and escaped with bruises and a fright.

She was six years old in August, and a few days later she fell into a washtub filled with water and almost drowned.

In the same tub she drowned to-day.

THREAT OF A TEXTILE STRIKE.

The Workers Ask 14 Per Cent. Increase in Wages.

The annual convention of the United Textile Workers of America, which ended yesterday, heard from the locals in Fall River that they had refused an offer of 5 per cent. advance in wages from the manufacturers. They demand an increase of 14 per cent., and will go on a general strike if this demand is refused. Other towns will make demands for higher wages. The convention decided that financial assistance will be given by the National union in case these strikes take place.

It appears that in the cotton famine of about two years ago, when there was little to do at the mills, the wages of about 100,000 workers were cut. An unsuccessful strike followed.

The 14 per cent. advance now demanded would bring the wages up to what they were before the strike. Next to Fall River the operatives in Dover, Mass.; Lowell, Lynn, and New Bedford are the best organized, and the demands will be made in these towns next. National President Golden, who was Chairman of the convention, said yesterday:

"The conditions this year are the reverse of what they were before the strike. Now every mill is busy, and there is no excuse for not restoring former wages."

ROGERS GOT $3,565,500 IN BOSTON GAS DEAL

Standard Oil Man's Testimony in Receiver's Suit.

MEMORY FAILED AT TIMES

Couldn't Recall Positively Who Furnished Millions—Admitted Having Heard of William Rockefeller.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Oct. 19.—That H. H. Rogers made a profit of $3,565,500 from his Boston gas deal, financed by William Rockefeller, developed to-day when the testimony given by Mr. Rogers in the suit against him by George W. Pepper, receiver of the Bay State Gas Company of Delaware, was filed here with the clerk of the United States District Court. The testimony was given before Causten Brown, master, but the public was excluded from the hearings.

The plaintiff alleged that H. H. Rogers received from the New England Gas & Coke Company $3,000,000, in addition to the amount stipulated by him for the sale of his interests in the Dorchester and Brookline gas companies. Mr. Pepper asserts that this $3,000,000 belongs to the Bay State Gas Company of Delaware under a trust agreement.

Mr. Rogers testified that in November, 1897, he owned 18,500 shares of Brookline Gas Company stock, 5,176 shares of Dorchester Gas Light Company stock, and that he owned or controlled $1,615,000 of the indebtedness of the Brookline company, also $1,000,000 worth of first series United Gas Company bonds.

He said he gave an option on these stocks and bonds to the Central Trust Company of New York, and that he received a check for $8,063,102, bonds of the New England Gas and Coke Company to the face value of $1,000,000 and 4,000 shares of stock of the same company in payment.

The payment was made on Dec. 10, 1895, and A. C. Burrage conducted the preliminary negotiations. He stated that he had nothing to do with the organization of the coke company, and that he never promised that company that he would cause contracts to be made with that company by the Dorchester, Brookline, and the four Boston companies for a period of fifty years through the Massachusetts Pipe Line Company. He said that he is still a Trustee of the Bay State Company of Delaware, and has always held control of the New Jersey corporation of the same name.

Mr. Whipple showed to Mr. Rogers a letter sent from his office, referring to eleven notes of the Massachusetts company, one for $50,000 and ten for $5,000 each, dated Oct. 30, 1896. Mr. Whipple said that this letter was sent to A. C. Burrage, and that Mr. Burrage drew up a check for the amount of those notes to his order. Mr. Rogers said that he never had the notes in his possession.

Mr. Whipple pressed him hard for facts in regard to this letter, and to the matters to which it referred, and he asked him if his cash book would not show a transaction which the letter mentioned. Mr. Rogers stated he did not know whether his cash book would show the transaction, and that he did not remember anything about it himself. He says that he has no record showing transactions of purchase and sale of stock of the Brookline company.

Walter I. Badger, counsel for Mr. Rogers, said at this point that the books do show records of the purchase of stock of the Brookline company between Jan. 1, 1893, and June 1, 1893.

Mr. Rogers was asked as to the records on his check book, and he said: "The book shows that on Dec. 10, 1897, there was entered in it the receipt of a check for $8,063,102.44, which was deposited. That same day a check for $6,000,000 was drawn to the Central Trust Company, and a check of $2,063,102.44 drawn to William Rockefeller. These entries are in the check book, not the cash book."

"Were these transactions, beginning in 1893 with the purchase of Brookline gas and ending in December, 1897, in the sale to the New England Gas and Coke Company, carried on with funds furnished by William Rockefeller?" asked Mr. Whipple.

"Mr. Rockefeller financed the transactions with others," responded Mr. Rogers.

Mr. Rogers was asked if Mr. Rockefeller would not have books which would show these transactions, and he asked Mr. Rogers if his own books did not show what these transactions were. Mr. Rogers said that he did not think his own books would show what happened at that time.

"Then your books are not always kept with such accuracy or in such a manner as to enable you, in respect to a transaction in which you are interested, involving a million of dollars, to tell who furnished the money; is that correct?" asked Mr. Whipple.

"Not always," said Mr. Rogers.

In answer to another question as to where the money used in these deals came from, Mr. Rogers said that he remembered indistinctly that William Rockefeller and Moore & Schley may have furnished the money to purchase the Delaware Company securities in May, 1896. He thought that Gen. Jourdan of Brooklyn, R. A. C. Smith, and Mr. Weidenfeld may also have been interested, and Mr. Burrage indirectly.

Mr. Rogers was asked if he could not procure Mr. Rockefeller's books through his friendship with him, in order that the profits might be shown, especially the profit made by Mr. Burrage.

"I know of no legal reason why they should not be furnished," said Mr. Rogers.

"How were the profits made up?"

"That has been running through my head for a good many years," said Mr. Rogers.

"Well, haven't you any idea how the profits were made up?"

"Well," said Mr. Rogers, "they were made up of the difference between what the goods cost and what we sold them at."

He said that the net profit was $3,565,500, as he remembered it, which did not include Mr. Burrage's share.

"Mr. William Rockefeller—you knew him quite well, as a business associate?"

"Well, I had heard of him," admitted Mr. Rogers, who failed, however, to recall the incidents connected with his election to the directorates of the various Boston gas companies.

KAISER IN AUTO SMASH.

His Machine Collides with Another—Emperor Has Narrow Escape.

BERLIN, Oct. 19.—Emperor William had a narrow escape from serious injury this evening.

His Majesty was crossing the street in front of the castle in his auto car when an automobile cab approached at high speed. The chauffeur of the Emperor's car saw the cab when it was almost upon him and turned his machine sharply. The cabman at that moment also saw the danger and threw the brakes on with full force. Nevertheless the two machines collided with a considerable shock.

Emperor William's car took him into the court of the castle. The other machine was disabled.

LIKE THE PHANTOM SHIP.

The Orion Under Full Sail in Mid-Ocean with No Soul Aboard.

A three-masted bark, believed to be the Orion, the crew of which was taken off by the east-bound Cunarder Etruria last Sunday, was sighted in midocean last Monday by the White Star liner Teutonic, which arrived from Liverpool yesterday morning. The "phantom ship" when sighted by the Teutonic was in lat. 42.17 and lon. 62.23, which is about twenty miles south of the point where the Minnetonka passed the bark last Sunday.

The Teutonic passed within five miles of the derelict. The bark had upper and lower fore and maintopsails, three jibs, main topgallant, spanker, and main topmast staysail set at the time. As the bark was keeping a straight course eastward the wheel evidently was lashed. When seen she was flying an inverted ensign as a signal of distress. The officers leveled their glasses on the craft, but not a sign of life was seen, unless a black object that some thought was a dog was in fact the Orion's mascot.

In the old manor house, which is not included in the sale, hangs the original grant of all of this property, signed and executed by King William III. Until now, none of the land has ever changed hands except through inheritance. Robert S. Finney was the broker in the present deal.

M'CLELLAN SOUNDS CAMPAIGN KEYNOTE

Tells Tammany Ratifiers What His Administration Has Done.

OSBORNE REPLIES TO JEROME

Calls Boss Rule an Imaginary Issue—Cheering Crowd Packs the Wigwam.

Tammany ratified its city ticket in true Tammany style last night in the Fourteenth Street Wigwam. Although the drizzling rain spoiled the prearranged outdoor meetings, the old hall was jammed to overflowing and the demonstrations were record breaking, even for Tammany.

Mayor McClellan was cheered, applauded, shrieked at, and cheered again on his entry, and his speech, in which he sounded the keynote of his campaign, aroused keen enthusiasm, especially when he declared that he would not say the people were on trial, but knew that he and his administration were on trial, and that he would leave it to the people to say whether or not he had "made good."

Borough President John F. Ahearn, prior to the Mayor's appearance, made a speech, in which he declared that District Attorney Jerome had expressed to him his willingness to meet Mr. Murphy. Then James W. Osborne, candidate for District Attorney, attacked Jerome.

Mr. Osborne was greeted with tumultuous applause when he came forward to make his speech. Cries of "Give it to him, Jimmie!" and "Don't let him bluff you!" were heard all over the house. Mr. Osborne devoted his entire attention to Mr. Jerome, pointing out as one proof of his own honesty that Jerome had retained him in office when he became District Attorney. He created the wildest enthusiasm by saying that if there was not proof enough to convince any one that Jerome sought the Democratic nomination, he (Osborne) was ready to furnish absolute proof that he made every effort to get it up to the hour that the Democratic Convention was called to order.

Crowd Gathered Early.

Long before 8 o'clock, the hour set for the ratification, Tammany Hall was filled to the doors with a typical Tammany crowd. There were several women in the boxes, and Bayne's Sixty-ninth Regiment Band kept the crowd good natured. Scores of policemen were on hand to look after the crowds in the streets, but the rain attended to that duty for them and they were sent home early. By 8:15, when Bridge Commissioner George E. Best called the meeting to order as Chairman of the Ratification Committee, the hall was so densely packed that one could not squeeze in from the outside. Commissioner Best introduced Walter S. Logan as the Chairman of the evening.

Mr. Logan started in in a way to arouse the enthusiasm of the audience by mentioning the name of Mayor McClellan at the end of every sentence. He declared the Mayor to be the best executive the city has had in a generation, and said Mayor McClellan had made the city the best governed in the Nation. He said the only men who did not believe this were two opponents, one of whom had been in Europe for months and the other was disgruntled because he had not got on the ticket. He urged the Republicans, Independents, and old soldiers to vote for McClellan.

"If you are Republicans," said Mr. Logan, "and want to vote for a Republican, you cannot get one to vote for. [Laughter.] My old friend Ivins is an ex-Democrat, and it is not many years since he and I were tramping the streets of New York together and shouting Democratic battle cries. The other candidate for Mayor is a Democratic Congressman, but with a record far different from that made by Mr. McClellan in the House. Therefore, my Republican friends, if you must vote for a Democrat you will be much better off by taking the straight goods."

Mr. Logan then branched off in another direction and caused adverse comment in the audience by taking up the Sam Parks case and using his conviction as an argument against Jerome. Mr. Logan praised Mr. Osborne and then sent another spasm down the backs of the leaders by declaring that in electing McClellan Mayor this year the people would be electing him Governor next.

"Ivins thinks if you elect McClellan Mayor now you will put him in Albany next year," declared Mr. Logan. "Well, I think so, too, and if you do, it will be New York's only chance to get in the Governor's chair a man who will look after the city's interests."

Cheered 12 Minutes for the Mayor.

Just as Patrick F. McGowan, candidate for President of the Board of Aldermen, finished a brief speech Mayor McClellan came on the platform. Instantly the entire crowd let itself loose, and for twelve minutes there was a terrific din. In vain did the Mayor try to still the crowd so he could be heard.

At first he stood facing his audience like a statue, then, as some humorous incidents developed, a shadow of a smile played around his mouth until, finally, as the band struck into "Tammany" to add to the din, he broke into a hearty laugh. As soon as there was the slightest lull in the cheering some one would jump to his feet and start it all over again, and, with each of these renewals, the band would play "Yankee Doodle Boy," "The Star-Spangled Banner," or "Marching Through Georgia."

Finally, when the crowd was about exhausted, the cry of "Four, four, four years more!" was taken up and shouted by all for a couple of minutes.

"There does not seem to be much doubt that I again am back in Tammany Hall," said the Mayor, with a smile by way of introduction. Then he began his prepared speech as follows:

"Fifteen years ago almost to a day I stood upon this platform and made my first political speech. Since then, as men reckon human life, a generation has gone, but, as men reckon life in politics, many generations have gone by. Candidates have been nominated, elected, or defeated; men prominent then are no longer with us to-day; men prominent to-day were then unheard of.

"During fifteen years the Democratic Party has had its successes and reverses, has won victories and suffered defeats; but despite it all, despite everything that has occurred during fifteen years, the party to which you and I belong is as strong and virile to-day as it was fifteen years ago—yes, as it was a hundred and fifteen years ago. And the reason for it is that victories have been won because we have hewed straight to the line of principle, and because even in defeat we have never forgotten that the Democratic Party has a mission to perform—to give the people honest and good government.

"I cannot express to you how profoundly I appreciate the honor of having led the party to victory two years ago and at having been chosen again to lead the party to what, God willing, will be another victory.

Must Render an Accounting.

"Two years ago I criticised my distinguished opponent because, instead of suggesting reasons for his own re-election, he devoted the greater part of his time to trying to prove why I should not be elected. Consistency is a jewel, and I shall try to be consistent. I do not believe that in this campaign the people of New York are on trial, but I frankly concede that my administration and I are on trial. I believe that under our theory of government, when a public official seeks a re-election at the hands of his constituents, it is his duty to render an account of his stewardship, and that it is for the people to determine whether or not that stewardship has been satisfactory to them.

"I prefer to make my appeal to the people on what I have done, and what my re-election will mean, rather than on the weaknesses of my opponent. I have been a candidate for elective office eight times, and I have never made a campaign of abuse. I shall not climb down into the sewer now. Let those to whom the atmosphere of the sewer is congenial stay there; their company does not attract me. I have always fought as I believe a gentleman ought to fight, and I do not intend to change my method.

The Three Vital Things.

"There are three vital Democratic principles which apply to government in city, State, and Nation—honesty, efficiency, and economy. And in these three principles are summarized the whole purpose for which the Democratic Party lives—good government; and, as an administration can prove that it has been faithful to these principles, so it proves that it deserves the confidence of the people.

"My administration has been honest, and by honesty I do not mean the honesty of dollars and cents, for any public official not incorruptible is a thief. But by honesty I mean honesty of intention, honesty of purpose, honesty in thought and word and deed, having for its object the fulfillment of pre-election pledges and an ambition to faithfully care for the trust committed to our keeping.

"The efficiency of an administration must be judged by its specific performances, and by our acts we stand ready to be judged. When I assumed office I found many public improvements under way and many more requiring immediate attention.

"The problem of transportation between Brooklyn and Manhattan had been left practically untouched by my predecessor. In a few weeks the new terminal of the Brooklyn Bridge will be completed, which will greatly increase the train capacity of the bridge.

"When I took office the Williamsburg Bridge had been officially opened, and yet only foot passengers could cross. To-day four trolley tracks are in operation, and a huge underground terminal station has been begun. The Manhattan and Blackwell's Island Bridges are under way and will be completed within the contract time.

Water Famine Threatened.

"I found New York threatened with a water famine. The reluctant consent of a partisan Legislature was secured last Winter, and to-day a non-partisan Water Supply Commission has begun the work of furnishing New York with a practically limitless supply of pure water. I found the city in danger from fire through the lack of a high-pressure water service. To-day such service has already been inaugurated on Coney Island and is being installed in the business districts of Brooklyn and Manhattan. As a further protection against fire, the paid Fire Department has been extended to the Boroughs of Queens and Richmond.

"To the police force has been given the three-platoon system, it has been increased 550 men, while traffic has been regulated and life and property are safer than ever before.

"More money has been spent on school buildings than in any similar period of our city's history. The part-time pupils have been materially reduced in number, although the school census has increased abnormally, and 100,000 additional seatings will be ready during the Winter. These are only the most important public improvements which have been inaugurated. If it is true that municipal statesmanship consists of honesty and engineering, then in that sense at least my administration has been statesmanlike.

Public Control of Franchises.

"The greatest progress that has been made has been in the direction of the public control of franchises. The franchise wealth of the city belongs to the people, and should never be parted with, but should be so employed as to bring the greatest possible return to the people who own it. The question of municipal control is purely one of dollars and cents, is only a question of business, and not all the demagogues and charlatans in Christendom can make it otherwise.

"If it is more profitable for the people that the franchises which they own should be rented to private enterprise, (always under public control,) then they should be so rented; if on the other hand it is more profitable for the people that they should be operated by government, then they should be so operated. I believe that government should never interfere in the field of private enterprise as long as private enterprise does its duty by the people.

"This Democratic principle of public control of franchises is threatened by two classes of enemies; first, those who would have the people grant their franchises in perpetuity and thereby lose all future control of them. An example of this sort is the franchise of the Broadway Street Railway, which was granted in perpetuity more than twenty years ago, and over which the city resigned all control.

Demagogues More Dangerous.

"The other class of enemies to the principles of public control of franchises is even more dangerous to the principle. It consists of doctrinaires and demagogues, sincere and insincere men; some carried away by unreasoning enthusiasm and others deliberately trying to make of the business proposition a shibboleth with which to catch votes. These enemies of the principle insist that under all circumstances the people must not only own the franchises, but must themselves operate them, whether as a profitable or a losing investment, and that if the people cannot themselves operate them, then the public utility must not be undertaken under any circumstances.

"By limiting the power of the people to do what they will with their own, they make certain public improvements absolutely impossible. As for example: The Constitution has limited the borrowing capacity of the municipality to 10 per cent. of the total assessed valuation. We have a margin for future indebtedness of about $40,000,000 only.

"In face of this constitutional provision and with this inadequate sum it is an absolute legal, physical, and financial impossibility that any further rapid transit routes can be undertaken by the city alone and unaided. If we cannot use private capital, if we must use our own credit exclusively, then we can have no new rapid transit routes; yet people are clamoring for additional rapid transit facilities, and these enemies of municipal control would deny them what is clearly their right.

City Took the Staten Island Ferry.

"My administration was in its early days confronted with the problem of municipal control of public franchises in a concrete form. The lessees of the Staten Island ferry franchise declined to renew their lease, and we were confronted with the alternative of either having no ferry at all or taking it over ourselves and operating it as a municipal utility, and we took it. Next week the most perfect ferry system in the world will be inaugurated by the City of New York. A similar situation arose in regard to the Thirty-ninth Street ferry, and we are solving it in the same way.

"Next week we shall inaugurate the first municipal electric lighting plant, and we have already begun the construction of a vast plant, costing $7,500,000 for the lighting of the public streets, parks, and buildings in the City of New York.

"It is easy to spend money. There is no difficulty in making public improvements if the bank account is unlimited, but where the amount of money available is limited and where the needs of the city are practically limitless, then the question of paying as you go becomes a very serious one. Despite the fact that during my administration more public improvements have been begun than ever before in the history of the city; despite the fact that we have authorized in that period issues of corporate stock amounting to $120,500,000, $10,500,000 more than in any similar period, the assessed valuations have been increased less than in any year but one, and the tax rate has been reduced materially. We have not only made phenomenal progress in public improvements, but we have done so at a less cost to the people of New York than ever before in her history.

Will Tell How Money Was Spent.

"This is a campaign of education, and at the risk of making myself tiresome I propose before its close to discuss in detail the work of the several departments under my control. The people have the right to know what has been done with their money; the books are open, and I propose to show how that money has been spent.

"If upon calm reflection the people of New York believe that during the last two years they have received a dollar's worth for every dollar that has been spent; if they believe that this Democratic administration has tried earnestly and honestly to do its duty, and by living up to Democratic principles to give this city a decent, clean, business administration, then I ask them, regardless of party, to remember that they are citizens of New York and to cast their votes for the ticket of which I have the honor to be head."

James W. Osborne's reception was uproarious enough to satisfy any candidate. He plunged into his speech without wasting any time, and appeared to be thoroughly enjoying himself. Mr. Osborne spoke in part as follows:

"My friends, my real good friends, [laughter] have told me that during this campaign I must present to you a spectacle of great repose of manner and I am going to try my best to do it. [Laughter.] Mr. Jerome has said during this campaign that he does not intend to indulge in personalities. Well, I tell you I believe that if he keeps his promise it will kill him. [Laughter.] Now, I am going to follow the advice of my friends and read to you a few remarks.

"There has been injected into the pending political contest an issue which I propose to take up and fight to a finish. I refer to the campaign now being carried on for Mr. Jerome for the office of District Attorney. Mr. Jerome has publicly stated that the people of New York are on trial. If they don't elect him they stand convicted. [Laughter.] Now, I want to tell you this, if the people are convicted it is the only great criminal with power, influence, and wealth that was ever convicted by William Travers Jerome." [Great laughter.]

(A voice: "Second round.") [Laughter.]

"He further states that he stands alone as the representative of those who will not stand for political slavery; that he is the champion of the people against the bosses; that every base element in the community is against him; that if the people are to enjoy liberty and self-respect they must vote for him and only for him.

Says Nominations Were Alike.

"I have received the nomination for District Attorney at the hands of the convention of the Democratic Party. Mr. Jerome well knows that four years ago he received the nomination for District Attorney at the hands of the Republican convention, and that the same opportunities were offered to the enrolled voter in the choice of delegates to that convention that were offered to the roll of voters who elected this year the delegates to the Democratic convention.

"Mr. Jerome well knows that had the Democratic convention nominated him for District Attorney he would instantly have accepted the nomination. [Laughter.] He knows that he was not only ready and willing to take its nomination, but also that earnest efforts were made to bring about his nomination at its hands, and that he not only made no attempt to restrain these efforts, but publicly stated that he would take this nomination if it were offered to him.

Says Personalities Are Plentiful.

"It is true that Mr. Jerome has publicly stated that he does not propose to inject into this campaign any personalities, and that he does not propose to discuss candidates, but as a matter of fact, both Mr. Jerome and his supporters have declared over and over again in the press and on the platform that a vote for any candidate for District Attorney other than Mr. Jerome is a vote to make vice and degradation control the office of District Attorney of this county.

"Mud is mud by whomsoever thrown or by whatever name it may be called. Neither during my time of office or since has any one tried to make the assertion, veiled or otherwise, that I was controlled, dominated, or influenced in my official conduct by any man, set of men, or by any depraved, degraded, or sinister motives. If such were the case, why did the only honest and modest man on the face of the earth reappoint and retain me in office? [Laughter.]

"I know that Jerome told everybody in New York last time he was running for office that he believed that I was efficient and honest, and I want to tell you one of the reasons why I was honest. I couldn't help but be honest in public office because I never was tempted during the whole time that I was there.

"I believe that all those fellows that discover so many crooks or thieves in ordinary life in the City and County of New York must hang a sign out somewhere. [Laughter.] Now, don't tell anybody that. That ain't in my speech.

Liberties in Danger.

"The people of this county should, and no doubt will, determine this contest upon the merits and demerits of the respective candidates. During Mr. Jerome's administration there have been and still are features in the conduct of that office containing elements of great danger to the liberties of the people and to the due and orderly administration of justice. These features are and must be the subject of fair, frank, and open discussion.

"Once for all I want the voters of this county to understand that I shall represent the people of this county quite as much as would Mr. Jerome if he were elected; that I will be as little the representative of any particular individual or set of men, and that my energies and abilities will be devoted quite as much as his would be to the repression and punishment of crime.

"Four years ago Mr. Jerome said that if he was elected to office he would start a procession from Tammany Hall to Sing Sing. We have had four years of Mr. Jerome in public office. During that time the organization has handled hundreds of millions of dollars in carrying on public business and not one solitary Tammany man has joined that mythical procession."

Mr. Osborne again asserted in closing that Mr. Jerome had sought the Democratic nomination, and said he could prove it.

When Herman A. Metz entered he was recognized and cheered. The candidate for Controller, looking pleased with his reception, began his speech at 8:30 o'clock. Mr. Metz spoke in part as follows:

"I bring you pledges of loyalty from every kind of Democrat in Brooklyn. I think it is safe to say that we have more kinds in Brooklyn than any other place in the Union. In this campaign, however, they are all of one mind and impelled with one ambition, and that is to vie with each other as to who can do the most for the city ticket on election day.

"The subject of the education of your children is one that comes nearer to you than any other question with which the administration is concerned. Vast sums of money are asked for annually for educational purposes. The budget is arranged, and must be passed upon by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment; the Board of Euducation gets money in lump sums, and thereafter uses it according to its judgment, and in many cases regardless of amounts apportioned for specific purposes. I refer especially to the amounts set aside for land and buildings.

"There is a perpetual lack of seating capacity, and every administration promises a full day schooling for every child of school age, only to realize at the end of its term that there are practically as many half-time classes as when they came into power, and it seems impossible to keep up with the increase in population.

"The only way to do is to anticipate for two or three years this increase and make sufficiently large apportionments for land and buildings to be ready for the children who are going to apply for admission at that time. This may necessitate the curtailing of expenses now incurred for special branches and so-called 'fads,' which the teaching force as well as the public are criticising. In any case, the Mayor and the Controller are held responsible and the administration is criticised for its failure in carrying out the pledges made to supply sufficient school room.

"If the Mayor and Controller were both members of the Board of Education, I think much could be done toward changing the conditions that exist, and they would have at least a chance personally to exert their influence toward changing conditions, for which they are so much criticised.

"If I am elected Controller, it will be my effort to have a bill passed amending the charter to this extent."

Mr. Metz closed with an appeal to his hearers to work hard for the ticket.

Before Mr. Metz finished speaking, Borough President Ahearn came upon the platform and received one of the warmest demonstrations of the night. After Mr. Metz had concluded, the Chairman introduced Mr. Ahearn. This was a signal for another installment of "Tammany" from the band, while the crowd let itself loose to applaud the Borough President.

Mr. Ahearn spoke warmly of the administration of Mayor McClellan, and called upon all who stand for civic decency to ratify his administration at the polls.

Promises Kept, Says Ahearn.

"Every promise he made two years ago has been carried out," said Mr. Ahearn, "and in no department of the government has his administration been so conspicuously successful as in the care for the public schools. The promises he made two years ago that before his term of office expired he would have room in the schools for every child of school age has been fully realized, and it has been no small task to undertake."

After Mr. Ahearn, Chairman Logan created another sensation by introducing Patrick F. McGowan, candidate for President of the Board of Aldermen, as the man "who will be Mayor of New York for the three years McClellan will be Governor."

Mr. McGowan took the introduction smilingly. He was the only speaker of the night to refer to either Controller Grout or President Fornes. He said both officials would retire from office with the best wishes of the community.

Mr. McGowan, who is a member of the Board of Education, devoted considerable time to the school situation. He said part-time classes would be done away with in the near future through the large number of schools in course of erection and now nearly completed.

"Additional new sittings to the number of about 80,000 will be provided by the first of January," he said, "and buildings are under way which will give a total of 100,000 new sittings in addition. We have devised a system of alternating study and recreation hours for primary classes to benefit the healt hof the children, and whe have introduced a new system of evening schools."

Senator Thomas F. Grady made the last address of the evening, and he devoted his entire attention to Mr. Hearst and the Municipal Ownership League. He said that if there was any contract or agreement to cut personalities out of the campaign he would have to be let out, as he purposed speaking of things as he found them, and that whenever he saw a snake in the grass he considered it his duty to scotch it.

"We hear from Hearst in this campaign," he said, "because, notwithstanding that he holds a place in the Congress of the United States as a Democrat and a nominee of Tammany Hall, this organization would not become a tail to the kite of his Presidential ambition, and so Mr. Hearst, in characteristic fashion, is trying to harm the organization, and yet says he is still a Democrat.

"He is a fine person to assail boss rule! A man selected without voice of the people, without primaries, without delegates, by a convention in which every one, even to the humblest doorkeeper, was paid by him. A convention made up by him, controlled by him, nominates him unanimously and his running mates are also selected by him.

"It is not necessary to have a Hearst to represent municipal ownership. It is already represented, and not by promise, but in fulfillment by George B. McClellan."

SWAMPED FROM THE SKY.

The Rain's Overflow Meeting Totally Eclipsed Tammany's.

Outside Tammany Hall, for the overflow crowds, the bands blared "Tamman-e-e." The chorus of "swamp 'em," came from the skies. It was a wet night, and the overflow meetings weren't held.

Tammany had made elaborate preparations to handle the big street crowd that was expected. On each side of the entrance platforms had been erected. In Irving Place there was another stand, at which the Italian voters were to be addressed by Antonio Zucca, while facing Irving Place on the south side of Fourteenth Street, was one for the Germans.

Shortly after 7 o'clock a line of red fire was trained up and down Fourteenth Street between the car tracks. When this was fired the red glare lighted up the whole street. Rockets began to shoot up and bands began to play. Then the rain, which had been coming in a drizzle, came in floods. Everybody ran for shelter. Only one attempt was made to begin a speech. That was at the Italian stand, where a man with a cigar stump in his mouth and an umbrella aloft, shouted:

"Frien' san' fellowcit'zens!"

Then he gave it up, stepped down with a groan, and got a dry cigar.

There were 200 policemen on duty under Inspector Brooks storm doorways.

The men of the squad assigned to Irving Place took refuge in the hedged veranda of the Academy of Music, where they found an unhappy Italian with a peanut stand. Inspector Brooks was busy for some time trying to figure out what had happened to his 200 men. They were all eating peanuts.

In the rainstorm there was one incident that kept the policemen and the crowds in the storm doors amused. In the middle of the drenching rainstorm, across Fourteenth Street from Broadway, came a lugubrious-looking procession. There were twenty park derelicts in a line. Each carried a sign bearing one letter. Together these spelled:

HEARST THE REAL RAFFLES.

The rain soon drove even these enthusiasts (at $1 each) to shelter.

A few minutes before 9 o'clock a man with his coat collar turned up, his hat pulled down, and without an umbrella, came through Fourteenth Street. A man close behind him looked like the Mayor's Secretary, John H. O'Brien. Then a howl went up from the storm doors. It was Mayor McClellan, who was plodding through the rain to Tammany Hall. He had walked from his residence in Washington Square.

CHALLENGE TO JEROME, RETORT AND "PROOF"

Supposed to Show That He Sought Murphy's Aid;

AHEARN BEING THE EMISSARY

He Says Jerome Was Ready, at His Request, to Talk with Murphy—Jerome Refuses Comment.

Charles F. Murphy, in answer to District Attorney Jerome, put forth a statement yesterday that Mr. Jerome had repeatedly sent an emissary to him at Good Ground to get on the Tammany ticket for District Attorney, and that Mr. Jerome was even willing to became a membsr of the Tammany General Committee in roturn for a Tammany indorsement.

Mr. Murphy dared Mr. Jerome to deny this, and promised that if he did proof should be forthcoming at last night's Tammany ratification meeting. Mr. Jerome promptly did deny the allegation in theso words;

"I do deny it, for it is absolutely false. Now let Murphy prove what he says from the platform, as he says he will. I never in my life sent a messenger to Charles F. Murphy. I will not say, however, that he did not send a messenger to me."

Ahearn's Tale.

Borough President John F. Ahearn was put forward by Mr. Murphy at the meeting last night as the man who had come to Tammany Hall as the Jerome emissary. This is what Mr. Ahearn said of the incident:

"I am here to-night to verify the statement made by Mr. Charles F. Murphy [applause and cheers] regarding Mr. Jerome. [A voice: 'Cigarettes.'] I have always been friendly to Mr. Jerome, and four months ago I called upon him at his office. After discussing the political situation that was to be, I took it upon myself to ask him if he would accept the nomination for District Attorney if given to him by the organization known as Tammany Hall. [Applause.]

"Mr. Jerome told me he would, under certain conditions, and those conditions were to this effect: That George B. McClellan must be the candidate for Mayor on the same ticket with him. [Applause.] I told him, no fear of Mr. McClellan. He then said to me that he felt that he had done a gross injustice to Mr. McClellan on the stump two years ago, and at the first opportunity that presented itself in public he would retract what he said about him while on the stump. That he did a week or two weeks afterward in the City of Philadelphia.

"About three weeks ago I received a telephone message asking me to have luncheon with Mr. Jerome. I accepted his invitation, and I had luncheon with him. During luncheon, after discussing questions appertaining to the political atmosphere, we got down to the office of District Attorney, and I said to him:

"'You are a candidate for District Attorney by Tammany Hall. Why don't you go and see Mr. Murphy?'

"He said: 'I am willing to go to meet Mr. Murphy at any time, place, morning, noon, or night.' When I went back with that same message to Mr. Murphy, Mr. Murphy said:

"'I don't want to see Mr. Jerome, [applause and cheers]; I have nothing to say to him. If the Democratic organization nominates Mr. Jerome and he is elected, all I will ask of him to do is to conduct that office so that it will be satisfactory to the public at large.'

"I am here to-night to make affidavit, if necessary, to that statement. [Applause.]

"A transcript of Mr. Ahearn's statement was shown to District Attorney Jerome at Clinton Hall after his meeting on the east side. He did not seem to be greatly interested. Asked if he would make any reply, he said:

"I will say nothing to-night. Whatever I have to say I will say to-morrow night at the meeting at Zeltner's Hall."

This was Mr. Murphy's statement yesterday morning:

"I notice that Mr. Jerome in his remarks last night indicated that he never had sought the indorsement of either party. That is false.

"Jerome sent a confidential man to see me on two or three occasions in his own behalf. I told this man that it was not necessary to see me. Then Jerome sent to me again and asked if he could see me personally. I sent back word that it was not necessary; in fact, I told him that if he was to be nominated, it would be much better that he did not see me, that no pledges were wanted, and that his case was in the hands of the convention. He persisted, however, and said he was anxious to meet me at any time or place in order that he could have a distinct understanding with me. He even agreed to join the Tammany Hall General Committee.

"If Jerome denies this before the meeting here to-night we will prove the truth of it from the platform then. I notice, too, that he mentioned Good Ground very often in his speech. The reason he is so familiar with Good Ground is that one of the messengers he sent to see me came to Good Ground and reported my words back to him from there.

"As to Mr. Osborne being a puppet of mine, I have only to say that I did not see Mr. Osborne for a long time before and I have not seen him since the convention. Furthermore, he received his nomination without any pledges to any man or group of men.

"Again, Mr. Jerome plainly said that if nominated by all parties he would agree to leave the city until after election and not take the platform or attack any man or organization.

"Regarding Jerome's reference to contracts, Jerome knows, as does every one else who recalls my testimony before the gas investigating committee, that I have no interest in any contract, and the books produced at that time proved that to be the fact."

INDEPENDENTS IN THE FRAY.

The Harrison-Black Organization Indorses the Democratic Ticket.

Headquarters were opened yesterday by the Citizens' Independent Democracy at the Marlborough Hotel and a banner, containing the names of the entire Democratic city, county and borough tickets, was strung over Broadway.

Francis Burton Harrison, ex-Congressman and the nominee of his party in 1904 for Lieutenant Governor, is the President of the organization, which was founded by William Harmon Black, Commissioner of Accounts, and Mr. Harrison. Mr. Black is the Vice President, and John F. Galvin is Secretary and Treasurer.

Among the honorary Vice Presidents are John C. Calhoun, Paul Fuller, Jr., Hugh R. Garden, and Joseph Ferris Simmons.

The organization will hold a mass meeting in the last week of the campaign, probably in Carnegie Hall.

"We have indorsed the entire Democratic ticket," said Mr. Harrison, "and we have candidatee whom all Democrats can support with pride and pleasure. They already have the support of the regular Tammany organization, but our organization appeals for them to the independent voters of the city.

"A vote for Mr. Ivine is a vote for Mr. Hearst, and no conservative citizen, be he Democrat or Republican, can afford to cast his ballot for any candidate except Mayor McClellan."

Oscar T. Murray Ill.

CHICAGO, Oct. 19.—Oscar T. Murray, President of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, is ill at the Auditorium Annex Hotel. Mr. Murray arrived in Chicago yesterday morning suffering from a severe cold. To-day President Murray, although not critically ill, was unable to leave his room.

JEROME TO MURPHY: WHERE DID YOU GET IT?

it from this platform to-night. It is not true. [Prolonged applause.]

"Richard Croker, brave man as he was, was practically driven from this town by one question, 'Where did you get it?' Where did this recrudescence of Croker, this faint imprint, this shadow of the mighty man, get it? Where did Good Ground and the automobile and the liveried servent come from? I have served this people in public office for something like thirteen years, in places where the 'stuff' was if you were willing to take it. But I live to-day in as humble an apartment as any of you do. I do not live there ostentatiously. I have not got anything better to do than to live there, but this man whose growth in political power and whose growth in the granting of franchises to public utility corporations has synchronized with the growth of his wealth—whsre did he get it? Will he tell us? He has not told us. Will he tell us in the present campaign?

He'd Debate with Murphy.

"He has said that if I deny that I sent my confidential man to him he will answer it from this platform to-night. Joint debate is a cheap thing to offer, but God helping me, I would like nothing better than a joint debate with Charley Murphy. Half a dozen questions, not out of the range of the criminal law—and that weak shadow of a strong man would be effaced from the globe. And you free American citizens—God save the mark!—you free American citizens in the greatest city, after all, in this whole world—you lie as absolutely under the domination and in the power of this man from Good Ground as you possibly can. And let me say: Good Ground is not on Long Island; Good Ground is the City of New York. You lie as absolutely under his domination as the old serf did in Russia.

"I see my uniformed friends scattered around this hall. What do they know if they could tell? We have had an honest administration. We have had a brave and decent fellow in the Mayor's office. I say it here to-night. I made a great mistake once; I do not make them twice. I said a thing of him that I owe him an apology for, but that apology could not be made in public; therefore, should be made in public. I said he had dishonored his father's memory. He did not. He did what many another man has tried to do. Do the impossible. He tried to build on that rotten foundation a sweet, clean structure and has failed.

"What does Eggers mean in this town? Why, a Sergeant's graft ought to satisfy him. But it doesn't. What does Secretary Howells mean in this city? You and you and all of you [pointing to the policemen scattered through the hall] ought to know. It means that the black shadow of the hand of the man from Good Ground is over you all."

Mr. Jerome then turned his attention to the district leaders—"the men who were the first to hear when there was any graft demanded from above." And he told his listeners not to judge those men harshly. They are strong men, he said, and they hold their places only until stronger leaders appear and take them away. And he asserted that a great majority of them were his friends.

"It is not those men," he said, "but the groceryman of Newburg and the drink-mixer of Good Ground that are against William Travers Jerome."

His conclusion was a renewed appeal to the audience to support not him, but the cause he represented. As soon as he had finished talking he got out through a rear entrance, where an automobile was waiting for him, and raced down to the east side to address another meeting. His speech was the last at the Murray Hill Lyceum.

EAST SIDE CHEERS JEROME.

Clinton Street Hall Jammed with an Enthusiastic Crowd.

Grand Central Hall, in Clinton Street, where Mr. Jerome addressed his second meeting last night, is not large, but by packing it on the plan of a sardine box the Jerome East Side Volunteers, with Mayer Schoenfelt at their head, got about 1,500 people into the place.

Women were almost as numerous as the men. Among them was Mrs. Jerome, who had a seat on the front bench right below the platform. She was there at the opening of the meeting and stayed to the end, which came as soon as her husband had completed his address. Julius Bloomberg presided. The main speech while the audience was waiting for Mr. Jerome was made by Mayer Schoenfelt, who spoke both in English and in Yiddish, and who pleased his listeners greatly.

Mr. Jerome entered the hall at the head of a little group of his assistants and newspaper men with one of those rushes so familiar from his previous campaigns. The enthusiasm that met him beat anything produced uptown in that line for intensity and duration. Time and again the applause and the cheers broke out, and several minutes had passed before he was able to make himself heard. He began by saying that whether elected or not, he would continue to live at his present Rutgers Street home, which he had sought because in his former hour of trial the east side stood by him. The principal points of his speech were these:

"You talk about Russia—and not a few in this part of the city have come from the cruel rule of a despotic Government to this country looking for freedom and peace. Peace you may have, but have you got freedom? What is your will? How has a single man in this audience before me expressed his will? Has any one of you had a voice in determining who the candidate should be, except those of you who have signed my petition? Is there a single man here to-night in this audience who has had a voice in saying whether Odell of Newburg or Murphy of Good Ground should dictate who should rule this fair city? And you call that freedom!

"They tell me to be practical. They tell me that it is a forlorn hope to go up against Murphy of Good Ground and Odell of Newburg. A forlorn hope, with the people of the City of New York aroused? Never! A forlorn hope, while there are honest men in this town that will not submit to dictation? A forlorn hope, while there are ten honest men to every grafter in the town? Don't lose hope, people of New York. Don't believe that these hounds can crush you down and rend you. This is not Russia nor Poland; this is New York.

"Those of you who heard me in 1901 know I did not promise you the impossible. I don't promise you the impossible now. I only promise you to do what a brave man trying to do his best can do. I am not infallible. I was not made with all the wisdom of the world. I was not made with all the strength of all men. I was made as you are—a sinning, struggling, striving human being. But I have played true to you for four years."

3,000 WATCHERS NEEDED.

A Call for Volunteers to Guard the Polls for Jerome.

The Committee on Watchers of the Jerome Campaign Committee sent an open letter broadcast over the city yesterday appealing for volunteer watchers. Nearly 3,000 will be needed, and the time is too short to raise a corps of efficient and reliable paid watchers. The great number of split ballots and the danger that many of these may be counted as straight party ballots, the letter says, will make it necessary that the greatest vigilance be exerted on election day. Volunteers are asked to send their names and addresses either to Mr. Jerome's headquarters at the Gilsey House or to the Citizens' Union Headquarters at 14 Union Square.

Mr. Jerome will go into the Bronx tonight to address a meeting at Zeltner's Morrisania Hall. The other speakers will probably be Job Hedges, John De Witt Warner, and Gen. John E. Eustis.

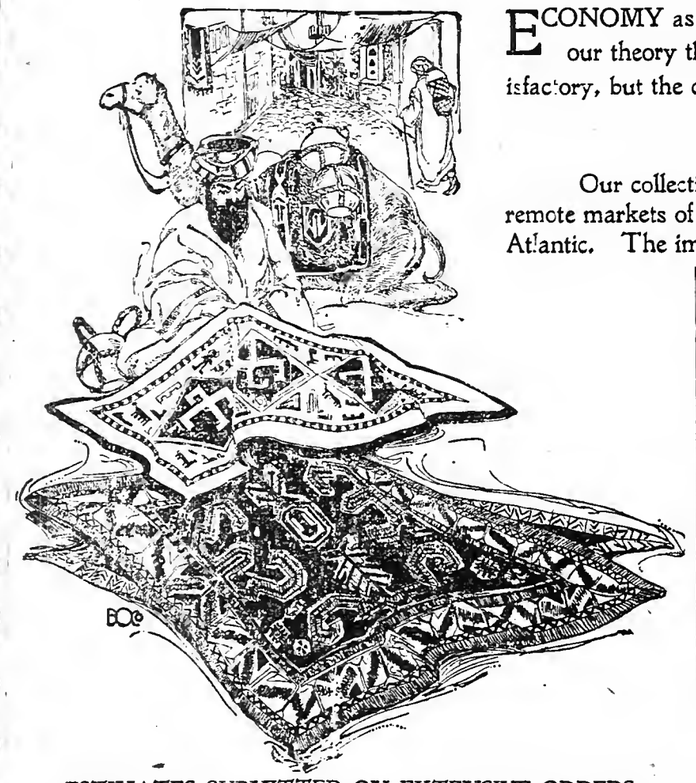
A TYPICAL FALL HOUSEKEEPING SALE OF FLOOR COVERINGS

Carpets, rugs, linoleums and oilcloths are featured

ORIENTAL RUGS AND CARPETS ARE A SPECIALTY WITH US.



ECONOMY as applied to home furnishing cannot be better exemplified than in the exercise of keen judgment in the selection of floor covering. It has always been our theory that cheap carpets, rugs, oilcloths or linoleums, no matter how low the price, were always the most expensive in the end. Not only the wear is unsatisfactory, but the colors fade early and destroy the charm of your halls, rooms and parlors. Third Floor.

Every piece of floor covering in our store is of a high standard of quality, and our trade has grown to such proportions that we can buy at prices that enable us to sell as low and sometimes undersell the cheap articles.

Our collection of ORIENTAL RUGS is an especial source of gratification. We are thoroughly rewarded for our increasing expense of time and energy in the remote markets of the Far East by the acceptance of our display by collectors and connoisseurs as one of the most complete and representative on this side of the Atlantic. The immense quantities bought enable us to offer genuine Oriental gems at prices that will be a pleasant surprise.

ESTIMATES SUBMITTED ON EXTENSIVE ORDERS.

System rules so thoroughly in our modern carpet and rug workroom that we are able to execute the highest class workmanship at the lowest prices with the aid of the latest improved methods. If you contemplate placing a large order our estimates will interest you.

HEARST FLAYS M'CARREN IN HIS OWN STRONGHOLD

Brooklyn Crowds Cheer Him—"Raus Mit Pat," Somebody Yelled

STANDS WHERE TILDEN STOOD

Says the Candidate, in Describing His Campaign—Talks at Three Meetings After Getting Lost.

William Randolph Hearst delivered short talks on municipal ownership and the badness of bosses before three crowded meetings in Williamsburg and East New York last night. At a conservative estimate, 8,000 persons listened to him. The three halls were jammed to the doors, despite the downpour of rain.

"I stand as Tilden stood in 1871 when he spoke against the Tweed ring," was one of his utterances cheered at the first meeting and repeated at the other two. Each time the audience roared back its approval of Mr. Hearst and booed and hissed Senator McCarren, to whom the candidate referred. Two of the meetings were in the stronghold of McCarren, Senator Hasenflug's district in Williamsburg.

The Hearst party started in half a dozen carriages from headquarters in the Hoffman House. In the first carriage was C. Auguatus Haviland, one of the Hearst leaders in Brooklyn, and Max F. Ihmsen, Mr. Hearst's political manager. In another carriage was ex-Senator Ford, the candidate for Controller. The other carriages were occupied by lesser lights.

Lost in Williamsburg.

Mr. Hearst joined the party at his residence, Lexington Avenue and Twenty-ninth Street. The drive was without incident on the Manhattan side, but there was trouble in Williamsburg. The drivers were not familiar with Williamsburg topography. After the solemn-looking procession of carriages had been jogging along for an hour or so through the rain-drenched streets the drivers lost their bearings altogether.

They had driven about three miles beyond the nearest meeting place before they discovered that they had lost their way. Then the driver of Mr. Hearst's carriage asked a policeman to set him right. Then the party turned about, only to get tangled up again.

With the aid of policemen the driver finally succeeded in picking a zig-zag course to one of the halls, but it was not the hall where Mr. Hearst was scheduled to speak first. It was the Schwaben Hall, at Knickerbocker and Myrtle Avenues, where he was to deliver his second speech. As Mr. Hearst insisted upon carrying out his programme, another start had to be made, and finally the Palm Garden, at Hamburg and Greene Avenues, was reached. The two halls are only a block apart.

An audience of 3,000, made up for the most part of workingmen with a sprinkling of women, was packed into the hall. As Mr. Hearst arrived there was a roar of welcome, and it was fully five minutes before Charles Frederick Adams, who presided, could silence the crowd long enough to present Mr. Hearst. Then the cheers and applause began again. He began by prodding the bosses. He said there had been no campaign since Tilden's that had been of such great importance to the people of New York, and particularly to the citizens of Brooklyn. He continued:

"There has been no previous period when the evil elements of our city have so completely obtained control of political machinery and have subjected our citizens to such robbery and indignity.

"Puppets have grown impudent in office and the bosses that own the puppets and the corporations that own the bosses have become reckless with success. They are confident in the power of unlimited money, defiant of public sentiment, contemptuous of the people's protest.

"The bosses have united. Brought together by the prospect of the spoils, they have made a compact to take you and bind you hand and foot and turn you over to the corporations to be plundered. They have raised the black flag of political piracy, and every disreputable individual, every corrupt element, has rallied around it to help greedy corporations capture the city and loot the people.

"When thieves fall out honest men may get their dues, but when the thieves get together, the honest men must get together and stand together and fight together, if they would preserve any part of their property and their liberty."

Mr. Hearst quoted from a speech by McClellan on the Brooklyn Bridge crush, made before the last election. Mr. McClellan said:

"'With reference to the Brooklyn Bridge, I think you will remember that a little more than two years ago there was a tremendous cry raised by the Fusionists that the Brooklyn Bridge was unsafe, perilous for the public use, and the condition was due entirely to the administration then in power. Now was that statement that the Brooklyn Bridge was dangerous, true? If it was, ask yourselves if Mr. Low's administration has done its duty, and if it has not, what sincere man can withhold condemnation of it?'"

"If Mr. Low's administration deserved condemnation, Mr. McClellan's deserves greater condemnation," continued Mr. Hearst.

After quoting what McClellan said concerning the schools, he continued:

"I give you as a pledge of my interest in the public schools that fact that I was educated in them and that I have a little son, a year and a half old, who will attend the public schools the moment he is old enough to go to any school.

"When I pledge you honesty and efficiency in office, I pledge you honest and efficient response to all your requirements, whatever they may be.

"And when we pledge you public ownership of public utilities, we pledge you an excellent and adequate water supply, we pledge you sufficient supply of good gas at half the price that you are paying now, we pledge you better traction facilities and enough money saved from grafters to build all the public schools you need."

Mr. Hearst since his first meeting at the New Amsterdam Opera House has gained self-assurance. His delivery was much better than on that occasion. He got along without referring to his manuscript, and managed to bring out the salient points of his speech with far better effect than at his earlier appearances in the campaign.

After he had finished speaking there was a rush to the platform, and many persons tried to shake hands with Mr. Hearst. Capt. Becker of the Hamburg Avenue Station, with several policemen, formed a flying wedge and got him out of the crush. There was a demonstration, and as he left the hall the cry of "Three cheers for Mayor Hearst!" resounded through the hall.

Sails Into McCarren.

At Schwaben Hall, where he made his second speech of the evening, he sailed into Senator McCarren to the apparent delight of another audience as large as the first one. It was composed largely of German-Americans.

"It was the best day in all my life when I decided to lead this movement for decency and against boss rule," Mr. Hearst began.

"Down with McCarren!" shouted an enthusiast in the hall. Then the audience booed and hissed for a minute or more.

"The Hon. Patrick McCarren poses as the political representative of the City of Homes, the City of Churches."

"Boo-o-o-o-o! H-s-s-ss!" roared the audience.

"Does he represent the homes?" queried Mr. Hearst.

"No!" yelled the audience.

"Does he represent the churches?"

The noes this time were drowned in a storm of laughter. When this subsided an elderly German got up and shouted:

"Nein, he represents the race track und dem boodle fellers."

"Does he represent any decent element in the citizenship of Brooklyn?" resumed Mr. Hearst.

"Raus mit 'im!" shouted somebody, and then there was more booing and hissing.

"Does he not rather represent the Gas Trust, and the Traction Trust, and the life insurance and the Standard Oil lobbies, and all these semi-political and wholly corrupt corporations that are opposed to every interest of honest citizenship?" asked the speaker.

"Yes, that's Pat," came back in response. Mr. Hearst then went on:

"In the convention where the corporations nominated the Hon. Mr. McClellan as their favored candidate to lead their hosts and distribute the spoil, the Hon. Mr. McCarren seconded for Brooklyn. On that memorable occasion he said: 'I have learned my little book and I dare not go outside of it. I am too well disciplined.'

"But Mr. McCarren has not learned all of his little book. There still remains a page for him to learn, and I hope and believe that he will learn it at this election. And I hope that Mr. McCarren, retired to private life, will have plenty of time to learn that page by heart.

There were some nice things in the advance copies of Mr. Hearst's speeches about ex-Controller Coler, the Hearst candidate for Borough President in Brooklyn. But Mr. Hearst forgot all about the Coler compliments when he got up to speak, although Mr. Coler had preceded him on the platform at two of the meetings.

The last speech of the evening was delivered at Congress Hall, Atlantic and Vermont Avennes. Henry S. Stolpe, a former member of the Magistrate Furlong following, presided.

"Three cheers for little Willie!" was the cry that greeted Mr. Hearst here.

"Who is our next Mayor?" shouted another man in the audience.

"Hearst! Hearst!" roared the crowd.

Mr. Hearst repeated the speech he had made at Palm Garden, but paid more attention to the question of school facilities than at the other meetings.

"To-day 80,000 children lack seats in schools, and the money that could have built more schools was given to the Gas Trust," he said.

This utterance made a hit. Mr. Hearst for the first time in the campaign at one of the meetings last night went beyond his prepared speeches when he said:

"I care not for the glory of this office nor for the salary of it. All I care for is your good opinion."

Ex-Controller Coler spoke at two of the meetings last night. Ex-Senator Ford and J. G. Phelps Stokes spoke at all three. Mrs. Stokes occupied a seat on the platform at the last meeting. Mr. Ford said:

Ford on the Bosses.

"The bosses have but one candidate in this campaign, and his name is McClellan. He is Murphy's candidate, he is Odell's candidate, he is Cutting's candidate. The bosses want McClellan because their masters—the lighting and transportation monopolies—want him.

"The prize at stake in this campaign is of such transcendent value that the corporations have adjusted all differences between the political machines in favor of the re-election of the present Mayor.

"The prize in question is the billion dollars' worth of franchises to be given away during the next four years. Last Winter at Albany the ground work was laid for robbing the city of its franchise property in the passage by the Legislature of the bill increasing the Mayor's term to four years.

"I happened to be on the floor of the Senate when that bill came up for final passage. The Odell Senators, by cable orders from Europe, where Odell then was, lined up solidly in favor of the passage of the bill. When that bill was passed it was universally assumed that Mayor McClellan's re-election was assured, and I am convinced that the passage of the bill lengthening the Mayor's term of office was pursuant to a deal entered into between Murphy, Odell, and their corporation masters.

"Further evidence of this corrupt bargain was furnished in the calling of the late so-called Fusion conference and the events succeeding it. It is plain to every one who watched the tactics of Odell and his man Halpin all through the Fusion conference, and ever since, that he was serving the interests of McClellan and Murphy. It has been charged that a large sum of money was paid as the consideration for demoralizing the Fusion conference and rendering the Republican Party in the city powerless to injure Mayor McClellan's chances of re-election. From what I personally learned of Mr. Odell during the five years I spent at Albany, I am quite prepared to believe this charge. He could not have managed things more in McClellan's interest if he had received from the corporations $1,000,000 for doing so.

"When Mr. Hearst, Mr. Stokes, and myself are elected—as we surely shall be—not a franchise can be given away without our consent, except by the Legislature."

Mr. Ford referred to what Mr. Ivins has said about his ability to get legislation at Albany to back up his municipal ownership plans, and said:

"The man whose friendship he will need most on the gas bill is that of the Hon. Patrick H. McCarren. He is the gas man at Albany. How intimate the relations are between him and Mr. Ivins I do not know."

JADAM BEDE DROPS IN.

Finds That the Local Political Situation Reminds Him of a Story or Two.

J. Adam Bede of Minnesota, wit of the House of Representatives, who since the advent of Jerumky Jerum, is saluted by his closest friends as Jadam Bede, is in New York viewing the political situation.

"To ask a McClellan man how the fight is waging and its prospective outcome," said Mr. Bede last night, "is to recall the remark of Jim Hate-Water, the Navajo, in Arizona. Jim asked a pale-faced friend for a favor.

"Sorry, Jim," came the reply, "but I haven't time."

"Ugh!" replied Jim. "White man got all the time there is. What more does he want?"

"McClellan's men expect him to slide back into office upon an avalanche of votes; the Ivins people are apparently looking for little less, while the Hearst followers think that perhaps they will get at least o slight snow, which reminds me of the negro campmeeting in Arkansas, called to offer prayer for rain.

"The first speaker was a colored professor from Boston, whose forte was a delicate touch in handing out religion.

"'Good Lord,' he prayed, 'let thy gentle showers fall into our midst; let the pleasant moisture from the heavens prevail upon us and relieve our suffering.'

"This didn't suit the community. Its sentiments were expressed by a huge black gentleman, who talked straight from the shoulder. He said:

"'Oh, Lord, we don't want no gentle showers, and we don't want no pleasant moisture. What we wants is a hoggle-woggle slambaster and a gushin, gully-buster. Let 'er come.'

"I suppose we'll hear all sorts of predictions within the next two weeks, and every wind will blow encouragement to this and that following. It doesn't take much to lift the spirits of the average political optimist. Which again brings to mind a character from Mississippi.

"He was in New York, dead broke, and hungry. He happened to meet a fellow-Mississippian fresh from home and well supplied with the wherewithal for worldly enjoyment. They adjourned to a café. 'You know my brother Jim, down in Mississippi, don't you?' inquired the distressed one. 'Yes? Well next time you see him tell him I'm down and out and am havin' a hard time of it.'

"But after three or four bumpers had been disposed of, the distressed one began to pluck up courage, and his tone was brighter.

"'You know my brother down in Mississippi? Well, when you see him tell him that I'm doin' pretty well up here, and manage to get along fairly well.'

"Then followed eight or ten more grief-destroyers in rapid succession.

"'So you know my brother Bill down in Mississippi, eh?'

"'Yes, I know Bill well.'

"'That so? Well, when you see Bill tell him I'm right on top up here in New York, and if he needs any money to draw on me.'"

THE ENDLESS CHAIN IN HEARST POLITICS

A Church Fair Scheme Tried to Bring in Republicans.

PLEASE BRING A CONVERT

And Let Him Bring Around One Unconverted and By and By Only Hearst Will Be In It.

In their efforts to win votes among disaffected Republicans the Hearst managers started yesterday an endless chain movement. The endless chain has frequently figured in the collection of funds for churches and charitable purposes, but this is the first time it has been adopted in politics in New York.

The endless chain in the Hearst campaign owes its inception to what is now known as the Independent Republican Organization of Greater New York, composed largely of the followers of ex-Senator Ford and what remains of the old Brookfield organization in the Republican ranks.

The Independent Republicans moved into their new headquarters at 32 East Twenty-third Street yesterday, and at once sent out a circular letter to about 200 malcontents in the Republican ranks, saying:

The honest and enlightened Republicans of this city must have a place in the phalanx marching forward to bring about the emancipation of the people of Greater New York.

This opportunity is offered you to identify yourself with the original committee in the movement for municipal ownership. Your name and that of one reliable friend will be added, if received before the list of the committee is completed.

Address the Secretary at once.

It was said yesterday at their headquarters that at least 1,000 enrolled Republicans had called at the headquarters and registered their preference for Mr. Hearst and the principle of municipal ownership. By the endless chain the managers of this part of the Hearst campaign expect to add to their numbers ad infinitum in a progressive ratio from now until election day. They are striving to organize at once a Committee of One Thousand to go out and hustle for Hearst.

"Organization lines," said Secretary Philip Robert Dillon of the Independents, "have been obliterated in this campaign by this new issue of municipal ownership."

The Republican leader of an east side district which up to the present time has rolled up a respectable majority for Tammany Hall, said yesterday at the Fifth Avenue Hotel that the Hearst sentiment in his district was so strong that there was "no way of stopping it."

Very much the same sort of story was told by the Republican leader of a district on the lower extreme west side. He said Hearst would get half of the entire vote in his district according to present indications.

STUDENTS' HEARST LEAGUE.

Columbia Lads Say They Will Stump the City and Maybe It Will Pay.

Columbia University students formed a Junior Municipal Ownership League yesterday, with a membership of seventy, to boom the cause of William R. Hearst. They say they will stump the city, speaking from automobiles. The President of the organization, Gustav Adolphus Younger, addressing the assembled members, intimated that there might be something in the line of graft for those who became members of the league. The special "graft" indicated was remuncrative jobs on election day.

An Open Letter to John A. McCall President New York Life Insurance Company

Every man who is now denying himself luxuries, comforts and even necessities, in order that, after his death, his family may enjoy comfort and safety—every such man should read Mr. Lawson's burning words in his open letters to John A. McCall, President of the New York Life Insurance Company, and to the public. Every woman who is depending on insurance for her support. Every one closely or remotely connected with life insurance should get the November number of Everybody's, read the full text of Mr. Lawson's letters (of which parts are quoted below) and send Mr. Lawson their proxies or add their names to the hundred thousand who have already written him.

To John A. McCall, President New York Life Insurance Co.
Sir:

It was the intention of the publishers of Everybody's Magazine to print in this space extracts from Mr. Lawson's Open Letter to John A. McCall, published in the November number of Everybody's Magazine—Out To-day. The Times respectfully declined to print any part of it, because it is claimed by The Times that the printing of it would be a violation of the rule of The Times not "to sell its advertising space for attacks on character or credit." The Times is a great newspaper—and we recognize its right to decide what it shall print in its advertising columns.

THE RIDGWAY-THAYER COMPANY,
Publishers Everybody's Magazine.

Beginning over a year ago, Everybody's Magazine has steadily attacked the legalized robbers of the business community, until the whole country has become keenly alive to the evil powers which we are struggling to destroy, and which have been in the way of President Roosevelt's "Square Deal for Every Man."

This destructive process must go on until the money of widows and orphans shall be safe; until beef trusts shall no longer control the food supplies; until the concentrated rottenness of many years shall be shaken out of the great businesses of our country; and until municipal, state and federal governments shall everywhere be clean and honest.

Charles Edward Russell, in his Foreword to his eloquent and constructive series on Man's Struggle for Equality, says: "In some way the Americans will find a cure for the evils that now beset and hamper them, as in old days they found a cure for monarchical despotism, and again for African slavery."

Lawson is helping. Russell is helping. Everybody's Magazine is helping. Let every man who has pity for the under-dog read what Mr. Russell has to say in his series beginning in Everybody's Magazine for November that he may learn, and think, and, when the time comes, act.

A great magazine—Everybody's for November—for everybody. For everybody; that means you.

IVINS SAYS HE FEARS M'CLELLAN WON'T STICK

Replies to the Mayor's Speech Right After Delivery.

DECLARES JEROME IN ERROR

He's Nobody's Puppet, He Says—Won't Lecture Election Captains—Open Letter to Him.

William M. Ivins Republican candiate for Mayor, decided not to wait until his meeting to-night at Carnegie Hall to answer some of the statements made by Mayor McClellan in his speech at the Tammany ratification meeting last night. Mr. Ivins saw a copy of the Mayor's speech after its delivery and commented upon it freely. With respect to Mayor McClellan's failure to give a pledge that he would serve his full term if elected, Mr. Ivins said:

"Mayor McClellan's silence on that subject is ominous. If he intended to hold the office he would not be afraid to say so; his hesitancy in saying so shows he does not intend to hold the office, in which case we will have one year of McClellan and three years of Murphy on the theory that the only trouble with tainted money is that "tain't enough of it." As to Mr. McClellan's administration, Mr. Ivins said:

"So far as I can find, Mr. McClellan's administration has been confined to honesty of thought; I don't see the deed. I have been reading that remarkable book, "Plunkitt of Tammany Hall," with a preface by Mr. Murphy. I think that Plunkitt has described the situation during the last administration. He says:

"'They didn't steal a dollar from the City Treasury. They just seen their opportunities and took 'em. The books are always all right. The money in the City Treasury is all right. Everything is all right. All they can show is that the Tammany heads of departments looked after their friends within the law, and gave them what opportunities they could to make honest graft.' Which sentiments are indorsed by Mr. Murphy in a preface highly commendatory."

"Do you agree with Mayor McClellan that personalities should be left out of the campaign?"

"I believe in no personal attacks whatever in this campaign. I have the highest regard for Mr. McClellan's personal purposes and for his character, but I think him entirely incompetent to stand up against the system of which he is put forward as the leader—the cruelest system of organized corruption in this country, and one that no one in its service has ever been able yet to stand up against in my experience of thirty years. If Mr. McClellan sees fit to put himself in such a position, he must abide by the consequences and not appeal to a lot of social 'Dearies' that have no place in Tammany Hall.

Referring to the remark of the Mayor that he and his administration were on trial, Mr. Ivins said:

"I think the Mayor is entirely right in that statement. His administration demands a very large defense, and I shall make it my particular business to see that he devotes his time and attention to defending it. His meeting to-night was the first at which he has spoken, but he will have time enough later to go further into bridge matters and particularly to tell us about the police, the Fire Department, and the condition of the tenement houses of the city."

As to Mr. Jerome's statement that both Mayor McClellan and Mr. Ivins were politicians in this campaign, Mr. Ivins had to say:

"Mr. Jerome, notwithstanding what his friends think of him, is capable of error, and this is one of the cases in which he has fallen into it."

It was arranged yesterday that Mr. Ivins should attend three meetings in Manhattan Borough to-morrow, at which he will meet the Republican election captains. When his attention was called to a report that his purpose in meeting the election district captains was to lecture them, Mr. Ivins said:

"I am not going to meet them with any such purpose. I am going to give directions to nobody. I am going to meet the election district captains as active workers, so that those who do not know me may know me and know precisely the kind of man they are working for."

Henry G. Alsberg, an attorney of 15 William Street, sent an open letter to Mr. Ivins yesterday criticising him for his attitude to the candidacy of Mr. Jerome. In his letter Mr. Alsberg said:

"Why did you not decline the Republican nomination when you knew it was the purpose of the Republican Party to turn down William Travers Jerome? Were you not the last resource of a discredited machine with power in your hands to save the District Attorney's office from the defilement of a Tammany administration? Do you not realize by this time that the reason underlying the refusal by so many eminent gentlemen to accept the coveted honor which you have achieved was perhaps that they, one and all, made Jerome's nomination the sine qua non of their willingness to run? It is up to you, Mr. Ivins, to answer the question, Why is not Mr. Jerome on your ticket?"

If the arrangements made by ex-Senator Slater for the Ivins speaking campaign are carried out, it will rival Jerome's whirlwind campaign of four years ago.

Ex-Mayor Seth Low will preside at the Ivins ratification meeting in Carnegie Hall to-night and will make a speech.

REPUBLICANS STAYED AWAY.

Two-thirds of County Committee Absent—Halpin Said 'Twas the Weather.

Not one-third of the members of the Republican County Committee attended the regular meeting held last night in the United Charities Building. To some the poor attendance indicated a noteworthy apathy in the Republican campaign, but Chairman Halpin explained that the bad weather had kept members away.

Lloyd Collis, son of Gen. Collis, was elected temporary Secretary of the committee to succeed Armitage Mathews. Mr. Collis will serve until the first of the year, when a permanent Secretary will be elected.

The Republican city, county, and borough tickets were indorsed. A primary was called for the election of delegates to a convention to nominate a candidate for Senator in the Sixty-ninth Senatorial District to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Senator Peter J. Dooling.

Resolutions of respect to the memory of Armitage Mathews were offered by George Wantmaker, seconded by several members who eulogized Mr. Mathews in short addresses, and adopted by a unanimous vote. As a mark of further respect to the memory of Mr. Mathews the committee then adjourned.

B. Aymar Sand member of the County Committee from the Twenty-seventh District, has followed the example of George W. Morgan, Superintendent of Elections, and resigned from the committee because of the refusal of the organization to indorse Mr. Jerome for District Attorney.

Job Hedges Helping Jerome.

To the announcement that ex-Mayor Seth Low had declared his support of the District Attorney's candidature and wished to be quoted to that effect, there was added at Mr. Jerome's headquarters yesterday that among those who have volunteered their services as speakers for him is Joh E. Hedges, one of the brightest Republican orators in this city.

AGAIN THANK THE PRESIDENT.

Cordial Messages from Czar and Mikado on Conclusion of Peace.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—Formal but none the less hearty expressions of thanks from the Russian and Japanese Emperors to President Roosevelt for his services in the cause of peace were made public by Secretary Root to-night.

The Russian Emperor's message is contained in the following instruction to Baron Rosen:

"The Russian Ambassador is ordered to express to the President in the name of the Emperor the feelings of sincere satisfaction experienced by his Imperial Majesty at the re-establishment of peace for the good of all peoples and their further prosperity. At this historical hour his august Sovereign cannot but recollect with sincere pleasure the efforts put forword by the President in order to cooperate in the attainment of that great result.

"These efforts have been the more highly appreciated, as they entirely responded to the sentiments of friendship and regard which animate his Imperial Majesty toward the President personally, and towrd the American people."

A telegram from the Japanese Emperor reads:

"Tokio, Oct. 18, 1905.

"The President, Washington, D. C.:

"The formalities necessary to bring the Treaty of Portsmouth into full force and vigor having been accomplished, and peace having been definitely re-established between Japan and Russia, I desire again to express to you my very high appreciation of your distinguished and important services in the cause of peace, and also to thank you most sincerely for the gracious hospitality to my plenipotentiaries, by which they were enabled to perform their important labors under the most favorable auspices.

"MUTSUHITO."

The following letter has been sent by Mr. Takahira, the Japanese Minister, to Secretary Root:

"Under instructions from his Imperial Majesty's Minister for Foreign Affairs, I have the honor to express to you the cordial appreciation which his Imperial Majesty's Government entertain of the friendly action of the United States Government in permitting their diplomatic representatives at St Petersburg and Consular officers in Russia and in the territory occupied by that country to look after the Japanese interests and subjects during the war which has just been brought to an end and to convey through you to those diplomatic and consular officers the sincere thanks of his Imperial Majesty's Government for the eminently satisfactory manner in which they rendered their delicate services.

"Further, I beg leave to request that the American diplomatic and consular representatives in Russia may be authorized to continue the exercise of their good offices on behalf of the Japanese Government and subjects, pending the reestablishment of the Japanese Legation and Consulates in Russia."

CHRISTIANIA, Oct. 19.—A bill giving the Government authority to make a proposal to Prince Charles of Denmark to accept the Norwegian throne will, it is expected, be laid before the Storthing very soon.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 19.—To-night, after the receipt of the latest telegrams from Christiania, all political circles are fully convinced that Prince Charles will be elected King of Norway immediately after the issuance of King Oscar's farewell proclamation to the Norwegian people, the publication of which is expected in a few days.

IRVING'S ASHES REMOVED.

Bareheaded Multitude Follows the Hearse to the Abbey.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—The ashes of Sir Henry Irving, inclosed in a plain oaken coffin, are now lying in the Chapel of St. Faith, Westminster Abbey, awaiting to-morrow's elaborate ceremony of interment in Poets' Corner.

Their removal from the residence of the Baroness Burdett-Coutts took place at 6 o'clock this evening. The coffin was placed in a hearse, preceded by mounted police, and followed by one carriage, the occupants of which were Sir Henry's two sons and his nged dresser, Walter Collins, who had been his attendant for half a century. This modest procession was brought up by another squad of mounted police.

The entire route to the Abbey was lined by people. Men stood bareheaded, waited in respectful silence until the hearse passed, and then joined in procession behind the police. On arriving at the Abbey the entire square was filled with a bareheaded multitude. The hearse was driven into Dean's Yard, where it was met by the Dean of Westminster and a number of clergy.

The scene was most impressive as the procession moved and disappeared among the gloomy, time-worn cloisters. The silence was only broken by the footfalls of the clergy, the bearers, and the three mourners. The public were not admitted to the Abbey.

As the procession entered the Abbey the great organ softly played the "Dead March" from "Saul," continuing until the Chapel of St. Faith was reached. When the coffin had been placed on a catafalque the music stopped and a short prayer was said by the Dean.

An open grave in Poets' Corner awaits to-morrow's ceremony. It is lined with heavy black cloth, which also carpets the floor for a distance of several yards. The walls of the chapel are banked with great piles of floral tributes.

Ambassador and Mrs. Reid are coming to London from Scotland to represent the United States at the funeral.

Among the signers of the memorial praying for the interment of Irving's remains in the Abbey were Algernon Charles Swinburne, George Meredith, and Joseph Chamberlain.

George J. Frampton, R. A., the sculptor, made a very successful cast of the actor's features.

MANIFESTO PROCLAIMS PEACE

American Military Attaches Arrive in St. Petersburg from the Front—Emperor Decorates Them.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 19.—An imperial manifesto was issued to-day proclaiming the ratification of peace between Russia and Japan. It says:

"God has caused our Fatherland to suffer sore trials from the blows of Fate in a sanguinary war, but the struggle has afforded manifold proofs of the bravery and courage of our glorious troops against a brave and mighty enemy.

"This war, so painful for us all, is now over. The eastern portion of our country will develop itself in peace and good-neighborliness with the Japanese Empire, which has now become our friend.

"In communicating the restoration of peace to our subjects, we are sure they will join in our prayers to God to give a blessing on our great labors, in conjunction with men elected by the people, for the development and prosperity of Russia.

DOVER TO BE A GREAT PORT.

Improvements Will Make It One of the Largest in the World.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—The further important development of the port of Dover was decided upon to-day at a meeting in London of the representatives of the Dover Harbor Board and the local railroad companies, which will make the port one of the largest in the world.

When the naval harbor is completed the big liners will be debarred from using the east side of the Prince of Wales Pier and must have recourse to the new extension of the Admiralty Pier, which, under the scheme now adopted, will be widened from 38 to 240 feet and will be capable of taking eight sets of rails to the extensive store buildings.

Senator Foraker Ill.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Oct. 19.—A letter was received to-day from C. W. Pryor, law partner of Senator Foraker, in Cincinnati, at Republican Headquarters, to the effect that the Senator is ill and will be compelled to cancel engagements to speak at Newark to-morrow night and at Coshocton the night after.

A Bitter Lesson

is ofttimes taught by experience—and sometimes with profit. When this business was founded we believed that a to-order tailor shop would lend it dignity and prestige.

Instead of organizing one and quibbling with details we went at it in a big way. One of the most exclusive to-order tailors of whom we knew was installed within our gates.

To his credit, let it be said, he was a clever tailorman and experienced. But to no purpose.

Our blunder was in the location of his shop. To get to it one had to pass our ready-for-service garments, which are and ever have been tailored true to the principles of the to-order tailor, demanding that every garment be cut and fashioned individually.

The men folks were not blind. They found our ready-for-service garments, whether they cost fifteen dollars or forty, invested with all the character and distinctiveness which identify the to-order garments. And they found the prices about one-third less.

Perhaps all that would help you to understand why we threw out the to-order shop and why we subscribe ourselves to the greater specialty—distinctive ready-for-service garments for men. The extensive series of Fall and Winter models include those which the to-order tailorman would have you believe to be exclusively his.

Single & Double Breasted Sack Suits, in eleven new and altogether distinctive models. $15.00 to $40.00
Chesterfield & Cutaway Frock Suits, in four new and distinctive models. $25.00 to $40.00

Rain Coats in three models. $15.00 to $35.00

Each of which is presented in an exhaustive series of the more exclusive fabrics in the season's newest patterns.

COST M'CURDY $500 A WEEK TO TRAVEL

Learning the Agency System of the Mutual Life.

SYNDICATE PROFITS DISCUSSED

By President McCurdy, Who Got $28,000 in That Way—Real Estate Deals Interest Hughes.

Traveling expenses at the rate of $500 a week are among the things which have been charged up to the Mutual Life Insurance Company by Robert H. McCurdy since he became General Manager in 1903, according to testimony he gave on the stand at the insurance investigation yesterday. They were incurred, Mr. McCurdy said, in trips he made around the country in 1904, in familiarizing himself with the agency system of the Mutual, with which, he admitted, he had little familiarity when he was appointed General Manager.

This was brought to light by Inquisitor Charles E. Hughes just before adjournment, as the result of persistent digging which Mr. Hughes's associate ...nsel, Mathew Fleming, had been doing in the Mutual's books for several days.

The inquiry will be pursued further, for the three items of traveling expenses testified to as of 1904 included $1,367.76 which Robert H. McCurdy spent as his personal share of a four or five weeks' trip that his father and mother, his wife and he made through the Southern States in March of that year; $1,500 that it cost him to make a three-weeks' inspection trip in February preceding, and $8,000 spent last October, when Mr. McCurdy, with ex-Assistant Actuary Tatlock of the Mutual went through the Middle Western States looking over the agencies.

Young Mr. McCurdy told the committee that his wife always accompanied him on these trips, sometimes taking a maid, but he said that his wife's expenses were in no case charged up to the company. He also explained a charge of $299 this Summer as being the cost of a dinner he gave to European agents of the Mutual while he was in Paris on his vacation.

President Richard A. McCurdy testified that he had reaped profits of $28,280.63 out of the syndicates in which the Mutual had also been interested, and that the profits of two such syndicates in which he and the Mutual both participated had not yet been distributed. He also testified to personal holdings of 2,744 shares of stock in banks, trust companies, and kindred institutions in which the Mutual is a stockholder; the estimated income from these is in the vicinity of $50,000 a year. President McCurdy was also asked about the life insurance which he carries, and lists were submitted showing the policies held by all of the principal officers of the Mutual Life in that company. President McCurdy's insurance in the Mutual is $150,000 in round numbers; his son, Robert H. McCurdy, has $140,000 of insurance in the company; Vice President Granniss has $42,000; Treasurer Cromwell, $80,000; Vice President Gillette, $21,000; Second Vice President Lloyd, $12,000, and Third Vice President Fonda, $25,000.

Real Estate Deals.

Mr. Hughes and Chairman Armstrong opened up what promised to be an interesting line of investigation into the disposition by the Mutual of its real estate holdings in Brooklyn and Rochester. In Brooklyn real estate, which is carried at $580,000, but which had cost materially more, was disposed of to the Corporation Liquidating Company for $50,000 in cash and $550,000 in mortgage bonds. Rochester holdings, acquired under foreclosure, after the death of a real estate agent of the Mutual Life there named Mumford, were disposed of to the City Realty Company of that place at between $300,000 and $400,000, with a similar cash payment of $50,000 and the balance in mortgage bonds.

Mr. Hughes, in the case of the Brooklyn deal, and Senator Armstrong, in connection with the Rochester transaction, inquired with great care whether officers of the Mutual were in any way interested in the corporations which took over the property. President McCurdy and Controller Richards both denied this to the best of their knowledge and belief. A story has been current in Rochester for some time that the Mutual or men connected with it organized the City Realty Company for the express purpose of taking over the Mumford holdings.

The Morristown Trust Company, in which the Mutual owned 1,750 shares of stock, and President McCurdy 520 shares, came in for a good deal of attention yesterday. The testimony showed that the company, which pays 18 per cent. now on its capital of $000,000, has allowed the Mutual but 2 or 2½ per cent. on a deposit that has not been below $200,000 for the last five years while paying other depositors ordinarily amounts 3 per cent. President McCurdy said that the company had profited to the extent of $450,000 in its dealings in the stock of the Morristown Trust Company and had averaged 6¾ per cent. on the aggregate sum of money that it had had invested in that concern.

David B. Carvalho, the handwriting expert, went to the office of District Attorney Rand yesterday afternoon and examined the voucher for $901.15 bearing the name of George J. Plunkett, a telephone boy in the stationery store of Lawrence & Co. Young Plunkett denied on the stand on Wednesday that the signature was his. Mr. Rand would not say what Mr. Carvalho's opinion was, but it is understood that information has come to the members of the committee which leads them to believe that the boy was at least mistaken in denying the signature.

Samuel Untermyer, counsel for James H. Hyde, went to the hearing in the afternoon to find out how soon Mr. Hyde's presence on the stand would be desired. It is believed that Mr. Hyde will be called early next week as the examination of President McCurdy of the Mutual was concluded for the present yesterday. W. F. Fanshawe, the bond broker who was wanted to explain many of the joint account transactions between himself and the New York Life Insurance Company, also appeared yesterday to see when he might be put on the stand. He has recently returned from a European trip.

Young McCurdy's Testimony.

When Robert H. McCurdy was called toward the end of the afternoon, Mr. Hughes showed him an item under date of Feb. 29, 1904, in one of the ledgers of the Mutual of $1,500 for traveling expenses, and asked what it meant.

"Oh," said Mr. McCurdy, "I guess that must have been a trip I took to Lexington, Ky.; Memphis, New Orleans, Austin, Texas, and Los Angeles, when my father and mother went to California that March."

"How long were you gone?" asked Mr. Hughes.

"About thirty days," the witness said.

"Did anybody else go with you besides your father and mother?"

"Yes; Mrs. Robert H. McCurdy and a maid."

"Does that expenditure cover the expenses of the entire party?"

"Oh, no; only my personal expenses."

"Did you have a private car?"

"We did."

"What was the purpose of your trip?"

"The object of my journey was to visit the agencies en route to California. My father has testified that he usually goes to California in March, and I went along with him."

Mr. Hughes turned up another charge under date of April 30, 1904, for $1,367.76, and asked what that was for. The witness replied that he guessed that must be the expenses of the California trip and not the $1,500 charge previously mentioned.

"Then what was the $1,500 trip?" Mr. Hughes demanded.

"I don't recollect specifically," Mr. McCurdy said, "except that I have taken several trips out West visiting agencies."

"Did you make an extended trip in January, 1904, and another in March?" Mr. Hughes asked.

"I don't remember," the witness replied.

"How much time were you away between January and March, 1904?"

"My impression is that I made two long trips, one through the Middle West to Toledo, Detroit, Chicago, and those places, and another one which was a Southern trip, when my father and mother went along."

"How long was the first one?"

"Three weeks."

"Who went with you?"

"My wife."

"Any one else?"

"The maid."

"Dir you have a private car?"

"No."

$1,500 on This Trip.

"How could you spend $1,500 on such a trip?"

"I am sure I can't give you the details, Mr. Hughes."

"Is that the best answer you can make?"

"Yes. I made several of those trips as General Manager. Mr. Tatlock, the Associate Actuary, was on one trip when I went as far west as Denver. That may have been in the Fall of last year."

Mr. Hughes dug out another item of $1,000 for General Manager McCurdy's traveling expenses under date of Oct. 26, 1904, and asked him what that was for.

"I take it that was for traveling expenses," Mr. McCurdy replied, while the audience snickered.

"Traveling where?" demanded Mr. Hughes.

"I can't say, Mr. Hughes," replied the witness. "When I was made General Manager I wasn't very familiar with agency matters, so I traveled a good deal."

Mr. Beck made one of his objections at this point, suggesting that he thought it fair to the witness if he be allowed to look up data on these matters and present them at a subsequent session. Mr. Hughes said he had been laboring under the impression that the witness might probably remember where he was last Fall.

"Do you remember where you were last Fall?" inquired Mr. Beck.

"I most certainly do," said Mr. Hughes.

This closed the incident. Mr. Hughes proceeded to inquire what other traveling Mr. McCurdy had done since he became General Manager on July 1, 1903. The witness said he believed he had gone on one trip up through New England and had made another trip to Chicago to attend an agents' convention. That was in the Fall of 1903, and Charlton P. Lewis and Dr. Walter Gillett accompanied young Mr. McCurdy. Mr. Hughes all this time was busily engaged in running through the entries in the Mutual's ledger. At last he came across a charge on Dec. 30 that helped him. Mr. McCurdy had already said that he was in Chicago two or three days on this occasion.

Returned $327.

"I find here an item of $500 on Dec. 30, 1903, and an entry showing that $327 was returned on Dec. 31."

The witness said that that was the unexpended balance of the expenses drawn for the Chicago trip. This was the first time in all the examination of the Mutual's books that it had appeared that any money once drawn for the various purposes that have been described was returned to the company.

Young Mr. McCurdy, telling more about the trips that had been testified to in 1904, said that in the Fall he believed he had gone with Mr. Tatlock to Kansas City, St. Louis, and Denver, while in the preceding January his trip had been along the lake shore, Chicago, Minneapolis, and Springfield, Ill. On the Spring trip, he said, his father was taken down with the gout in Pasadena, Cal., and was sick in bed two weeks in Los Angeles, so that he had to abandon his further inspection of agencies and bring his father back to New York.

"My wife always travels with me," Mr. McCurdy remarked. Mr. Hughes inquired whether the vouchers included Mrs. Robert McCurdy's expenses.

"They do not in any case," said the witness; "those expenses are my own only."

"Can you explain why they are so large?" said Mr. Hughes again.

"I cannot," said Mr. McCurdy with a little show of weariness, "and I don't know that they are so very large. You see I was traveling rapidly."

Once more the audience and the committee and counsel smiled. The witness added that this Spring he went to Florida with his father but "didn't get a chance to visit any agencies" because the elder Mr. McCurdy was again taken sick with gout and had to return to New York. The expenses of this trip, however, were not charged up to the company.

"Here is an item of $299, in the Summer of this year," began Mr. Hughes again. "What was that for?"

$299 for Agents' Dinner.

"I was paid $299 to reimburse me for some entertainment I had given in Paris. I had all the European agents come there to meet me when I went over on my vacation," Mr. McCurdy explained. "I had all these gentlemen, fifteen or sixteen in all, come to meet me, and I gave them a dinner."

Mr. Hughes dropped the subject of the Paris dinner for the time to bring out the fact that in addition to the visits of young Mr. McCurdy, the Mutual has its Western Superintendent, a Mr. Dexter, and several Inspectors traveling around and visiting agencies all the time.

"Why haven't you made any trips this year?" asked Mr. Hughes.

"Because I have seen a good many of the agents here in New York," the witness replied.

"Then why was it necessary for you to travel last year?"

"Because, as I said, I wasn't familiar with the agency system of the company when I became General Manager, and I went around to see them."

President McCurdy's Testimony.

The examination of President McCurdy on the subject of his syndicate profits brought out a renewal of the discussion which Mr. Hughes carried on with other witnesses representing the Mutual Life as to whether the purchase of securities by the company in excess of the amounts underwritten by it, contributed to the profits of the syndicate participators. Mr. McCurdy persisted that the question whether the company purchased or not didn't have anything to do with the profits of syndicate members. He argued that if they did not get their profits on underwriting in cash, they would get them in the value of the bonds that they took. He submitted this list of his own participations in syndicates in which the Mutual also had a part:

Third Avenue Railroad consolidated bonds; participation, $100,000; profits, $1,746.27; managers, Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

Chicago, Burlington and Quincy purchase; participation, $50,000; profits, $1,266.16; managers, J. P. Morgan & Co.

Oregon Short Line 4 per cent.; participation, $50,000; profits, $1,333.17; managers, Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

Pennsylvania Railroad stock, new; participation, $100,000; profits, $1,564.90; managers, Speyer & Co.

Republic of Cuba 5 per cent. first syndicate; participation, $100,000; profits, $3,450.60; managers, Strong, Sturgis & Co.

Republic of Cuba 5 per cent. sub-syndicate; participation, $50,000; profits, $2,452.48; managers, Strong, Sturgis & Co.

Imperial Japanese Government 6 per cent. first series; participation, $50,000; profits, $976; managers, Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

Imperial Japanese Government 6 per cent. second series; participation, $50,000; profits, $1,570.38; managers, Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

Imperial Japanese Government 4½ per cent. first series; participation, $75,000; profits, $1,886.55; managers, Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

Oregon Short Line 4 per cent. refunding; participation, $75,000; profits, $1,502.84; managers, Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

Southern Pacific Railroad 4 per cent. refunding; participation, $150,000; profits, $3,726.56; managers, Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and Speyer & Co.

United States of Mexico 4 per cent. second syndicate; participation, $100,000; profits, $3,001.03; managers, Speyer & Co.

Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe 4 per cent. convertible; participation, $50,000; profits, $802.50; managers, Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

The Imperial Japanese Government 4½ per cent.; participation, $75,000; profits blank; managers, Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

Pennsylvania Railroad 3½ per cent. convertible; participation, $50,000; profits blank; managers, Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

Mr. McCurdy also produced at the suggestion of his counsel, Mr. Beck, a more detailed explanation of his syndicate profits, specifying, in some instances, "that no profit was made by any other member of the syndicate through the company's purchase of bonds." In the case of other syndicates the explanatory statement was less explicit, and Mr. Hughes brought out the fact that in some of the other cases the Mutual had purchased bonds in excess of its participation. These purchases, however, had not been mentioned. It also developed that Mr. McCurdy personally took no bonds in any of the syndicates mentioned, except the one which underwrote the Third Avenue Railroad issue, and that which underwrote the Pennsylvania 3½ convertible bond issue. A long discussion of profits followed. Mr. McCurdy ended it with this explanation:

McCurdy on Syndicate Profits.

I could not make any more out of the Mutual Life Insurance Company than the Mutual Life Insurance Company could make out of me. No member of a syndicate or an underwriting guarantor makes any money out of any other member. By the terms the offering from the bankers or syndicate managers to the subscribers to the underwriting syndicate it has already been agreed upon between the subscribers—and they subscribe on that basis, or they would not be allowed to subscribe at all—that the one is equivalent to the other absolutely.

The bond in this case, if it is not sold—not purchased by the public—is the equivalent of the cash, and, on the other hand, the compensation of the underwriters is agreed upon in advance and is to be paid for in cash or bonds; it makes no difference, they have agreed in advance; one is the equivalent of the other, so that whether the bonds are sold and put on the market or not makes no difference to the signers of that syndicate paper; they get the bonds, or what is agreed to be as an equivalent, and the profit is the same; it does not make any difference. I know that inadvertently Mr. Juilliard answered your question "yes." I saw it at the time. I saw Mr. Juilliard was in error at that time, and I think so still. I think it makes no difference whatever in theory or fact whether the bonds are sold in the market or not; if the public don't take hold of these bonds they come back and are distributed pro rata, and even if the value had not been agreed upon and fixed and settled in advance the fact that the subscribers got the bonds at a certain price the public would take up a very large portion, and that certainly indicates the worth, in this case, I fancy perhaps 2½ per cent. less than the majority of any issue would have been sold for, and the public—the syndicaters in any case would get their bonds less, and the public paid for a very large proportion, no matter what that proportion might be.

Mr. McCurdy's Holdings.

Mr. McCurdy submitted this list of his holdings in banks, trust companies, and kindred institutions:

Company—	Shares.
Bond and Mortgage Guarantee Company.	50
National Bank of Commerce	1,132
Commercial Trust Company	50
Fifth Avenue Trust Company	200
First National Bank	100
Guaranty Trust Company	200
Morton Trust Company	150
Morristown Trust Company	512
United States Mortgage and Trust Co.	200
Girard Trust Company, (Philadelphia)	50
National Safe Deposit Company	50
Mutual Alliance Trust Company	100

Most of the institutions in the list are within the sphere of influence of the Mutual Life, the chief exception being the First National Bank. In most instances Mr. McCurdy got his holdings wholly or in part at the time of organization, so that they represent a substantial profit to him over cost price. He holds also 50 shares of the American Exchange National Bank. These shares he inherited from his father's estate.

The Morristown Trust Company proved a rather interesting subject of inquiry. From memoranda which Mr. McCurdy produced it appeared that it had been organized in 1902 with a capital of $100,000, Mr. McCurdy being an original holder of 50 shares. He said that other members of his family also had small interests in the company, but that the McCurdy family by no means controlled it. In 1898, when the Mutual Life went in, the capital was increased to $200,000 to allow the insurance company to invest, and another $100,000 was added to it in 1900, the surplus then being $603,000 and the deposits $3,286. In 1901 the capital was doubled. The Mutual Life disposed of some of the shares which it acquired in the successive increases, so that it finalyy held 1,750 shares, which it now carries. Mr. McCurdy's holdings meantime had increased to 520 shares. He said that the dividends had been increased from 6 per cent. in 1899 at the rate of 2 per cent. a year until they now stood at 18 per cent.

After Mr. McCurdy had testified that the Mutual got 2 per cent. on its deposits with the Morristown Trust as against 3 per cent. for other depositors, Mr. Hughes undertook to find out why the company had been willing to accept this reduced rate. Mr. McCurdy said that the larger deposits were made subject to call at any time and were on a different basis from the smaller deposits, which are relatively stable. Then Mr. Hughes read from the company's sheets that the Mutual's deposits had not been below $200,000 since 1900, and asked Mr. Timson, the Assistant Treasurer of the company, whether he did not consider that an inactive account. Mr. Timson said he did.

"And now," said Mr. Hughes, "with the Mutual owning 1,750 shares of stock and you owning 520 shares, and the deposits of the Mutual never falling below $200,000, there wasn't very much in the fear of the company that the Mutual's deposit would be drawn as a basis for refusing to pay a higher rate than 2 per cent."

"Now, I can't discuss those intricate technical questions," said Mr. McCurdy. "I can't tell what was in the mind of the President of the company, and so far as my own stockholdings is concerned, I only wish that I had all my shares at the beginning. I think you overlook the fact that the Mutual as a stockholder to the extent of some 1,700 shares, has received dividends increasing from 6 per cent. to 18 per cent., and has also profited largely through the appreciation of the stock and the profits on the shares that it has sold."

Mr. McCurdy estimated the net profit of the company at $450,000. He said that the Morristown Trust Company also paid him 3 per cent. on his deposit there. This he said was not very large. He added with a smile that he wished it might be larger.

Subsidiary Companies.

Mr. Hughes and Mr. McCurdy had some further discussion yesterday of the general question of subsidiary companies. They took the United States Mortgage and Trust Company as a basis for establishing the fact that when the Mutual went into an institution of this kind as an investor and then arranged to handle a large part of the debentures which the United States Mortgage and Trust issues against real estate mortgages the country over, and in addition to this maintains a deposit of good size, there was not a great amount of risk for the individuals who went in to assure to the company a wise and conservative management. Mr. Hughes wanted to know, however, if there was not a danger that companies like the United States Mortgage and Trust and the Guaranty Trust might themselves go into enterprises of an uncertain or a speculative nature, and thus endanger the policy holders' money invested and on deposit.

Mr. McCurdy said he didn't know of any such instance.

Then Mr. Hughes asked about the Brooklyn Wharf and Warehouse Company, which was a consolidation of wharf and warehouse properties in Brooklyn. It was put through in 1895 with the United States Mortgage and Trust as trustee of its bonds and the issuing company for the stock.

From Mr. McCurdy and Assistant Treasurer Timson, Mr. Hughes drew the statements that there was originally an issue of $17,500,000 first mortgage bonds, $2,500,000 preferred "A" stock, $5,000,000 preferred "B" and $7,000,000 common. Mr. Timson said that the properties were paid for in part by securities and in part by cash, remarking that one vendor desired to take his remuneration in common stock. Mr. Hughes said:

"There's no accounting for tastes."

Mr. Timson said that no stock was set aside for promoters. When Mr. Hughes suggested that the bank and people who were negotiating the combination were "not in it for their health," Mr. Timson said he didn't know what arrangements might have been made in connection with this. Nor did he care to testify as to what officers of the Mutual Life were interested in the consolidation, but he offered to look it up.

A reorganization came along in 1901, after the company had been unable to earn its interest, and the securities were scaled down so that there was an actual issue of $11,500,000 4 per cent. bonds, $10,000 of preferred stock, and $7,000,000 of common stock. The old bond holders got 55 per cent of the new bonds and 55 per cent. of the new preferred stock, which netted to the Mutual, on an original holding of $3,250,000 bonds, $1,787,500 new bonds, and $1,787,500 preferred stock. The company is now paying 3 per cent. dividends on the preferred stock, and the common stock cannot enjoy dividends until 5 per cent. has been paid on preferred. As the company earned 5 per cent. on the preferred last year over and above interest charges and taxes, on an assessed valuation of $20,000,000, Mr. Timpson figured out that the investment would ultimately be a more profitable one for the Mutual under the reorganization than it would have been had the Brooklyn Wharf and Warehouse Company continued to pay interest on the original bond issue and thus avoided a readjustment of the securities.

Speculative Element.

Mr. Hughes's comment was that his idea in bringing up the instance of the Brooklyn Wharf & Warehouse Company was not so much to see what the actual results of the transaction had been by way of profit or loss ,as to illustrate the fact that there was a speculative element in certain enterprises entered into through a trust company establishment such as the Mutual maintained. Another case in point was that of the Washington Railway & Electric Company which was subsequently reorganized under the name of the Washington Traction & Electric Company. Mr. Timson showed how the Mutual by the sale of securities which it received in the reorganization had already realized a profit on its original investment while retaining a certain portion of the new bonds. These sales, made this Spring and Summer, were to George W. Young & Co., and to Boissevan & Co. Mr. Hughes inquired carefully whether they were actual sales or had loans made by the Life insurance company against them. Mr. Timson and President McCurdy both said that as far as they knew the sales were actual and without any qualification whatever. Mr. Hughes said he wanted the loan sheets of the Mutual covering the period in which the sales were made and also wanted a list of all of the promotions in which either the United States Mortgage & Trust or the Guaranty Truet had been interested with such data as might be available.

Mr. Hughes started to inquire from President McCurdy about Brooklyn real estate, but Mr. Curdy put that up to Controller Richards of the company, and was thereupon excused from the stand. As he stepped down he turned smilingly to Mr. Hughes and said:

"May I please go home now, Mr. Hughes? I haven't got home on time the last week."

It was then 3.35 o'clock, and Mr. McCurdy was excused.

William W. Richards, controller of the Mutual, testified that he handled bond and mortgage matters and real estate acquired under foreclosure. He said that the Grosvenor apartment house netted about $12,000 a year, or 4 per cent. on the $305,000, at which the Mutual carries it on its books. Mr. Richards did not know how much the Grosvenor had originally cost the Mutual, as it was acquired before his time. He did not think that the cost was as much as $700,000 or $800,000, including repairs and improvements, but fancied it might be as high as $500,000.

Of the Brooklyn real estate deal Mr. Richards said that several years ago the company, desirous of disposing of property in Brooklyn which it carried at $580,000, but had cost it a great deal more, submitted lists to various real estate firms and asked for bids. A bid was at last made by Andrew J. Cove of $800,000, $50,000 in cash and $550,000 in the bonds of the corporation liquidating company, to which he transferred the property. The bonded indebtedness has since been reduced to $175,000. Mr. Hughes inquired closely of his witness whether officials of the Mutual had any interest in or knowledge of the formation of this corporation, or were in any way parties to the plan. Mr. Richards said that to the best of his knowledge no one connected with the Mutual had anything to do with it.

Chairman Armstrong of the committee then asked Mr. Richards about the acquisition under foreclosure of a good deal of property in the city of Rochester after the death of Mr. Mumford, the Mutual's real estate agent there, a few years ago. Mr. Richards said that this property had been taken by the City Realty Company of Rochester, for $300,000 or $400,000, of which $50,000 was paid in cash and the balance in bonds. Chairman Armstrong inquired, as did Mr. Hughes, in regard to the Brooklyn transaction, whether officials of the Mutual had been parties to the deal. Mr. Richards said that to the best of his information they had not.

Mr. Hughes asked the witness whether there was any particular real estate broker in Brooklyn through whom it was wise that applications to the Mutual as to real estate should be made. Mr. Richards said that he didn't know of any such, and that all applications were filed and handled directly in his office. Mr. Hughes asked him to produce the list of applications for 1904.

Mr. Richards also said yesterday, in explaining the basis on which the Mutual carries its real estate, that $1,000,000 had been written off its real estate values in the last fifteen years. How much had been written off in the last five years he did not know.

The hearing was adjourned until 10:30 next Tuesday morning.

MOROCCAN WAY TO WEALTH

Kidnapping of Englishmen Regarded as a Safe and Easy Method—→ Brigands Not Yet Heard From.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—The unofficial attitude of British naval officers attached to the Admiralty with respect to the capture of Capt. Crowther and Lieut. Hatton by Moorish brigands is not much different from that of the general British public. I am informed that the Admiralty officers regard the Moorish outrage as a decidedly good joke on Crowther and Hatton, and that the Admiralty offices resound from morning to night with laughter at the expense of the two captives.

It is only a question of time, it is reasoned. The officers are quite safe and will be set free sooner or later, so what is the sense of taking a serious view of the case?

Furthermore, I am told, Capt. Crowther and Lieut Hatton will not only have to do without the sympathy of their fellow-officers during their captivity, but very likely when it is over they will be called on to explain why they put themselves in a situation that was equivalent to an invitation to the Moors to take them prisoners.

"Do you remember," I was asked this evening, "the case of the man run over by a train on one of our lines a short time ago, who was arrested as soon as he could leave the hospital on the charge of trespassing on the company's property? Well, Crowther and Hatton are likely to get the same sort of treatment. They will be lucky if they escape severe punishment for failing into the clutches of those brigands."

TANGIER, Oct. 19.—The officials here have not yet succeeded in obtaining any communication from the captured British officers or the brigands, whose actual whereabouts are unknown.

Public opinion takes little interest in the matter, as the Moors are now accustomed to the perpetration of these outrages without having the least fear of reprisals. They have begun to look upon the capture of British subjects and subsequent concessions extorted from the Maghzen for their liberation as a safe and sure road to wealth and prosperity.

GERMAN INTRIGUE IN TURKEY.

Plan to Make the Sultan's Favorite Son the Heir to the Throne.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES

PARIS, Oct. 19.—According to private information there is a project at the Yildiz Kiosk to make the favorite son of the Sultan, Prince Burhan Eddine, his immediate successor. This would constitute a violation of the law of succession hitherto observed in Turkey by depriving of their rights to the throne the legitimate heir, Prince Rechad, the Sultan's brother, and Prince Yussuf Izzeddine, the next heir in the line of succession.

The people are said to be indignant at the mere idea of this infringement of the ancient national tradition, and the indignation has not been diminished by the conviction that Germany has encouraged the project.

Prince Burhan Eddine has been brought up by German tutors and is imbued with German ideas.

Bishop of London Views the Present Situation with Dismay.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—The failing birth rate was the subject of comment by the Bishop of London, Dr. Ingram, in an address to the clergy of his diocese in St. Paul's Cathedral this afternoon.

Like President Roosevelt, he warned his hearere of the dangers of this decrease. It was impossible, the Bishop said, to describe with what dismay he viewed this diminution of the birth rate, not only in England, but in the colonies. It appeared to him to be an artificial diminution by artificial means.

The prevailing love of comfort, said the Bishop, was largely responsible for this etate of tbings, and the clergy must learn to teach others to live the simpler and heartier life which their forefathers lived.

They assert that the diplomatic repreeentatives of European countries will endeavor to secure tbe ratification of the treaty with the object of minimizing the preponderating influence of the United States in Cuba.

MR. JEROME'S CANDIDACY.

The "Nominators' Meeting" at Carnegie Hall on Wednesday evening would have left no doubt in the minds of those who attended it upon one point, if upon that point there had been any doubt already. There is no doubt that Mr. JEROME's is the most electric and inspiring personality, the most "fascinating," as Dr. ADLER in his speech upon the same occasion put it, among the personalities submitted to the suffrages of the people of New York. In his haste one may be tempted to say that it is the only personality. But that would be manifest injustice. Mr. IVINS is a far more variously accomplished and cultivated man, and could talk Mr. JEROME to a standstill at meetings of various learned societies of which the proceedings fail to excite general interest. The Mayor has hereditary claims upon the respect and regard of those who remember his father or who have read the history of the civil war, and it is by no means necessary, in order to entertain this sentiment, that one should be enthusiastic over either the military or the civil career of the parent. Moreover, the Mayor has approved himself as being quite as good a Mayor as Tammany Hall, as represented by "CHARLIE" MURPHY, would let him be. Mr. OSBORNE has a personality, although his "instinct for the jugular vein" is adapted to excite terror rather than enthusiasm. But Mr. JEROME, partly by his natural character, and partly by the circumstances of his candidacy, is the figure, the gallant and heroic figure, of this curious municipal campaign. He wears "the helmet of Navarre."

The reception of Mr. JEROME was such a testimonial to the esteem in which he is held as no other New Yorker could have elicited from such an audience on such an occasion. And when at length he commanded a hearing, he proceeded to justify that esteem. The thesis of his speech cannot be fairly controverted. Here is by far the most popular and electrifying, or "magnetic," candidate running for any municipal office. If there were no such thing as municipal political organization, but every voter had, without concert with any other voter, to register his choice for District Attorney, nobody questions that Mr. JEROME would be re-elected by a triumphant and overwhelming majority. And yet, because there is no organization "behind him," excepting, and greatly to its credit, the organization of the Citizens' Union, the experienced political observers declare that the re-election of by far the most popular candidate on the whole list is a most desperate chance, on which no rational gambler would venture to bet at a better rate than one in a thousand.

Such a condition of things is calculated to put the voters of New York on their mettle. It is calculated to make them extremely indignant with the system under which the people's choice can be openly set aside and nullified by the bossea, and eapacially by so cheap and sordid a pair of bosses as those whom Mr. JEROME, possibly not in the best taste, described as "the grocer of Newburg" and "the barkeeper of Good Ground, L. I." There was once a boss, far more powerful in his day than either of them, who unwisely called the attention of the people of New York to his doings by sneeringly asking them, "What are you going to do about it?" That is the question which MURPHY and ODELL are now asking the voters of New York, not in terms, but as directly as if they had done it in terms, by informing the people of New York that neither of them will permit the nomination to a certain office of the man who is beyond question the choice of the people for that office.

Well, what are we going to do about it? Here is the right of the people to choose their own official representatives openly flouted and defied, not less openly and not less impudently than it was defied by TWEED. The consequence of TWEED's defiance was that he passed his remaining days as a fugitive from justice or in jail. Times have changed. A fairly prudent boss now makes a vade mecum of the Penal Code, and is most careful to do nothing indictable. So far as we know or believe, the only thing that the people of New York County can do to rebuke MURPHY and ODELL is to elect JEROME. That would deprive those bosses of their boss-ship. It would show that when the case was clear enough the people would resume their control of their own affairs in spite of all the machines. Whoever is revolted and disgusted by the pretensions of the bosses should take measures to give effect to his wrath and his disgust by contributing of his influence, his time, and his means to secure the re-election of Mr. JEROME. Whoever stops to calculate the chances of success does not deserve to share the success. It should be enough for every decent voter that the case is clear. We shall not know until election night, when the votes are counted, to what the popular sentiment practically amounts. But we can say now that if every voter who would like to see Mr. JEROME re-elected will vots for him, he will be re-elected by a great majority.

MR. ROOSEVELT'S RAILWAY BOURBONISM.

Hitherto Southern Bourbonism has been the standard of stability in American politics. To it Republican steadfastness regarding the impossibility of tariff reform is a good second. Now Mr. ROOSEVELT supplies a third example of impregnability to all reason and authority. Much water has passed under the wheel since he delivered his first encyclical upon railway reform, but so far as he is concerned Scotland stands where it did. Careful reading detects some alterations and additions in his programme, but they are rather matters of phrasemaking than of matured thought, or amendment in principle. He atill specifies discriminations and rebates as the chief abuses, and he still adheres to regulation of rates by the Inter-State Commerce Commission as the remedy.

It is gratifying to find regulation urged upon its own merits rather than as a refuge from something worse. From regulation nobody dissents, not even the railways. They indeed need it more than anybody else, for regulation which is beneficial to the public can hardly help being also beneficial to the railways. The private car lines, for example, realize profits which might be made by the railways themselves. And so in other respecta protection of the shippers would prove protection of the railways against themselves in some cases, and in other cases against influences which are too powerful for even the railways to withstand without Governmental assistance. It is also gratifying to find Mr. ROOSEVELT recognizes that "experience has ahown that the effort to prohibit all restraint of competition [combination?] whether reasonable or unreasonable, is unwise." Readers of these columns are not unacquainted with the proposition that what is needed is "power to forbid combination that is hurtful to the public." New prominence is given to a proposal for powers of visitation and inspection upon analogy with the National banking system. Points of difference rather than resemblance are those which first come to mind, and objections in the nature of the railway business are apparent. It would be ideal if a man could ship freight as he posts a letter, without thought about any complications. But that objective is long distant. The Post Office has no competitor. There is no question of routing, and one man's letter is just like another's, whereas one man's freight is not at all like another's. If the railways conducted a business at all like a bank's or the Post Office's, inspection of their books would be unobjectionable. Perhaps it would not be harmful excessively if limited to cases where wrong is proved, just as even the President would not empower the Inter-State Commerce Commission to alter rates unless the rate charged is condemned.

Still, this point is unessential as well as freshly urged. The main points in the President's programme are still what they were, and it is necessary to make the same remarks upon them. If rebates and discriminations are, as the President rightly says they are, the chief evil, why propose new laws when old laws exist? In its last report the Inter-State Commerce Commission itself, after epitomizing approvingly the existing statutes upon this point, continues "the manifest intention * * * is to strike through all pretense, all ingenious device, to the substance of the transaction itself." Could another statute do more? Yet instead of relying upon this remedy, the President still insists that the regulation of rates by the commission is the sole remedy. The commission has been in existence seventeen years and has never convicted or punished a single rate cutter, although its Chairman has said that 90 per cent. of complaints before it were complaints of discrimination. Is this a record upon which to ask power to regulate rates? It is history that the commission has been overruled in 93 per cent. of cases taken to the courts. What would be the result of a similar experience with ratemaking by the commission? What shippers or what railways would know where they stood? What merchant could accommodate himself to rates fixed by ukase tempered by litigation?

It will be seen that the objection is fundamental, and not removable by a shade difference in the new pronouncement. In the original proposition the "revised rate" was to go into effect at once. According to the address published to-day the commission is to fix "a maximum rate" which it regards as just as reasonable. There is not the same objection to a maximum rate as to a positive and unalterable figure, but the amelioration is inconsiderable when compared with the fundamental error in principle. We regret the President's stubbornness. There is a just grievance whose remedy he might powerfully promote, placing himself at the head of the movement. He prefers to promote a movement which gathers against itself opposition which is all but irresistible in its power and entirely right in its position.

THE PORTLAND FAIR DIVIDEND.

The Portland Fair has closed, and its stockholders are to receive a dividend in cash. The amount of the dividend, however, is no just measure of the Fair's success, because the chief show was outside the Fair's grounds. Inside the Fair buildings there was very little which could not have been seen in the New York shops, the chief exception being the Forestry Building. Its gigantic timbers were simply a specimen of forests clothing a thousand hills. Five of them, clad in perpetual snow, were in eyeshot of the hill upon which Portland reposes, enthroned in beauty and developing strength. Only a little jaunt away lies Shasta, about whose loins clouds gather, while above the clouds rises its hoary head in silent majesty. Midway between here and there lies the Yellowstone, whose cañon and geysers foreigners cross oceans to see, and are repaid. Along the way lies the true source of the Nation's strength, its agricultural acres, only half developed in a year when Eastern hermits are talking of the exhaustion of our capacity as exporters of grain.

The true dividend of the Fair is that it gave knowledge of these things to 2,500,000 people. "What should they know of England who only England know?" What should they know of the United States who merely read of it, and who measure its mountains by Washington, its rivers by the Hudson, its agriculture by New England, and its people by either the millionaires, the middle classes, or the submerged majority of New York? The Fair would have been a success if it had cost something, instead of dividing something apiece for every Easterner whom it enticed across the Rockies, past the Wasatch Range, and over the Cascades. The Fair was a great success because, more than any other fair, it was racy of the soil, and revealed more of their country to Americans who went to spy out the land and came back better and prouder citizens. Congratulations to Portland.

THE ANTI-AGE LIMIT LEAGUE.

Chicago announces the formation of a league whose membership is not limited to those of 45 years and over, but which is devoted especially to the interests of those who become legally superannuated at that age. "Age ostracism" is what the new society intends to combat. Assuredly those who have twenty-five years yet to live to complete the Biblical threescore and ten appear to have a grievance against whoever or whatever so prematurely limits their usefulness. But, on the other hand, the average of all native whites at death is 36, so that those who are working at 45 appear to be working on another man's time. Inasmuch as hardly a fifth of the population are comprised in the ages between 40 and 60, it might seem as though interest in this topic is confined to few. But those not yet 45 unanimously hope, if not expect, to reach what is either early middle life or an existence prolonged above an average, according to the point of view. That the topic is not losing interest appears from the fact that deaths reported at the last census are at an average age four years older than in the census next preceding. This increased length of life is due to fewer deaths in youth and more deaths in later life. Existence is therefore prolonged precisely at a period when conditions of activity are much circumscribed.

The new league, therefore, has an opening for usefulness, but not in the direction indicated by Admiral DEWEY, who said the other day, "The Nation assuredly will meet with disaster in a naval war unless younger men are given command of the ships of the navy." Pity for laboring age is not extensible to gray-headed Lieutenants, Captains who are 50 before they get their ship, and Admirals who can hardly complete a cruise before the law takes them off the stage at 62, an age very different from the Chicago limit. Besides, retirement upon a pension is something different from the tedium of declining years without such a solace or even occupation. The Chicago league can be commended in a general way, but not in its specification of the public service for its activities.

CANALS AND DYNAMITE.

The vessel loaded with dynamite and sunk in the Suez Canal in consequence of a fire threatening its cargo, which was blown up the other day, letting off at a single shot the largest quantity of high explosives on record, only interrupted navigation there for ten days. Considering that there were many hundred tons of the substance involved, this must be regarded as an unexpectedly moderate tale of damage. Its force operated upward into the air, through which it blew no permanent hole, and downward into the earth, which it only penetrated for an easily computable number of yards. It is reassuring that the waterway and its shores got off so easily and with so little transient and no permanent injury. It never heard so great an explosion before; its predecessor, dug by RAMESES, if he was the one, never did; nor the enduring Pyramid, not far off, listening for thousands of years to hear a noise in its own class as to bigness, except from its bombarding volcanoes, the skyey cops never flung back the echo of so stupendous a sound.

Now that it has died down into silence, which it only took a few minutes to do, our concern with it is to extract from it some of the lessons applicable to our own situation. We have got a canal ourselves, or shall have one after a while, and are habitually large handlers of dynamite and other explosives of the sort. When our waterway is done and open for business, its code of regulations should contain one providing that no single vessel should carry more than a specified amount of this dangerous freight, and that other vessels carrying like cargoes should not huddle up too near, in which case a single explosion from any cause might let off the whole lot. Such an occurrence along the sandy reaches of the Suez Canal, cushioning the shock and muffling its world-shaking detonation, is one thing, and amidst the brittle rock formations of the Culebra cut would be quite another. Clearing away the débris of the latter would not be a ten-day job, by any means, but something which only a board of engineers or other chapter of experts could forecast with any degree of accuracy. Even before the canal is done, precautionary measures relating to the handling of explosives, which have then to be used in immense quantities, will not be out of order, though there is no known reason to surmise that those now in force are inadequate. One thing is quite sure, however, and that is that no single vessel with 500 tons of dynamite aboard, or any such quantity, ought ever to be admitted on any of the reaches of our canal, either before or after its completion.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Comfort for the Disconsolate.

With whatever of horror or indignation—and neither could easily be excessive—the public or any of its members may regard the revelations now making in regard to the existence of "graft" of one form or another in parts of the commercial, financial, and political worlds hitherto believed to be free from it or only vaguely suspected of harboring that evil spirit, there is still consolation if one looks hard for it. The consolation is that of seeing that things might easily be worse, that they are on the whole getting better, and that, despite all lamentations over "the power of money," the greatest aggregations of capital, no matter how ruthlessly or unscrupulously used, are unable to purchase for those who control them either safety or concealment. Money will indeed do much and can buy many, but every now and then some trifle—a dinner a little too well advertised, say, or a quarrel between the heads of a great company over details of management and the division of—well, of opportunities—comes along in the chapter of accidents and instantly a flood of light begins to pour into places that seemed to be holy and shows that their condition was only that which darkness always creates. And then what happens in these nominally dreadful times of universal corruption? The immunity that had passed for perfect turns out to be a delusion. The public finds representatives whose curiosity cannot be dulled by money, influence, or menaces; the unquestionable ones are endlessly questioned, to their dire undoing; and it very soon becomes manifest that what had seemed a hopeless and discouraging situation is one to be met with no particular difficulty. The evils of the day are great, but they have no defenders except the comparatively few who profit by them, and the few are utterly helpless the moment they attract the general notice. Nobody even dreams here in New York that the papers will or wish to suppress facts in regard to the insurance companies with their millions or the politicians with their long asserted power to help or harm, and only crazy men impugn the purpose or the capacity of the courts to award and to inflict justice without regard to persons. There are no evils except permitted evils and no irremediable abuses.

Good Advice for the Cubans.

Spanish-American excitability is carried absurdly far by the Cubans when they violently tear down posters announcing the intention of Mme. SARAH BERNHARDT to visit Havana and to offer its inhabitants an opportunity to edify themselves by observing the time-defiant wonders of her hostrionic genius. Not only have they assailed these innocent posters, according to a report which comes from her authorized agents, and therefore must be true, but they have threatened even severer forms of criticism if she ventures to make her bodily appearance in their city. This they do, still according to report, because they have heard that when last in Havana the gifted lady in a moment of irritation casually remarked that the Cubans were only "half-civilized negroes who wear evening dress." Mme. BERNHARDT declares that she did not say this. The denial may or may not have been what Mr. SHAW in his latest preface says a certain New Yorker calls "tact," but what difference, real or imaginable does it make to the Cubans whether the denial is true or false? Mme. BERNHARDT does not address herself to the task of separating them from their dollars on the pretense that she is an accurate observer of ethnic peculiarities in foreign lands, but makes instead the entirely accurate claim to be able as an actress to give them their money's worth. New York could assure them from experience that she would also throw in for good measure any reasonable number of compliments for themselves and their island if they felt the need of provender ao light. She always does it here, tut we do not know that it affects the size of her "houses" one way or another. It is probable enough that in her moments of privacy and petulance she calls us uncivilized Indians, not all of whom have evening dress to wear, but we do not lynch her or even her posters for a little thing like that. If we were askad to advise the Cubans we would suggest that they show their courtesy, their intelligence, and their good blood by ignoring the trivial and the irrelevant and paying to Mme. BERNHARDT'a art, besides the price of tickets to the theatre where she playa, the tribute of appreciative admiration. That would be the best of proof to her and to others that her charge, if she made it, was based on a misapprehension of the facts.

"Wardens of the Wave."

Mr. ALFRED AUSTIN continues at regularly spaced intervals to excite the wonder of a world that has for him only the kindest of sentiments and would be good to him if he would only let it. For Mr. ALFRED AUSTIN will insist on remembering that he is the Poet Laureate of a great country, and a morbid conscience compels him to mark assorted anniversaries by writing—which would be well enough—and printing—which is not well at all—bow-wow remarks in a hippity-hop style which he fondly imagines to be stately and resonant verse. We are sure that none will charge us with using slang if we claim general assent to the contention that his latest effusion, entitled "Wardens of the Wave," is the very and most desperate limit. We have read it down, and then, to give him every chance, have read it up and across both ways, but we cannot for the life of us see what the amiable gentleman intended to do, unless it was to provide a puzzle of the "horrible example" sort to advanced classes in parsing. So far as rhymes go, he has been pretty successful this time, and the lines seem to scan pretty well, thanks, presumably, to previous criticisms made by ourselves and others when he ignored these little matters, but what, oh, what, did he want to say, and why, oh, why, did he want to say it? The battle of Trafalgar was a serious affair, and NELSON, despite an occasional resort to other pillows than those which "the foam" provides, was a most businesslike and efficient man, who ill-deserves to be dragged from his grave just to enable Mr. ALFRED AUSTIN to persuade himself that he has earned the butt of Malmsey or whatever else it is he gets for pay as Poet Laureate. There is, we believe, no British law that forbids a Poet Laureate to try to write versee, and a few holders of the office have ventured really to writs them, but he would meet every obligation if he now and then supplied the royal family with a few "lines." Mr. ALFRED AUSTIN could do that to the entire eatisfaction of that family, for its members, as is well recorded, have a peculiarly aristocratic taste in literature, and not only do they "know what they like," but they are quite content to be apart from plebeian critics in their judgments. Should any cynic ask us, "Why did you print the 'Wardens of the Way'?" we should be hard put to it for an answer, but a sort of instinct told us that it was news. It certainly wasn't anything else, except, possibly, punk.

Filtration of Drinking Water.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your correspondent C. E. refers to a letter from R. J. recommending the use of domestic filters, and says he was a poor adviser. My opinion is the poor adviser is C. E., for I have had quite an experience of the use and benefit of a domestic filter. C. E. also says that a municipal filter well managed gives perfect filtration. That is very true if it is well managed. Is he not aware that in the Spring of 1901 in the City of Ashland, Wis., there was a typhoid epidemic? There was hardly a house in the city that did not have a case of the dreaded fever, and the reason of the fact was they had a filtering system which they thought perfect. The plant was investigated and found to be affected, which caused the epidemic.

C. E. says the only safe way to decrease the danger of impure water is to boil it. Does he not know that in order to destroy all the living germs and spores in water that it is necessary to bring the temperature above the boiling point? This is impossible, unless done in a vacuum. Water boils at 212 degrees Fahrenheit. Even if boiling did kill the germs, think of drinking millions of dead bacteria with every glass of water. No, I don't think I will give up my domestic filter, because it gives me pure water.

When the city installs the long talked of filtering plant it will be time enough to depend on somebody else for the supply of pure water.

Breakfasts and Christian Science.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Last Summer you lamented over the fact that there was no place where a man could go on a hot morning and get a good breakfast, at a reasonable price, where everything was fresh and palatable. Last Sunday's TIMES and the article about William Travers Jerome and how he cooks his own breakfast answers the problem for you. You can have the best of everything at any hour of the morning you wish. As good old Burton says, "Cookery is become an art, a noble science; cooks are gentlemen."

A friend of mine heard some weeks ago that a Christian Scientist has been to all the libraries of the city and asked that all the books and the cards in the catalogue he separated so that those adverse to Christian Science should not be mixed with those authorized by Mary Baker Eddy. It was suggested thnt most readers are intelligent enough to know when a hook is for or against a thing, but this ardent disciple was sure that those who read these books would not know the difference, and the elect might be deceived.

Heroism and Its Rewarding.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your editorial to-day, "Heroism and Its Rewarding," you say "medals and money are irrelevant to it and incongruous with it." That depends, I think.

One of the Chinese guides in San Francisco wears two medals presented to him by two of the highest bodies of representatives in our country. He was the only survivor of the Jeanette, which perished in the Arctic region some years ago. He received the medals in token of heroism; and I think he, or any one, might be proud to have them.

But what does a medal given by Mr. Carnegie or any other person signify? It is indeed "irrievant and incongruous," and I am surprised that a hero would accept ona. In fact, it seems to me a very cheap metbod Mr. Carnegie has to advertise his philantrophy.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A few days since a correspondent complained that his relatives visiting him from foreign contiguous territory had to pay $2 apiece to cross the border on each and every occasion that they crossed.

The act of March 22, 1904, exempts from such head tax citizens of the United Statas, the Dominion of Canada, Newfoundland, Cuba, and Mexico. The original act exempting citizens of Canada from this tax was passed during the second session of the Fifty-seventh Congress.

LIFE INSURANCE IN ENGLAND.

Are Policy Holders Better Treated There Than in America?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Having made a special study of the life insurance business for the past fifteen years, both in England and America, I was most amused to read of the President of a mammoth life insurance company endeavoring to shield himself behind an evil that existed in England half a century ago, namely, stock life insurance companies, merely to pay fat dividends to stockholders. He conveniently omitted to state that mutual life insurance had been working successfully in England for over ninety years prior to 1855, and that to-day the business is worked there successfully and economically by both mutual and stock companies, who give very handsome returns to their policy holders in spite of the keen competition that has existed there since the "Life Insurance Companies Act of 1870" was passed, which started a new era for British life insurance.

The same year saw the Equitable and New York Life commencing active operations in England, and in later years the Mutual, four Australian, and two Canadian companies commenced there, which, added to the British companies, make a total of over eighty companies in actual competition, causing some of the smaller companies to amalgamate to keep down their ratio of expense. The older and larger companies allowed a lot of business to pass because they would not pay too great a price for it, never forgetting their duty to their policy holders, in fact, following in the same lines as the most conservative American companies, believing that the strictest economy in management was their first duty, and endeavoring to furnish absolute protection at the lowest possible cost, which theory the "Three Giants" have simply ignored, at the same time having created a fallacious belief in the grandeur and absolute importance of mere big figures, no matter at what cost they were obtained. Call for a Tenants' League.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As a suffering and individually helpless apartment house tenant, I would like to suggest the formation of a Tenants' League, one that would take the part of the tenant in disputes between him and the landlord and his janitor. The leases in use are entirely in the interest of the landlord, with no specification of what he undertakes on his part in the matters of service, heat, hot water, repairs, allowances in rent from loss of occupancy through neglect in the case of fallen ceilings, attention to plumbing, defective gas range, radiators, or elevator. Responsibility is disclaimed for care or safety from flooding or plunder of the contents of trunks in the basement storerooms, although in the janitor's keeping. Janitors are often indifferent, intemperate, disbonest, and neglectful, but complaints to the landlord or agent are met with neglect or broken promises, or "If you are dissatisfied you can vacate." But the janitor retains his position in spite of evidence furnished of his unfitness and refusal to discharge his proper duties, such as the reception and delivery of household supplies of food, &c. In a few words, the tenant now has no rights tbe landlord or his representative, the janitor, is bound to respect. An incorporated Tenants' League or the association of a few active lawyers of standing to meet these evils would greatly lessen them, and receive abundant and liberal support.

Men as Domestic Servants.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have just read with interest the letter of William Potts George in your paper of to-day on "Men as Domestic Servants." I am very glad this important subject is up for discussion, and hope something may develop to relieve the situation which all housekeepers and families recognize and deplore. But the impracticability and undesirability of substituting men servants for servant girls in our families is very easily apparent. What husband and father would be satisfied to be absent from his home even for a day—or a night—leaving in his kitchen a man who had the run of the house, and was hired to do the bidding of his wife? Women at homa are accustomed to the privacy of the house, and when the men folks are away have a certain sense of freedom from restraints which they could not have if the man servant, even in the line of his household duties, had them under his observation all the time. It is only the word "menial" that keeps many women and girls from good homes, where they would be vastly better off than in other occupations. JAMES W. BROWN.

Citizens' Union Attitude.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Before answering with a hill of specifications Mr. George Haven Putnam's letter in to-day's TIMES, in which he sets forth the general reasonableness of the Citizens' Union efforts at agreement, please take note of the following additional facts:

I. That Odell was announced as favoring a Democrat for the Fusion candidate.

II. That finally the Republicans pushed Mr. John Ford's claims, (a Republican.)

III. That after the split Mr. Ford's name was not again advanced by them.

IV. In comparing Low and McClellan appointments Mr. Putnam omitted any mention of the City Magistrates.

"Thon" Not a New Coinage.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The word "thon" is very common to Scotland among the uneducated. It means almost the same as "yon," and refers mostly to matters in retrospect or at a distance. Example: Do you recollect "thon" ship we passed when on our way to America? Have you still got "thon" knife I saw you with the other day? What hills are "thon" (in the distance) we are coming to? Sometimes it takes the shape of "thonder." "I declare thonder come Mac down the street," &c. Pronounced thone.

SIXTH AVENUE EXTENSION.

Property Owners Anxious to Have a Direct Outlet to the South.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Is Sixth Avenue to undergo a transition? If two of the principal dry goods stores abdicate, and remove into the new location which they have bought, it is doubtful whether this district will be able to maintain its present reputation. But whether this is true or not, it is generally conceded, I think, that property in that locality has reached a limit.

It is evident, therefore, that self-protection calls upon all owners to do whatever they can to improve the conditions of the avenue, and accessibility is a leading factor. This applies to property both above and below which depends for demand and rentals on the proximity to this district. The lower end, where it is not directly under the influence of this dry goods zone, is practically dead, valuss are measured by fractions in comparison with those above Twelfth Street and in the twenties. In considering these conditions it has been recognized for years that an extension of the avenue so as to afford direct downtown connection was a sine qua non, not only to the lower part of the avenue, but to the continuation of the dry goods businsss in its present location. Indeed, so earnest has been this conclusion that tenants along the avenue have made various efforts from time to time to bring about this improvement. None of these, however, has been thoroughly organized or entered upon on what might be termad a businsss basis.

The present movement is a business proposition solely, based on the majority rule, and should receive the support of every owner who haa any regard for his own interest and the incoma of his property. This extension will doubtless bring a new and larger class of business into the lower end of the avenue, as well as meet the demand of the dry goods stores and business interests along the avenue for a direct communication with the downtown business districts; also it will afford the traveling public better surface car accommodations.

Taking the College Football Course.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read with interest the statement of the Columbia Committee on Admissions regarding the eligibility of Doncan Hodge Brown to play football on the 'Varsity team this year. Rule reads as follows:

No student shall represent Columbia in intercollegiate athletics for a longer period than four years in any one branch of sport or more than four years diminished by the number of years during which he has represented another college or univerelty in such branch of sport. In applying this rule to a student coming from another institution to Columbia only those years are to be counted which are regarded as the equivalent college years in Columbia.

I entered Trinity College in the Fall of 1899 with Mr. Brown, and played guard beside Mr. Brown at tackle during the entire foothall season of 1899. At that time Mr. Brown was a matriculated student of the college and attended his classes. He did leave college at the Christmas vacation, and the following year returned, making application to be reinstated as a student, which was refused by the Faculty.

It seems to me that a student who was properly matriculated and played through the foothall season completed his course in foothall, even though he failed in the requirements of the college; otherwise nothing would prevent a man from entering any number of colleges, year after yeer, and dropping out at the end of each football season. Mr. Zimmermann Sees Paris.

From The London Telegraph.

PARIS, Oct. 6.—The Rev. Jeremiah Zimmermann, of Syracuse, N. Y., an Egyptologist, has just been robbed in a hotel in the Rue de Caumartin of two or three hundred pounds' worth of curios which he had brought from Egypt. They were contained in two strong wooden trunks, which were found torn open and stained with blood, the thieves having evidently damaged their fingers in the operation. A gold watch was found on the clergyman's table which was not his. In an adjoining room of the hotel a man was discovered in a drunken sleep on his bed, while the floor was littered with Egyptian coins, which Mr. Zimmermann identified as belonging to his collection. The man, having been laboriously aroused with the aid of strong ammoniated salts, was shown the gold watch, which he recognized as his. His explanations regarding the Egyptian coins being decidedly confused, he was arrested. He certainly had an accomplice, who has made off with a quantity of scarabs, medals, and jewels, and has not yet been traced. The prisoner says he is an Englishman, but the police believe that the papers which he has shown them are forgeries.

Bottled Blushes.

From The London Mail.

Wonders at the London Medical Exhibition confront one at every point. The latest, exhibited at William Martindale's stall, is practically an artificial blush. It consists of a tiny glass bottle containing a "minim" of amyl nitrite. This is wrapped in cotton wool with a linen covering, and when the glass is snapped by the fingers the volatile drug soaks into the covering for inhalation.

Amyl nitrite is, in its serious medical aspect, a powerful heat stimulant. Incidentally its effect is to raise a vivid blush, and the compact cotton wool and glass covering offers singular opportunities for its use in this connection. Ladies by concealing four or five of these in a dainty handkerchief would find them a valuable addition to their battery of charms, for they are warranted to make a veteran of ten seasons blush at the selected moment like a debutante.

That von Buelow Interview.

From The London Chronicle.

Prince von Buelow is not likely to disavow the account of the interview which a representative of the Petit Parisien has had with him at Baden-Baden in the same way as President Roosevelt lately repudiated a conversation which a representative of the same enterprising journal claimed to have had with him at Oyster Bay. For no sentiment is now imputed to the German Chancellor which he has not previously expressed, or is known to entertain—all of them flattering to the vanity of France; and he might now have used such pleasant phrases as he used before, about the Anglo-Franch entente, which certainly does not run counter to the peace interests of Germany.

Since taking office Prince von Buelow has shown himself far more accessible to the press than Bismarck ever was. Bismarck sought more than most statesmen to influence public opinion by the press, but only indirectly through such agents as Dr. Busch and the organs subsisting on the Reptile Fund. He granted one or two personal press interviews during the earlier part of his career, but the last was to M. de Blowitz during the Berlin Congress, and he solemnly vowed that he would never give another. He kept his word until dismissed from office, and then no journolist presented himself in vain at Friedrichsruh. Formerly it was the press that wanted him, and now it was he who sought the aid of the press.

PRESIDENT DEMANDS RAILROAD CONTROL

Objects to Government Ownership, He Tells Raleigh Audience.

MEETS MRS. STONEWALL JACKSON

Is Greeted by Cheering Crowds at Towns He Visits in North Carolina.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Oct. 19.—The ovation which President Roosevelt received during his journey through a portion of Virginia yesterday was continued to-day as he traveled through the State of North Carolina. Beginning with his arrival at Raleigh at 9 o'clock this morning he was greeted by cheering crowds at Durham, Greensborough, High Point, Lexington, Salisbury, and Charlotte, the demonstration in this city being a fitting farewell from the citizens of the old Tarheel State.

The feature of the day was the visit of the President, accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt, to the fair which is in progress at Raleigh. Here he delivered an address which dealt with the questions of railroad ownership, and frequently was interrupted by applause from an audience numbering fully 40,000 persons.

The President's Speech.

Mr. Roosevelt spoke as follows:

"I am glad here at the capital of North Carolina to have a chance to greet so many of the sons and daughters of your great State. North Carolina's part in our history has ever been high and honorable. It was in North Carolina that the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence foreshadowed the course taken in a few short months by the representatives of the thirteen Colonies assembled in Philadelphia.

"North Carolina can rightfully say that she pointed us the way which led to the formation of the new Nation. In the Revolution she did many memorable deeds, and the battle of King's Mountain marked the turning point of the Revolutionary War in the South.

"But I congratulate you not only upon your past, but upon your present. I congratulate you upon the great industrial activity shown in your Commonwealth, an industrial activity which, to mention but one thing, has placed this State second only to one other in the number of its textile factories. You are showing in practical fashion your realization of the truth that there must be a foundation of material well-being in order that any community may make real and rapid progress. And I am happy to say that you are in addition showing in practical fashion your understanding of the great truth that this material well-being, though necessary as a foundation, can only be the foundation, and that upon it must be raised the superstructure of a higher life, if the Commonwealth is to stand as it should stand.

Education and Citizenship.

"More and more you are giving care and attention to education; and education means the promotion not only of industry, but of that good citizenship which rests upon individual rights and upon the recognition by each individual that he has duties as well as rights—in other words, of that good citizenship which rests upon moral integrity and intellectual freedom.

"The man must be decent in his home life, his private life, or decency in this is not by itself enough. The man who fails to be honest and brave both in his political franchise and in his private business contributes to political and social anarchy. Self-government is not an easy thing. Only those communities are fit for it in which the average individual practices the virtue of self-command, of self-restraint, of wise disinterestedness combined with wise self-interest; where the individual possesses common sense, honesty, and courage.

"And now I want to say a word to you on a special subject in which all the country is concerned, but in which North Carolina has a special concern. The preservation of the forests is vital to the welfare of every country. China and the Mediterranean countries offer examples of the terrible effect of deforestation upon the physical geography, and therefore ultimately upon the national well-being, of the nations. One of the most obvious duties which our generation owes to the generations that are to come after us is to preserve the existing forests. The prime difference between civilized and uncivilized peoples is that in civilized peoples each generation works, not only for its own well-being, but for the well-being of the generations yet unborn, and if we permit the natural resources of this land to be destroyed so that we hand over to our children a heritage diminished in value, we thereby prove our unfitness to stand in the forefront of civilized peoples.

Preservation of Forests.

"One of the greatest of these heritages is our forest wealth. It is the upper altitudes of the forested mountains that are most valuable to the Nation, as a whole, especially because of their effects upon the water supply. Neither State nor Nation can afford to turn these mountains over to the unrestrained greed of those who would exploit them at the expense of the future. We cannot afford to wait longer before assuming control, in the interest of the public, of these forests; for if we do wait, the vested interests of private parties in them may become so strongly intrenched that it may be a most serious as well as a most expensive task to oust them.

"If the Eastern States are wise, then from the Bay of Fundy to the Gulf we will see, within the next few years, a policy set on foot similar to that so fortunately carried out in the high Sierras of the West by the National Government. All the higher Appalachians should be reserved, either by the States or by the Nation. I much prefer that they should be put under National control, but it is a mere truism to say that they will not be preserved either by the States or by the Nation unless the people of the South show a strong interest therein.

"Such reserves would be a paying investment, not only in protection to many interests, but in dollars and cents to the Government. The importance to the Southern people of protecting the Southern mountain forests is obvious. These forests are the best defense against the floods, which in the recent past have during a single week-month destroyed property officially valued at nearly twice what it would cost to buy the Southern Appalachian reserve. The maintenance of your Southern water powers is not less important than the prevention of floods, because if they are injured your manufacturing interests will suffer with them.

"The preservation of your forests, which has done so much for the South, should be one of the first objects of your practical statesmanship. North Carolina has taken an honorable part in this movement. But I do not think that the people of North Carolina, or of any other Southern State, have quite grasped the importance of this movement to the commercial development and prosperity of the South.

Fealty to an Ideal.

"The position of honor in your parade to-day is held by the Confederate veterans. They by their deeds reflect credit upon their descendants and upon all Americans, both because they did their duty in war and because they did their duty in peace. Now if the young men, their sons, will not only prove that they possess the same power of fealty to an ideal, but will also show the efficiency in the ranks of industrial life that their fathers, the Confederate veterans, showed that they possessed in the ranks of war, the industrial future of this great and ever-dear American Commonwealth is assured.

"The extraordinary development of industrialism during the last half century has been due to several causes, but above all to the revolution in the methods of transportation and communication; that is, to steam and to electricity, to the railroad and the telegraph.

"When this Government was founded commerce was carried on by essentially the same instruments that had been in use not only among civilized, but among barbarian, nations, ever since history opened; that is, by wheeled vehicles drawn by animals, by pack trains, and by sailing ships and rowboats. On land this meant that commerce went in slow, cumbrous, and expensive fashion over highways open to all. Normally these highways could not compete with water transportation, if such was feasible between the connecting points.

"All this has been changed by the development of the railroads. Save on the ocean or on lakes so large as to be practically inland seas, transport by water has wholly lost its old position of superiority over transport by land, while, instead of the old highways open to every one on the same terms, but of a very limited usefulness, we have new highways—railroads—which are owned by private corporations, and which are practically of unlimited, instead of limited, usefulness.

Control of Railway Rates.

"The old laws and old customs which were adequate and proper to meet the old conditions need radical readjustment in order to meet these new conditions. The cardinal features in these changed conditions are, first, the fact that the new highway, the railway, is, from the commercial standpoint, of infinitely greater importance in our industrial life than was the old highway, the wagon road, and, second, that this new highway, the railway, is in the hands of private owners, whereas the old highway, the wagon road, was in the hands of the State. The management of the new highway, the railroad, or rather, of the intricate web of railroad lines which cover the country, is a task infinitely more difficult, more delicate, and more important than the primitively easy task of acquiring or keeping in order the old highway; so that there is properly no analogy whatever between the two cases.

"I do not believe in Government ownership of anything which can with propriety be left in private hands, and in particular I should most strenuously object to government ownership of railroads. But I believe with equal firmness that it is out of the question for the Government not to exercise a supervisory and regulatory right over the railroads; for it is vital to the well-being of the public that they should be managed in a spirit of fairness and justice toward all the public.

"Actual experience has shown that it is not possible to leave the railroads uncontrolled. Such a system, or rather such a lack of system, is fertile in abuses of every kind, and puts a premium upon unscrupulous and ruthless cunning in railroad management; for there are some big shippers and some railroad managers who are always willing to take unfair advantage of their weaker competitors, and they thereby force other big shippers and big railroad men who would like to do decently into similar acts of wrong and injustice, under penalty of being left behind in the race for success. Government supervision is needed quite as much in the interest of the big shipper and of the railroad man who want to do right as in the interest of the small shipper and the consumer.

Present Laws Defective.

"Experience has shown that the present laws are defective and need amendment. The effort to prohibit all restraint of competition, whether reasonable or unreasonable, is unwise. What we need is to have some administrative body with ample power to forbid combination that is hurtful to the public, and to prevent favoritism to one individual at the expense of another. In other words, we want an administrative body with the power to secure fair and just treatment as among all shippers who use the railroads—and all shippers have a right to use them. We must not leave the enforcement of such a law merely to the Department of Justice; it is out of the question for the law department of the Government to do what should be purely administrative work. The Department of Justice is to stand behind and co-operate with the administrative body, but the administrative body itself must be given the power to do the work and then held to a strict accountability for the exercise of that power. The delays of the law are proverbial, and what we need in this matter is reasonable quickness of action.

"The abuses of which we have a genuine right to complain take many shapes. Rebates are not now often given openly. But they can be given just as effectively in covert form; and private cars, terminal tracks, and the like must be brought under the control of the commission or administrative body, which is to exercise supervision by the Government. But in my judgment the most important thing to do is to give to this administrative body power to make its findings effective, and this can be done only by giving it power, when complaint is made of a given rate as being unjust or unreasonable, if it finds the complaint proper, then itself to fix a maximum rate which it regards as just and reasonable, this rate to go into effect practically at once, that is, within a reasonable time, and to stay in effect, unless reversed by the courts.

"I earnestly hope that we shall see a law giving this power passed by Congress. Moreover, I hope that by law power will be conferred upon representatives of the Government capable of performing the duty of public accountants carefully to examine into the books of railroads, when so ordered by the Inter-State Commerce Commission, which should itself have power to prescribe what books, and what books only, should be kept by railroads. If there is in the minds of the commission any suspicion that a certain railroad is in any shape or way giving rebates or behaving improperly, I wish the commission to have power as a matter of right, not as a matter of favor, to make a full and exhaustive investigation of the receipts and expenditures of the railroad, so that any violation or evasion of the law may be detected.

Plan Not Revolutionary.

"This is not a revolutionary proposal on my part, for I only wish the same power given in reference to railroads that is now exercised as a matter of course by National bank examiners as regards National banks. My object in giving these additional powers to the administrative body representing the Government—the Inter-State Commerce Commission, or whatever it may be—is primarily to secure a real and not a sham control to the Government representatives. The American people abhor a sham, and with this abhorrence I cordially sympathize. Nothing is more injurious from every standpoint than a law which is merely sound and fury, merely pretense, and not capable of working out tangible results.

"I hope to see all the power that I think it ought to have granted to the Government, but I would far rather see only some of it granted, but really granted, than see a pretense of granting all, in some shape that really amounts to nothing.

"It must be understood as a matter of course, that if this power is granted it is to be exercised with wisdom and caution and self-restraint. The Inter-State Commerce Commissioner or other Government official who failed to protect a railroad that was in the right against any clamor, no matter how violent, on the part of the public, would be guilty of as gross a wrong as if he corruptly rendered an improper service to the railroad at the expense of the public. When I say square deal I mean a square deal; exactly as much a square deal for the rich man as for the poor man, but no more. Let each stand on his merits, receive what is due him, and be judged according to his deserts. To more he is not entitled, and less he shall not have.

Before going to the Fair Grounds the President visited the State Capitol, where in the Senate Chamber on behalf of the North Carolina Literary and Historical Society he presented a gold loving cup, studded with North Carolina gems, to John Charles McNeill of Charlotte, as a reward for having produced the best piece of literature in the State during the year. This cup is given by Mrs. Lindsay Patterson of Winston in memory of her father, William Hooper of Philadelphia.

At Durham, where a stop of about ten minutes was made, the President devoted his remsrks to the students of Trinity College, who were gathered in force to greet him. A flat car had been converted into a gayly decorated stand, and from this the President spoke. He was accompanied to the stand by Lieut. Gov. Winston, who also had officiated at Raleigh, owing to the absence of Gov. Glenn, caused by the death of his brother, and United States Senators Simmons and Overman. Both of the Senators are graduates of this college.

College Training's Responsibilities.

In the course of his remarks to the students the President ssid:

"There must be no coercion of opinion if collegiate training is to bring forth full fruit. You men of this college, you men throughout the South who have had collegiate training, you men throughout the Union who have had collegiate training, bear a peculiar burden of responsibility.

"I want you to have a good time, and I believe you do. I believe in play with all my heart. Play when you play, but work when you work, and remember that your having gone through college does not so much confer a special privilege as it imposes a special obligation on you. We have a right to expect a special quality of leadership from the men to whom much has been given in the way of a collegiate education.

"You are not entitled to any special privilege, but you are entitled to be held to a peculiar accountability; you have earned the right to be held peculiarly responsible for what you do.

"Each one of you, if he is worth his salt, wishes, when he graduates, to pay some portion of the debt due to his Alma Mater. You have received from her, during your years of attendance in her halls, certain privileges in the way of scholarship, in the way of companionship, which makes it incumbent upon you to repay what has been given to you. By the quality of your citizenship as displayed in the actual affairs of life you can make it an honor to the college to have sent you forth into the world. That is the only way in which you can repay to the college what the college has done for you.

"I earnestly hope and believe that you and those like you in all the colleges of this land will make it evident to the generation that is rising that you are fit to take leadership, that the training has not been wasted, that you are ready to render to the State the kind of service which is invaluable because it cannot be bought, because there is no price that can be put upon it. We have the right to expect from college men not merely disinterested service, but intelligent service.

"The few peoples who exercise self-government always have to war not merely against the knavish man who deliberately does what he knows to be wrong, but against the foolish man who may mean very well, but who in actual fact turns out the ally of the other man who does not mean well. We must depend upon you men who have received special facilities in education to guide our people aright so that they shall neither fall into the pit of folly nor into the pit of knavery."

Training of Children.

At Greensborough, where a big and enthusiastic crowd welcomed him, the President said:

"In saying how glad I am to see the men and women I do not want to forget the children. I am glad to say that going through your State the children seem to be all right in quality and quantity, and I congratulate you on them.

"North Carolina's history has ever been high and honorable; and surely, my friends, it is right that we should remember that the mighty deeds of our forefathers are not to serve to us as excuses for inaction on our part, but as spurs to drive us forward to doing our duty in our turn. We respect the son of a worthy father if he feels that the fact that his father did well makes it incumbent upon him to strive to do better. We despise the boy who treats the fact that his father counted for something as being an excuse for his counting for nothing. So I am glad to note the care that you in this State are giving to education.

"The greatness of the country in the time immediately to come will depend upon the way in which the young generation of to-day is trained to citizenship in the future. I am sorry to say that there is probably no one here who is personally acquainted with me kindly, well-meaning, and most foolish father or mother, who, because life has been hard with him or her in the past, takes the view that the children are not to have to face any difficulties.

"The worst thing that you can do for a child is to bring him or her up so as to dodge difficulties. The children that will rise up to call their parents blessed are those to whom the parents have given the inestimable privilege of training them to meet difficulties, not to shirk them; to overcome obstacles, not to get out of the way of them. Neither the individual nor the community is worth anything if it seeks after that which is easy. The thing to do is to find out what is worth doing, and do it. Show the manly quality that allows of this being done.

"In every audience here in the South I see men who fought in the Confederate Army in the civil war, usually men who fought in the Union Army also. These men, as they look back to that part of their career of which they are most proud, the memory of which they wish to hand on to their children, is not any part that was easy, but the part when they did the hardest work and the work that was worth doing, when they proved their fealty to an ideal by the way in which they did the work allotted them to do."

Why Lexington Was Visited.

A bit of sentiment was responsible for a short stop at Lexington, where the President was greeted by several hundred people, to whom he spoke briefly. Lexington is the county seat of Davidson County, the only county in North Carolina that gave President Roosevelt a majority at the last National election.

Owing to this fact the President was requested to stop for a few moments to extend greetings to the people and receive a welcome from the 300 orphan children cared for in an asylum there. The little ones waved tiny American flags as the train came to a stop.

The President's brief stop at Salisbury was signalized by a most cordial reception. Ten thousand persons greeted him, in the party were 1,500 school children, hearing small American flags. A salute from the Ramsay Battery, which did conspicuous service for the Confederacy, announced the approach of the President's train.

During the thirty minutes of his stay at Charlotte this evening the President created the wildest enthusiasm by referring to the Mecklenburg declaration of independence, to Mrs. T. J. Jackson, widow of Gen. Stonewall Jackson, and Lieut. William E. Shipp, a monument to whom he passed en route to the park.

Meeting with Mrs. Jackson.

The feature of his visit was his meeting with the widow of the Confederate leader. Mrs. Jackson lives within a stone's throw of the station, and when the train pulled in she was present as the head of the committee of women appointed by Mayor McNinch to receive Mrs. Roosevelt. When the President was introduced, he took her hand and remained talking for fully five minutes.

"Mrs. Jackson," he said, "you do not know how glad I am to meet you. What, the widow of the great Stonewall Jackson! Why, it is worth the whole trip down here to have a chance to shake your hand!"

He referred to her grandson, Jackson Christian, whom he appointed to a cadetship at West Point.

"He is a mighty fine fellow, Mrs. Jackson, a mighty fine fellow, by Jove!" he exclaimed enthusiastically.

The Citizen's Committee stood in waiting while he escorted Mrs. Jackson to Mrs. Roosevelt, and introduced her.

While the President was speaking in the park Mrs. Jackson entertained Mrs. Roosevelt at her home, aided by a hundred women. After Mrs. Roosevelt had returned to the car she sent a handsome bouquet of American Beauty roses and a note to Mrs. Jackson.

In his speech the President said:

"I entered the borders of your State a pretty good American and I leave them a better American, and I have rejoiced in the symptoms of your abounding material prosperity. I am here in a great centre of cotton manufacture. Within a radius of a hundred miles of this city, perhaps half of the cotton manufacturing in the United States is done.

"I realize to the full, as does every good citizen, that there must be a foundation of material prosperity upon which to build the welfare of State or Nation; but I realize also as does every good citizen, that material prosperity—material well-being—can never be anything but the foundation. It is the indispensable foundation, but if we do not raise upon it the superstructure of a higher citizenship, then we fail in bringing this to the level to which it shall and will be brought.

"And so, though I congratulate you upon what you have done in the way of material growth, I congratulate you even more upon the great historic memories of your State. It is not so very far from here that the Mecklenburg declaration of independence was made the declaration that pointed out the path on which the thirteen united Colonies trod a few months later.

"As IL gt off the train here I was greeted by one citizen of North Carolina, (and I know that neither the Governor, the Mayor, nor the Senators will blame me for what I am going to say,) whose greeting pleased and touched me more than the greeting of any man could have touched me. I was greeted by the widow of Stonewall Jackson—and we of this united country have a right to challenge as a part of the heritage of honor and glory of each American the reunion of one people—Americans who fought in the civil war—whether they wore the blue or whether they wore the gray.

"The valor shown alike by the men of the North and the men of the South as they battled for the right as God gave them to see the right, is now part of what we, all of us, keep with pride. It was my good fortune to appoint to West Point the grandson of Stonewall Jackson.

"Here, as I came up your streets, I saw a monument raised to a fellow-soldier of mine, who fell in the Spanish war at Santiago—to Shipp of North Carolina. The morning of the fight, he and I took breakfast together. It was not much of a breakfast, but it was the only breakfast that was going, and we were glad to get it. The night before I had no supper, and he and his comrades gave me out of the very small amount that they had, a sandwich. In the morning they had no material for breakfast, but by that time my things had come up and I shared my breakfast with them. That was at dawn. Before noon one of them was killed and the other (as we then thought) fatally wounded.

"And now, there are here men who fought in the great war. We who went in '98 had the opportunity to fight only in a small war, and all that we claim is that we hope we showed a spirit not entirely unworthy of the men who faced th emighty and terrible days from '61 to '65.

"And now, gentlemen, though we glory in the memories of the past, we must remember ever to keep these memories, not as excuses for failing to do well in the present, but as incentives to spur us on to action. In life every victory won inevitably brings us face to face with a new struggle. The men of one generation have to do their allotted task. If they fail to do it, they accumulate misfortune upon those who come after them. If they do it yet it remains true that the men who come after them must do their tasks in turn.

"It is just as it is with you, my escort, the men of the National Guard, the artillerymen, the infantrymen. If there comes a war, I know I can count on you and those like you, because the memory of what your fathers did will make you ashamed not to rise level to the demands of the new time, as they rose level to the demands of their time.

"So in civil life. Each generation has its problem. The tremendous industrial development of the past half-century—the development which has produced cities such as this—has brought great problems with it—problems connected with corporations, problems connected with labor, problems connected with both the accumulation and distribution of wealth.

"The problems are new, but the spirit in which we must approach their solution is old. We must face the work we have to do as our fathers faced their work if we wish to be successful. This is an age of organization—the organization of capital, the organization of labor. Each type of organization should be welcomed when it does good and fearlessly opposed when it does evil.

"Our main object should be to strive to keep the reign of justice alive in this country, so that we should, above all things, avoid the chance of ever dividing on the lines that separate one class or occupation from another. The man who would teach either wage worker or capitalist that the other is his foe is a bad citizen and a faithless American.

"We can afford to divide along lines that would represent honest difference of opinion, but we cannot afford to divide on the fundamental lines of cleavage that separate good citizens from bad citizens; and we must remember that if we intend to keep this Republic in its position of headship among the nations of mankind, we can never afford to deviate from the old American doctrine of treating each man according to his worth as a man—of paying heed not to whether he is rich or poor, but heed only to whether he acts as a decent citizen or if he is a decent man in his domestic life, an honest man in business—a man who in good faith tries to do his duty by his neighbor and by the State.

"And now, my fellow-citizens, remember there is no patent device by which you can achieve good citizenship. There is no patent device by which you can achieve good government. The good citizen is the man who is a good father and a good husband, the man who behaves himself, the man whom you can trust in a trade, and whom you are glad to have as a neighbor. He is the good citizen, and the man the public confides in and who does well in the State, is the man who applies in dealing with his fellows in the mass just those same qualities that make good citizenship in the individual.

"And now, in saying good-bye, I want to say to you me nand women that I have been immensely impressed with North Carolina—with her agriculture, with her industries, but that the crop that I like best is the crop of children. And I congratulate North Carolina on the fact that to all appearances, the children seem to be all right in quality and in quantity.

"Here is the best product."

The President's train left Charlotte at 7.47 o'clock, twenty-two minutes behind its schedule.

To-morrow morning the President will pay a visit to Roswell, Ga., the home of his mother. From there he will go to Atlanta, where most of the day will be spent. Mrs. Roosevelt will leave him when the capital of Georgia is reached, and return to Washington.

The storm over Lake Michigan will move northeastward closely followed by the western high area and rapidly falling temperatures may therefore be expected Friday and Friday night in the central valleys, lake region, and West Gulf States, and during Saturday in the Atlantic States.

Winds along the New England Coast will be mostly southwest to west, becoming fresh to brisk; on the Middle Atlantic Coast, fresh to brisk southwest to west; on the South Atlantic Coast, light south to southwest; on the East Gulf Coast, light south, becoming variable; on the West Gulf Coast, light to fresh north; on the lower lakes, brisk to high south, shifting to west and northwest; on the upper lakes, brisk to high northwest to north, diminishing Friday night.

Steamers departing Friday for European ports will have fresh winds, mostly southwest to west, with showers to the Grand Banks.

J. G. HECKSCHER AT 70 WEDS A YOUNG WIDOW

Mrs. Virginia Otis the Third Wife of the Mayor's Father-in-Law.

KEPT IT SECRET FOR A YEAR

Mr. Heckscher's Duel with Henry Winthrop Gray and His Marriage to Mrs. Gray Recalled.

There was much surprise in society yesterday over the news that John G. Heckscher, the father-in-law of Mayor McClellan, had married for a third time, and that the wedding had taken place more than a year ago. Mr. Heckscher's bride was Mrs. Virginia Otis, a young widow, who is said to be very handsome and accomplished. She has a 15-year-old daughter. She lived at 75 West Sixty-eighth Street and at 10 West Sixty-fifth Street previous to her marriage to Mr. Heckscher.

Mr. and Mrs. Hechscher were at the Hippodrome, and then the announcement was made to some of his friends. A few, however, had been in the secret for some time. His daughters were not at the wedding and did not know of it. Mr. and Mrs. Heckscher have been living at the Hotel Marie Antoinette, and are soon to take up their residence at 18 West Eighty-eighth Street. The house there is being put in order for them.

John G. Heckscher is one of the best-known clubmen and men about town in New York. He is about 70 years old, but very well preserved. He belongs to the Union, Metropolitan, and many other clubs, is one of the founders of the Horse Show, and one of the first leaders of cotillions in New York. He comes of an old New York family of German origin. When little more than a lad he enlisted to fight in the civil war and went through the last two years of that contest, retiring as First Lieutenant.

His first wife was Miss Whitney, a granddaughter of the famous New York merchant, Stephen Whitney. There are two daughters of that marriage—Mrs. George B. McClellan, the wife of Mayor McClellan, and Mrs. Egerton Winthrop, Jr., the wife of the former Secretary of the Meadow Brook Hunt.

The most romantic espisode in Mr. Heckscher's life was his duel with Henry Winthrop Gray, who was one of his best friends, and who had married Miss Marie Travers, the daughter of William R. Travers, the banker and wit. The Heckschers and Grays were very intimate for a long while. Then some ugly rumors got about.

These stories led to an open rupture between Gray and Heckscher. One day they met in front of the Union Club and a blow was struck. This led to a challenge and a duel in Canada. The late Carroll Livingston, an intimate friend of Mr. Heckscher, was his second, and Dr. George Peters was surgeon. Mr. Gray is said to have fired first and missed. Mr. Heckscher then fired in the air, and the duel was over.

Mrs. Gray and her husband were divorced, and she went to live with her father, William R. Travers. Mr. Heckscher and Mrs. Gray never saw each other from that day until after the death of Mr. Heckscher's first wife, who was steadfast in her allegiance to her husband. Mr. Heckscher married Mrs. Gray not long after that.

Mr. Gray subsequently married Miss Frelinghuysen. The second Mrs. Heckscher lived only six years after her second marriage, which was in Philadelphia in 1892. Between the time of her divorce and remarriage she resumed the name of Miss Travers and refused all invitations and lived in complete retirement. Her father and mother also retired from society at that time.

Since the death of his second wife, Mr. Heckscher has made a tour around the world with his nephew, Capt. Philip Lydig. He has taken active interest in his clubs and in the Horse Show, and has been seen at the opera, at the races, and restaurants, until last Winter, when he disappeared for a while. He said to his friends that he was living in the country near New York. No one suspected then that he had contracted a third marriage. The present Mrs. Heckscher is a comparatively young woman. Despite Mr. Heckscher's years he acts like a young man. He has the reputation of having the best manners of any man in New York.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

Mrs. Hamilton McK. Twombly will entertain to-morrow at luncheon at her country seat, Florham, New Jersey, in honor of the Duchess of Marlborough. A DAY'S WEDDINGS.

TERHUNE—WILSON.

Miss Florence Mabelle Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William George Wilson of 314 West Eighty-sixth Street, was married last evening in All Angels' Church to Ten Broeck Munroe Terhune, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Samuel Wann.

Samuel Wann, who died on Tuesday, was for many years a well-known resident of Staten Island, where he maintained an extensive place on Todt Hill. Before his retirement from active life several years ago he was for a long time a member of the firm of McAndrew & Wann, and was largely instrumental in promoting the Atlantic Great Western enterprise. Mr. Wann was 85 years old. He was born in Ireland, but came to this country early in his career. The Wann farmhouse stands on property now used by the Staten Island Country Club.

FOOD.

SMALL BOY HAS "COFFEE HEART"

Child of Eight Is in City Hospital Slowly Regaining Health.

HEART BEATS TOO FAST

Muscle Was Wearing Itself Out —Drank a Dozen Cups a Day.

Excessive coffee drinking, City Hospital physicians say, is the cause of little Johnnie Murphy's heart disease. Although only 8 years old, he has one of the worst cases of heart lesion that has ever come to the institution.

When he entered the hospital the child's heart was beating 160 to the minute, just twice the normal rate for a child of his age. For one month he has had no coffee and his heart action has been reduced to 100 beats a minute.

For two years the child has been drinking from nine to twelve cups of strong coffee every day. He began to complain of pains as if needles were sticking in his heart, and for a year has slept scarcely three hours a night, and then only when sitting propped up in a chair beside an open window.

Johnnie did not care for things to eat; coffee was all the food he craved, and except when cake or candy was given him, he took no other nourishment. As he was sick and not expected to recover, he was given all the coffee he desired until a physician saw him and advised that he be sent to City Hospital.

HEART WAS OVERWORKED.

Every beat of the child's heart could be plainly seen. To one inexperienced in medicine, it would seem that the heart extended over two-thirds of the chest region, and the pulsation is of a heavy, prolonged character, quite different from the sharp, quick beat of the normal heart.

The boy is small for his age, and efforts of physicians have been to build up his strength. His treatment has been largely tonics and heart regulating medicines, such a strophanthus or digitalis.

As the heart, like other muscles, can stand only a given amount of work, hospital internes estimate that the 60 beats a minute he is now being saved by his abstinence from coffee will prolong his life 10 or 12 years.

The heart of a man who dies at 70 years has beaten 260 million times, and if the normal beat is 72, little Johnny Murphy was living twice as fast as any normal person. When he first entered the hospital, physicians freely prophesied that he could live only a few weeks. Under the treatment and total abstinence from coffee he has so improved that his chances for a long life are considered good if the heart lesion and degeneration already set up can be healed.

He is a son of John Murphy of 116 South Fourteenth Street. Mrs. Murphy told the physicians that none of her other children had shown signs of heart disease nor had they a marked fondness for coffee.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Literally thousands of people suffer more or less from heart weakness caused by coffee, and with some, even one cup a day will bring on heart trouble.

The heart that has been only slightly attacked by coffee will protest and make its weak condition known under slight exertion, and it is plainly a dangerous condition to get into. It is a curious fact that coffee does not always attack the heart but goes after the stomach, liver and bowels of some and leaves the heart alone.

It is plainly classed as an active toxic and its work shows somewhere on most users. It is easy to rid one's self of the habit by using well-brewed Postum Coffee. The change in symptoms is shown in a day or two as a rule, and that change shows the user to a certainty that coffee was the destroyer.

It is useless to warn some people, even when it is easy to quit and be well again. So they peg along, sick and miserable, charging their ails to "food," "east wind," "heredity," and whatnot, until some day the stroke comes when abused nature reaches the limit. It's easy to be well if one cares for the joy of health. One of the plain, sure, well-built, and well-kept highways, with sign boards on each side, is the Postum route.

There's a reason.

A Wisconsin live stock man recently testified before the Interstate Commerce Commission in Chicago that he shipped cattle to Chicago by the way of St. Paul, three hundred miles further than by a direct line, because it was cheaper that way.

This is but one of the many paradoxes of freight rates which Ray Stannard Baker will explain in his series of papers entitled "The Railroads on Trial," the first number of which, "The Railroad Rate," will be begun in the November McCLURE'S.

ANDREWS HAD PAPER IN ENTERPRISE BANK

Ex-State Senator's Denial Contradicted by Documents.

BLAME ON DEAD CASHIER

Officer of Companies with Which He Was Connected Say It Was Clarke's Business to Furnish Funds.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 19.—Investigation into the condition of the Enterprise National Bank, the failure of which yesterday was preceded by the suicide of T. Lee Clarke, the cashier, shows beyond doubt that the institution was conducted in a manner entirely unknown to the Directors.

From a representative of the bank it is learned that since the investigation started, papers and notes have been brought to the attention of the Directors which they never saw before. Among these papers are two notes bearing the name of W. H. Andrews, who to-day stated positively that he had no papers in the bank. Bank Examiner Cunningham, who is in charge of the institution, would say nothing concerning this statement, but the source of the information is thoroughly reliable.

A statement made to-day by the officials of the Santa Fé Central Railway and the Pennsylvania Development Company, on behalf of which the dead cashier is said to have negotiated loans, would seem to place all the blame on Clarke, who, so far as known, left no explanation of the bank's relations with the two companies. The statement was as follows:

"The Santa Fé Central Railway was built by the Pennsylvania Development Company and completed about two years ago. It extends from Santa Fé south about 120 miles, connecting the Denver and Rio Grande, the Santa Fé system, and the Rock Island system. The road is in good condition, and earning much more than operating expenses, and the earnings are steadily increasing.

"W. H. Andrews is President of the railroad company, Arthur Kennedy, President of the Pennsylvania Development Company; Francis J. Torrance, Vice President of both companies, and W. C. Hagan, Secretary of both companies. Mr. Clarke was Treasurer of both companies, and had custody of their securities.

"The railroad company has no notes out. We are not aware of any notes of the Pennsylvania Development Company in the Enterprise National Bank, and the company has no record of such. If, however, Mr. Clarke used any notes of this company in his bank they will be paid."

Supplementary statements by the signers of the statement and their attorneys show that they take the position that Mr. Clarke was the fiscal agent of their companies and that as such it was his duty to look after funds and raise money when necessary.

The Directors speak hopefully of restoring the bank to solvency and resuming business in a month or six weeks, pointing to promises made by those charged with getting money on notes to make good the amount. They also express the hope that Mr. Clarke's estate will amount to $500,000 or $600,000, but in this they seem to be hoping against hope. Whatever there is of it will be used in straightening out the bank's affairs.

The State to-day entered judgment against the bank Directors on their individual bonds to secure its deposit. These securities can be collected at once.

Commenting upon Mr. Andrews's denial that he had received any of the bank's money, Homer L. Castle, the prohibition candidate for the Superior Court, said:

"If William H. Andrews asserts that he never received a penny from the defunct Enterprise National Bank, and that his name does not appear on paper for a loan secured from that institution, he is guilty of an unqualified falsehood. I can furnish convincing proof, if required, that Mr. Andrews has received money, not from the Enterprise Bank alone, but from other institutions in this neighborhood. I cannot say whether or not his loans from the Enterprise, aggregated so large a sum as $400,000, as has been reported, but I do know, and am prepared to prove, that his name is on a note at that bank for $200,000. The note was indorsed by Francis J. Torrance and Arthur Kennedy.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 19.—William L. Mathues, State Treasurer of Pennsylvania, in an interview to-day asserted that the State funds, possibly $782,000, deposited in the Enterprise National Bank of Allegheny, were amply protected and that the State would not lose a dollar. Mr. Mathues also declared that he had no knowledge whatever of the dealings of the bank with W. H. Andrews and his railroad affairs, or with Senator Penrose and others as alleged by Mr. Castle.

Regarding the statement that he had deposited $50,000 in the bank on Tuesday, Mr. Mathues said that about Oct. 1 he had made a draft upon the bank for about $50,000, which had been honored and the money paid into the Treasury, but that on the request of the officials of the bank he was asked to wait for the money until some city warrants were taken up, which would be about Nov. 1. He granted this request and returned to the bank the $50,000, but it was not a new deposit.

"The State will not lose a dollar by the crash," said Mr. Mathues. "The whole amount we have in bank is protected three times over. We have a surety bond of a Pittsburg company for $1,000,000; another of a Baltimore Company for $800,000, and a Director's individual bond, which will bring the total security up to between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000."

JOSEPH HOADLEY SAYS HE WASN'T IN THE POOL

Got Out of International Power Before the Crash.

ONLY TRIED TO AID JUDSON

Co-Defendants' Counsel Told the Witness Not to Put Lies in Leiter's Mouth.

Joseph H. Hoadley, defendant with Joseph Leiter in the suit brought by the brokerage firm of Franklin, Scott & Co., spent two hours on the witness stand in the Supreme Court yesterday explaining his connection with Cyrus Field Judson in International Power transactions. The plaintiffs, who are trying to recover $65,800 lost on the day Power stock broke, allege that while they were operating under an account known as the Judson special account, that behind this account stood the Hoadley-Leiter International Power pool.

Hoadley testified that although he was engaged in a pool in which Judson was concerned in October, 1900, he wound up that pool on Dec. 11, 1901, and was not in any pool with him on April 30, 1902, when the crash came.

"Tell us what happened with regard to the pool of 1901," said Mr. Hoadley's counsel.

"Mr. Leiter and I had been in Europe," said he, "and on our return Judson informed us that some of our Philadelphia friends had thrown stock on the market which they were unable to carry. This was in October, 1900. Judson, Leiter, and myself arranged to take up this stock in the ratio of one-third each and carry it to a profit, if possible. I went to Philadelphia and got those people to hand over the balance of stock in their hands."

That was the way the pool known as the "1,180-share pool" was formed, the witness said. He and Leiter had an arrangement by which each of them was to take half the profits and share half the losses on all of the stock they then held in the pool.

Mr. Hoadley corroborated the story told by his brother as to the interview between the Hoadleys and Judson at the Chelsea. This was when George W. Hoadley told J. H. that Judson had used up all of J. H. Hoadley's stock and cash.

"I asked Judson if it was true," said the witness, "and he admitted it was. My brother said we should send for the Sheriff. I offered, however, if Judson would tell me the whole truth, to do what I could for him, as I knew Mr. Leiter would not be as lenient with him as I would. I told him he should turn everything over to me, and I would see what I could do. That was how I came in possession of Judson's office."

"Mr. Judson," said counsel, "has picked out two checks, one for $50,000 and one for $100,000, which he says were paid to you for profits of the last pool. Is that so?"

"It is not," said the witness. "All payments by Judson were for stock. I never got anything from him in any pool."

Under cross-examination Hoadley said that he had no particular reason for leaving Montana, as he had never lived there.

Once while Hoadley was testifying Leiter's counsel shouted, "Don't put lies in Leiter's mouth."

AHI PEACE ARRESTED AGAIN.

Third Time He Has Refused to Obey the Brooklyn Traffic Rules.

Ahi Peace, who took his fight on Commissioner McAdoo's traffic rules to the Supreme Court, was arrested in Fulton Street, Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon for the third time, by a mounted policeman.

In a previous case Mr. Peace obtained from Justice Gaynor an order preventing Commissioner McAdoo from closing any street in Brooklyn. Since Justice Gaynor made this decision Mr. Peace has been arrested a second time for a violation of the traffic rules, but was discharged.

ALTAR IS DUTY FREE.

General Appraisers Decide the Status of Hugh McLaughlin's Gift.

After customs litigation lasting several years, the Board of United States General Appraisers decided yesterday that a marble and bronze altar presented to St. James's Pro-Cathedral by the late Hugh McLaughlin is a "work of art" within the meaning of the Dingley tariff law, and as such entitled to free entry.

The altar was valued at about $9,000, and when it reached New York the Collector levied duty on the component parts of marble and metal, respectively, at the rates of 50 per cent. and 45 per cent. ad valorem.

SEARCHED THE BALTIC.

But Deputy Marshals Failed to Find Two Bail-Jumping Italians.

Two Deputy United States Marshals went on board the White Star liner Baltic just before she sailed yesterday and, producing a bench warrant, demanded that they be permitted to search the ship for two suspected fugitives. The Captain ordered all passengers and the crew to assemble on deck. Neither of the men wanted was found, and the ship sailed soon afterward.

The bench warrant called for the arrest of Dominico Pitrello, an Italian charged with perjury in connection with citizenship frauds. A similar indictment was returned against his brother, Pietro. A jury was partly empaneled Wednesday in the United States Circuit Court to try Pitrello, who was present with his brother. Court was adjourned before the jury was completed. Yesterday morning Pitrello's counsel informed the Clerk that he had learned that the prisoner had forfeited his bail and was secreted on the Baltic. A bench warrant was issued and the Deputies were sent to make the search.

The Deputies searched other outgoing vessels also, but failed to find the men.

Thomas W. Lawson announces in an open letter to President John A. McCall of the New York Life Insurance Company, printed in the November number of Everybody's Magazine, that in answer to his appeal of last July he has written authorizations from 16,307 insurance policy holders, representing $55,165,916 in insurance, to act for them.

It is said to be the purpose of Mr. Lawson, when he has secured what seems to him to be a sufficient number of proxies, to turn them over to a committee of Governors of States and possibly other prominent persons, to be used by them in such a manner as they may consider wise.

ARKLIRTA ROMPED IN FOR HEMPSTEAD STAKES

Frank Farrell's Colt Led All the Way and Was First Easily.

ISMAILIAN WON AT 100 TO 1

Filly, Backed Down to 40 to 1, Beat Jane Holly a Head at Jamaica—Three Choices Successful.

All things went well for backers at the Jamaica race course yesterday, for from the first race to the last event on the card the winners were to be classed as "good things," including even the long-chance outsider Ismailian, who was so well backed that she went to the post at 40 to 1, after 100 to 1 had been laid against her chance. In three races odds-on favorites were successful. Two more events went to heavily backed second choices, to round out a day of complete disaster for the bookmakers.

The stake fixture of the day, the Hempstead, for two-year-olds at six furlongs, selling, was in fact the feature so far as the enthusiasm it aroused was concerned, for every politician, regardless of party, who was able to get to the track was on hand, and almost to a unit they bet on Frank Farrell's colt Arklirta, who won in hollow style to an accompaniment of applause which would have been creditable for a Futurity. Congressman T. D. Sullivan withdrew Caprice in favor of Arklirta, and, though State Senator P. H. McCarren started Sly Ben, that had no effect on the politicians' confidence in Farrell's colt. Arklirta was backed from 7 to 5 down to odds on at post time, and with Miller up broke quickest and went away in the lead like a flash. Twice Arklirta has been the sufferer because of disqualifications for foul riding in tight places, and with the losses in mind, Miller had orders to take no chances. The further he ran, the further Arklirta led, and, simply spread-eagling his field in the first quarter of a mile, Arklirta romped in, the easiest sort of a winner, pulling up at the end, half a dozen lengths before Third Alarm, who was well up in the crowd all the distance and who beat Sufficiency three parts of a length for the place.

Another "good thing" of the Arklirta type came off in the opening race, when Oak Duke, backed down to odds on, ran away from the three that opposed him after getting away practically alone, Father Catchem, counted on as the contender, bolting just as the barrier lifted and knocking back Kinleydale, while Deviltree was slow to break, and was far behind Oak Duke when they got to running. Oak Duke won in a canter, while Kinleydale closed a big gap, and finally beat Deviltree away off for the place.

The third odds-on favorite to win was Colonial Girl, top weight in the best class field of the afternoon, the mile and a sixteenth for fillies and mares. She started at 5 to 3 on, and galloped close up on her horses all the way, while Miss Crawford made the pace. At the head of the stretch, Colonial Girl went to the front and led to the end, though she had to be hustled out to beat the light-weighted Novena, who closed fast at the finish and was at Colonial Girl's hips when they passed the post. Red Knight, with the top weight; Alma Dufour, and Sailor Boy made up the field for the last event, Red Knight starting a very slight favorite over the mare, the betting being confined to the two. Sailor Boy led at a slow pace for seven furlongs, while Miller, on Red Knight, waited just, and permitted Alma Dufour to slip away and take a winning lead, when she made her move on the far turn. Alma Dufour then galloping in, while Red Knight was hard ridden to get past Sailor Boy.

The biggest fields of the afternoon ran in the two selling races, which had twelve starters each. In the six furlongs Quadrille burst out of the crowd immediately after the start, and never left the result in doubt, winning easily far off before Platoon and the hot favorite, Rebo, from the J. A. Drake stable. In the mile and a sixteenth, Yorkshire Lad, a heavily backed favorite, showed in the first flight for just an instant at the head of the stretch, and then died away, Jane Holly and Massa fighting on to within fifty yards of the post, when Ismailian shot out from the rear and won in the last jump by a head. MATHEWSON IN THE BOX.

World's Champions Beat Team at Wilkesbarre by Score of 5 to 1.

Special to The New York Times.

WILKESBARRE, Penn., Oct. 19.—When the first man up got a two-base hit and the next man a single off "Christy" Mathewson in to-day's game between the new world's champions and a Wilkesbarre team of professionals and crack amateurs the crowd expected great things to happen. Disappointment came, however. Sharp fielding cut off any runs and Mathewson finished his three innings with but another single off his delivery. McGinnity pitched three hitless innings, but Wiltse was not so lucky. Three singles in a row in the ninth gave the locals a run. Meanwhile the champions, although puzzled by the slow balls of Kelly of the Hudson River League, by a combination of errors and hits got five runs, and after that they did not try to tally. The score:

Williams College Golfers Triumph.

WOLLASTON, Mass., Oct. 19.—Both the team and individual championships of the New England Intercollegiate Golf Association will be held during the coming year by Williams College. The Williams men on Tuesday won the team event, and to-day A. W. Mitchell and E. Clapp of the same college were successful in their matches in the semi-final round of the individual contest at the Wollaston Golf Club and will meet to-morrow in the thirty-six hole final match. The surprise of the day was the defeat of Harold Wilcox of Williams, last year's metropolitan champion, by Peck of Dartmouth in the morning round by 4 up and 2 to play. The summary:

Second Round—A. Mitchell, Williams, defeated C. D. Moyer, Brown, 1 up, (19 holes;) R. H. Peck, Dartmouth, defeated H. Wilcox, Williams, 4 up and 2 to play; W. G. Pfeil, Technology, defeated R. B. Jones, Brown, 2 up and 1 to play; E. Clapp, Williams, defeated A. Gregory, Williams, 5 up and 4 to play.

Semi-final Round—Mitchell defeated Peck, 6 up and 5 to play; Clapp defeated Pfeil, 3 up and 1 to play.

Notes of the Thoroughbreds.

The two-year-old Hector, owned by James Galway, and a starter in the race for the Hempstead Stakes at Jamaica yesterday, was crowded into the rail just as he moved to the front on the turn into the stretch, and struck the fence with such force as to cripple him and badly scrape the leg of Jockey Perrine, who rode him. Hector stopped on the turn and was unsaddled there and led away, very lame.

James B. Brady, through his trainer, M. M. Allen, yesterday bought from H. R. Baker the fast two-year-old Holscher, by Lamplighter-Princess Lorraine, at private sale. The reported price was $10,000.

The speedy Western colt, Father Catchem, went to the post for his forty-eighth race since January when he answered the call for the first race at Jamaica yesterday, and his bolting seemed to indicate that too much has been asked of him. His forty-ninth start probably is some time off, as Starter Cassidy ordered him on the schooling list after his misbehavior both on the way to the post and when in the starter's hands.

Beaten horses were claimed out of two selling races at Jamaica yesterday; in the six furlongs, C. E. Mahone, who ran Gavin C., took away J. A. Drake's four-year-old Rebo, said to be a $2,000 horse, and entered for $500, Rebo costing Mahone $1,100. In the Hempstead Selling Stakes, W. J. Harding, owner of Klingser, claimed Sufficiency, entered by the Asbury Stable to sell for $1,700, paying $3,380 for her.

In the arrangement of the weights for the Tamaqua Handicap, six furlongs, to be run to-morrow at Jamaica, the handicapper has set a prodigious task for the great sprinter Roseben. The gelding is made top weight, with 154 pounds, equivalent to 157 for a horse of his age, or twenty-four pounds above the scale, and is required to concede twenty-seven pounds to the next horse in the weights, Burleigh, while the concession he must make to the bottom weight is sixty-six pounds actual weight.

The horses that Newton Bennington will race at New Orleans through the Winter have been selected from the establishment trained by Fred Burlew, and are sixteen in number, twelve of the lot being yearlings, which Trainer U. V. Wishard will handle at the Winter meeting, under arrangements that all are to be sold if there is a market for them after they begin racing.

Jockeys Knapp and Miller came very near dividing the Jamaica programme between them yesterday, the pair riding four of the six winners. Knapp was successful on Oak Duke and Alma Dufour, and Miller on Quadrille and Arklirta.

W. A. Stanton yesterday sold on private terms to R. Angarola the useful three-year-old Workman, by Fatherless-Network. Workman, which raced successfully in California last Winter and continued to win through the New York season, is intended by his new owner for racing again on the Pacific Coast through the coming Winter.

Foreign Autoists Sail for Home.

Baron Adrien de Turckheim, who was the representative of the Automobile Club of France at the recent Vanderbilt Cup race, sailed for Europe yesterday on the French line steamer La Savoie. He is the head of the French De Dietrich Company, whose racing car, driven by Duray, competed in the race. Duray sailed on the same steamer, and with him were Hemery, the cup winner; Wagner, Jenatzy, and Szisz. Several of the foreign racing cars were also on the boat, including Hemery's winning Darracq, Wagner's Darracq, and the two De Dietrichs brought over by Duray. The Italians, Lancia and Nazzaro, will sail to-morrow.

BIG ELEVENS PREPARE FOR CRUCIAL TESTS

To Win To-morrow's Games Will Try Their Strength Severely.

PRINCETON HAS HARD TASK

Penn and Columbia Worried Over Outcome of Their Games—West Point Plays Harvard, Yale Meets State.

No day in the season's football schedule thus far this Fall has offered such interesting possibilities as does to-morrow. Every one of the big colleges have games which, if they do not result in close contests, will certainly test the strength of the larger teams more severely than any of the matches yet played.

The game at Princeton with the Lafayette eleven ought to show whether or not the big scores made by the Tigers' fast, well-organized play were of real value. There is nothing a football coach is so chary about as big scores, as they augur a weak defense as a rule. No team Princeton has met this year appeared to be intrinsically strong, and there is some concern in Tigerville over the Lafayette game. It is not believed that defeat will be met with, but there is some anxiety as to whether or not the structure that has been building was based on a solid foundation.

The West Point game with Harvard will also be watched with a great deal of interest. Before the season started this match was looked upon as likely to be the first real contest of the year. The defeat of the cadets by the Virginia Polytechnic Institute team, following the long series of mishaps that have harassed the army lads, has taken a bit of the edge off the anticipations of the enthusiasts. Though most of the army cripples are back in the game, they are back too recently to be looked to for their best game, and Harvard will probably get nothing more than the best practice it has had thus far. The Crimson seems now to be rounding into form, and may show some good football.

The Brown game at Philadelphia with the crippled Quaker eleven affords the strongest possibility of a reversal of any of the leading elevens. The run of ill-luck that has pursued Penn on the field is bound to have had its effect in unsettling the team. The successive losses have set back the eleven beyond a doubt, and taken some of its confidence away. The ends and centre, in view of the inexperience of the men playing there, will likely be the point of attack by the Providence eleven, and if they pierce them at the start there is a fair chance of defeat being the Quakers' portion. Coming as it does at this time it will be the severest kind of a test for the Philadelphians, which, if passed through well, should do more for their ultimate success in the big games to follow than any other thing that could happen.

Columbia meets Amherst. The additions to the Columbia squad and the enthusiasm infused by the election of the new Captain has boomed the Blue and White stock decidedly. The Amherst team is believed to be stronger than either Wesleyan or Williams, so that the best contest of the year is looked for at the American League Park. Coach Morley is talking much more hopefully than at any time during the year, and now believes his team can give Princeton a hard run for victory in the game next week.

Yale meets Pennsylvania State. The Bellefonte collegians usually have a strong team, and have been particularly fortunate in making a showing against Eli. However, this year they seem to be a bit below par, and Eli ought to have no real difficulty. Cornell plays her first game in two weeks—against the Western University of Pennsylvania. The Ithacans have spent the time in developing some of the trick ideas of Coach Warner. As he is particularly prolific in this line, it will be interesting to see what his ingenuity has devised this time.

Ross and Ryan, the big Columbia guards, were unable to don their togs for practice yesterday, and their places on the first eleven had to be filled by substitutes. If they, with Von Saltza, are not able to play against Amherst, there will be small chance indeed of victory.

With the uncertainty surrounding the condition of the team the students are a bit wary of taking any bets just at present. Many offer odds of 2 to 1 that Amherst will score a victory. There is not much Columbia money in sight. Yesterday the Columbia freshmen played a tie game of 0 to 0 with St. Francis Xavier at American League Park. As the contest was not started until late, there was not time to play the second half before the 'Varsity players appeared on the field. The line-up was:

Columbia, 1909, 0.	Position.	St. F. Xavier, 0.
Smithers	Centre	Quinn
Willis	Right guard	Cary
Knapp	Right tackle	Donahue
Arkush	Right end	Schmidt
Schwartz	Quarter back	Cavanaugh
Taylor	Left half back	McPolland
Dawson	Right half back	Keyser
Gascoyne	Full back	Quinn

Referee—Mr. Kelley. Umpire—Mr. Williams. Head linesman—G. G. Moore.

At Princeton a call has been made for new candidates in view of the many injuries. Dutcher, O'Brien, and Jennings have been knocked out for good, while Simons, Tenney, Dillon, the guard; Moscrip, Waller, McCormick, and Daub have been out of the game for varying times. Herring, Bard, and Daub will not be allowed to play more than one half against Lafayette, and Simone will not be in the game. The 'Varsity played well in the practice yesterday, but the second team was weak.

The Yale 'Varsity was driven through severe practice in offensive play yesterday behind closed gates, the new plays planned for the Pennsylvania State game being again tried. The defensive work of the eleven is fairly good now except at left guard, and this week's secret work has mainly been on offensive tackles.

Harvard and Pennsylvania also did light work. At West Point the team ran through a few signals and then lined up for ten minutes play. The first team kicked off and soon secured the ball, then by short rushes scored a touch-down, Weeks carrying the ball over. Abraham and Smith were not able to line up, but Erwin got in the scrimmage and appeared all right. Mettler and Gillespie took things easy on the side line. As a whole the practice was not encouraging.

Coach Mills put the New York University eleven through its last scrimmage yesterday before the game with Wesleyan on Saturday. The changes made in the line on Wednesday have made a great improvement in the team's play. In the scrimmage with the scrub the 'Varsity scored five times. Swartz played a star game at tackle. Mowen was placed at left half back.

The 'Varsity will have only signal practice to-day, but the scrub team will play a practice game with the Mount Vernon High School eleven on Ohio Field.

New Race Track at Montreal.

MONTREAL, Oct. 19.—John F. Ryan of New York, who has been here for a week, has completed arrangements for the building of a race track in the outskirts of this city at a cost of $275,000. Mr. Ryan says that John Boden, New York; William F. Riggs, Beltimore; Frank J. Bryan, Jacob Holtman, and W. C. Percy, New York, will be connected with the organization. The capital is to be supplied by New York and Montreal men. The opening meeting is expected to be held next Fall.

BILLINGS'S HORSES SOLD.

Driving Paraphernalia of Well-Known Reinsman Realized $18,170.

The dispersal sale of the vehicles and heavy harness horses belonging to C. K. G. Billings took place yesterday afternoon at Durland's Riding Academy. The bidding was spirited and good prices were received. The consignment consisted of forty-one lots of horses, vehicles, and harness, the total sale realizing $18,170. The feature was the sale of The Jester and Sir Wilkes, probably the fastest mail phaeton team in the world. The Jester is a full brother to the trotter Lord Derby, and with Sir Wilkes trotted half a mile on the Speedway in 1:10½. They were purchased by Mr. Billings for his special use. The bidding was started at $1,500 and increased by $50 bids to $2,550, at which figure the horses passed into new ownership. Mr. Billings paid $6,500 for the pair. Billy K. and Richard H., blue ribbon winners, fit for tandem, double or single harness, were knocked down at $1,300, and Online and Napper Tandy, a pair of well-actioned cobs, were sold for $900, which was one of the lowest prices of the sale.

Gold Coin, a handsome chestnut gelding, brought $725, which was the highest price for a single horse. Pawnee, Jr., sold for $650 and Lady Maine for $475. Auriel Batonyi paid the top price ($1,000) for the pick of the vehicles, a park coach built by Brewster. It was as good as new and originally cost $3,500. A $2,500 miniature victoria, which had not been used, was sold for $675, and a $2,000 landau, practically new, went for $320. There was some lively bidding for an attractive woman's phaeton, which had been built specially for Mr. Billings, the final bid being $725. A Brewster regulation body brake realized $750, less than half its value, and a miniature brougham was bid up to $800. The other vehicles were secured for small sums. The heavy brass-mounted harness averaged about $300 a set.

DROPPED DEAD IN RACE.

Trotter Octave B Expired at Half-Mile Post at Dover—Driver Uninjured.

DOVER, N. H., Oct. 19.—Although there were only two races on the card at Granite State Park to-day, the afternoon was not sufficiently long to bring one of them to a conclusion. The 2:13 pace was replete with sensational features. In the first heat Erskine Reed jumped the fence on the back stretch near the half-mile post, throwing Driver Humphreyville. Both man and horse escaped injury. In the fifth heat Octave B., driven by Leicester Dore, dropped dead near the half-mile post. Dore was thrown over the fence, but was not injured. Octave B. was owned by Tarbell & Small of Boston and was valued at more than $2,000.

Lord Quex, the favorite in the 2:20 trot, carried off the money in straight heats. The summary:

2:20 Trotting, Purse $500.—Won by Lord Quex in three straight heats; time, 2:14¾, 2:15¾, 2:16½. Great Medium, second; Adberta, third. Kapolma and The Baron also started, the latter being distanced in the first heat.

Big Show for Boston Terriers.

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 19.—For the specialty show of the Boston Terrier Club to be held in Mechanics' Building Nov. 15, 16, 17, and 18, the committee in charge has prepared a liberal classification which will appeal to members of the fancy all over New England. The Boston terrier is constantly growing in public favor, and they generally head the list in number of entries at the leading exhibitions on the dog show circuit. The coming Boston show will undoubtedly be the greatest event in the history of the breed, and a record-breaking entry is expected. The judge will be P. J. Brickley, who is eminently qualified for the position, and every exhibitor feels sure of a "square deal." It is estimated that over $1,000 will be distributed in money prizes at the show, as in addition to the cash premiums offered by the club the friends of the breed have offered substantial money prizes for special competitions, and the plate offered will exceed another $1,000 in value.

In the regular classes the money prizes will be $12 to first, $8 to second, $5 to third, $3 to fourth, and a silver medal to fifth. The prizes in the toy classes are 40 per cent. of the entry to first, 20 per cent. to second, 10 per cent. to third, and a silver medal to fourth.

Yacht Sales and Transfers.

M. W. Torrey of the Manhasset Bay Yacht Club has sold to R. H. Johnson his thirty-two-foot auxiliary yawl Kittiwink, built in 1901 from designs by C. D. Mower. She will be taken to Cuba to be used by her new owner at his Winter home at Gordenas.

W. S. Van Clief of Staten Island has sold to Dr. J. R. Bourguois his seventy-five-foot power yacht Nokomis for use in Eastern waters next season. She is equipped with twenty horse power Standard engines. The transfer was made through Stanley M. Seaman.

William H. Cooper has bought the steel steam yacht Buccaneer from J. Rosenbaum of Chicago, and she is now on her way to this city. She is a 148-foot twin-screw steamer and will be a notable addition to the local fleet. Henry J. Gielow negotiated the sale.

Wilbur C. Fisk of the New York Yacht Club is having built at the Montells yard, at Greenwich, from designs by Henry J. Gielow, an eighty-four-foot house boat, fitted with two four-cylinder gasoline engines of sixty horse power each, capable of developing a speed of ten knots an hour. She will be driven by twin screws and be one of the most complete and comfortable house boats owned in the neighborhood of New York.

Bruce Haldeman has bought the cruising power launch Anita for use in Florida during the Winter.

The Gardner designed Madcap, twenty-three-foot water line, built for racing in Finland, won the championship for small boats, besides defending successfully the international cup raced for there. She started eighteen times and won all her races.

Henry J. Gielow is designing three boats for Finnish yachtsmen, one a fifty-foot cruising launch, with triple-expansion engine and high power; another a thirty-foot twentyfive horse power motor boat, and the third a forty-two-foot racing sloop.

ASTOR PLACE AND FOURTH AVENUE

GROSVENOR HORSES SOLD FOR $68,000

Thirty-Five High Steppers Disposed of at Nearly $2,000 Apiece.

SOCIETY WELL REPRESENTED

The Baron and President Brought Highest Price—Experts Pronounce Auction of Show Horses Greatest Ever Held.

There was a big representation of society last night to witness the sale of Mrs. J. B. M. Grosvenor's prize-winning steppers and saddle horses at the American Horse Exchange. Notwithstanding the inclement weather, over 500 persons attended. The sale was due to the recent sudden death of Mr. Grosvenor, and arranged so that the purchasers would be in time to enter the horses in the National Horse Show, which will be held at Madison Square Garden.

The list comprised the biggest single sale of show horses ever offered to the public, and the prices realized were remarkably good. Twenty-four lots, with a total of thirty-five horses, were sold for a total of $68,040, an average of $1,943. Mrs. Grosvenor has been an enthusiastic exhibitor at the National Horse Show and other leading exhibitions in the East and West. The consignment represented an outlay of $125,000, and nearly every horse has won numerous blue ribbons.

Society began to gather early, and long before the time set for starting the sale the spacious galleries were filled to overflowing, and the ring presented an animated appearance. Prominent exhibitors were on hand to add to their winning strings, and the leaders of finance and fashion presented an appearance which resembled the Madison Square Garden Horse Show. Among those present were:

William G. Rockefeller, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. John R. Gerken, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. Richard F. Carman, J. Campbell Thompson, Miss Ruth Twombly, J. Howard Willetts, Dr. J. Grant Lyman, Miss Vera Morris, Judge and Mrs. Dill, Mrs. R. L. Ladue, Dr. and Mrs. Hunt, Mrs. J. H. Donnelly, Harry B. Hollins, Miss Marion Hollins, Joseph B. Widener, E. D. Smith, Harry Payne Whitney, Jay Carlisle, W. E. Lowe, J. W. Harriman, Alfred B. Maclay, J. W. Ogden, O. H. Kahn, Charles Pfizer, Auriel Batonyi, J. Beavor Webb, George Drakeley, John D. Spratley, William Durland, Cornelius W. Provost, E. A. Tipton, Frederick Alden, Harry T. Peters, Charles W. Smith, Emil Pfizer, E. H. Weatherbee, Dr. F. C. Grandside, E. F. Murphy, Douglas H. Grand, Samuel T. Peters, Franklyn Copeland, Allen C. Washington, W. H. and A. G. Hanan, James T. Hyde, G. C. Coles, H. Carrolton, Watt Sherman, Murry Guggenheim, Lehman Strauss, Harvey S. Ladue, E. Hawke, Jr., and Percy Barr.

Mrs. Grosvenor's famous park four-in-hand, Laughing Water, Indian Chief, Pow Wow, and Tomahawk, driven by J. W. Donnelly, was the first lot on the catalogue. The wheelers were offered for sale, and after spirited bidding knocked down to M. Carrolton of Pittsburg for $3,500. Laughing Water and Indian Chief followed. This pair, with twelve blue ribbons, went for $7,000 to J. W. Harriman.

Petroleum, with an unbeaten record in the saddle class, was expected to reach a record price, but he was knocked down to G. C. Coles for $2,800. Corinne, another prize winning saddler, with five championships to her credit, went to W. A. McGibbon for $1,850. Watt Sherman secured Dixie for $2,250, and Dr. Ryder paid $1,675 for Morning Glory.

The famous roan four, with which Mrs. Grosvenor expected to win the National Show four-in-hand, did not reach expectations, Murry Guggenheim paying $2,400 for Port Boy and Parade, the leaders, and Emil Pfizer securing Trumpeter and Traveler, the wheelers, for $1,500. Murry Guggenheim was fortunate in getting Carol and Chorister for $1,000.

The most important lot was The Baron and President, for which pair Mrs. Grosvenor paid E. D. Jordan $20,000. Dr. J. Grant Lyman secured the champions for $8,000.

Reginald Vanderbilt's agent bought Rosebery and Salisbury, the undefeated carriage pair, for $5,000, and Archduke and Princess, wheelers, for The Baron and President, for $7,500. Fascination and Elevation, the best runabout pair in America, went to H. Carrolton for $3,700. Harry Payne Whitney bought the crack pony Masterpiece for $1,200 as a present for his eldest boy.

Irish Sports at Celtic Park.

A unique Irish sporting carnival will be held at Celtic Park on Sunday, with special imported Irish prizes for the winners. Father Michael O'Flanagan is the organizer of the event, and every effort is being made to make it typical of Old Erin. Competitors will represent all the leading Irish counties. There will be Gaelic football between teams of Kerry, Cork, Sligo, and Louth. There will be curling with Brian Boru, Garryowen, and Meagher teams represented. There will be dancing by Champion John Kelly of Ireland, and other similar sports in vogue in Erin.

The proceeds of the games will go to the industrial school at Loughlynn, which contributed woolen jerseys for the athletes and secured donations from the gold and silversmiths of Dublin for the victors. These prizes are all of rare old Celtic design.

GOLF CHAMPION BARRED FROM COLLEGE MEET

White of Harvard Forced to Default at Garden City.

GEE WINS LOW-SCORE PRIZE

Eight Survivors, Representing Yale, Harvard, and Princeton Now Left for the Individual Honors.

Five universities were represented yesterday in the qualifying round for the individual intercollegiate golf championship played on the links of the Garden City Golf Club. Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Columbia, and the University of Pennsylvania furnished the contestants. Columbia and Pennsylvania failed to get places in the eligible set of sixteen, and at the close of the first match play round in the afternoon the representatives had been reduced to four for Yale, three for Princeton, and one for Harvard.

A. L. White of Harvard is the present intercollegiate champion, but he was unable to play owing to the action of the Harvard Faculty in denying him permission to engage in athletic events until certain delinquencies in his studies are made up. It is the first time in the history of the intercollegiate tournament that a player has been debarred by a Faculty rule owing to unsatisfactory standing in his scholastic work.

Twenty-eight golfers started in the opening round, and twenty-five finished. The low score prize was won by Howard J. Gee of Princeton. He made one of the best records ever recorded over the Garden City course, 77 strokes, which is within two strokes of the club record held by Walter J. Travis. He got a grand two on the short second hole, driving dead to the hole. There was only one six on his card. Steadiness in both long and short play characterized his work. Robert Abbott of Yale came next with 81, and Dwight Partridge, the Yale freshman, and interscholastic champion, tied for third place at 82 with Percy Gilbert of Harvard.

Six men tied at 90 for the last three places, and among those who lost in the play-off was J. A. McCurdy of Pennsylvania, the only Philadelphian who had a chance for the eligible set.

The match play round in the afternoon was disastrous to Harvard, for of five Cambridge golfers who got places in the qualifying round, only one survived, Percy Gilbert. He beat the Princetonian Douglas Laird by 4 up and 2 to play.

Ralph Peters, Jr., of Princeton and Bruce D. Smith, Captain of the Yale team, had one of the closest matches in the afternoon. It was a hard fight from the start, but the Princeton man had superior staying powers and won by a single hole. Liggitt of Princeton also won by one hole. Partridge put Fay Ingalls, one of the best Harvard men, out by 3 up and 2 to play. The sixteen who qualified in the medal play round were:

Howard J. Gee, Princeton—

STAR PUGH IS BEATEN IN SPEEDWAY BRUSH

Susie G. Wins the Big Pacing Event in Good Time.

NINE RACES IN THE RAIN

Baron de Shay Forces Invader to Take Second Place in Fast Trotting Contest.

Notwithstanding the rain yesterday afternoon, the Speedway was the scene of considerable lively sport in the nine brushes that were decided under the auspices of the Road Drivers' Association. The contestants in the closing events found the going rather heavy and the steady rain that settled down before the programme was half over diminished the attendance materially.

The Class A pacing resulted in a defeat for Star Pugh. Three heats were necessary to determine the race. Susie G. won the first and third, making the best time of the race, the final being paced in 1:04¼. Star Pugh got the second heat.

Much interest centred in the Class A trotting and the Class A pacing events. In the former Baron de Shay and Invader were the star contenders. Baron de Shay came in last in the first heat, there being three starters, but won the next two handily, making in the final heat the fastest time of the trotting events, 1:04¼.

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 19.—Active trading in the stock of the Western Maryland Railroad was the feature of the market to-day. The excellent showing made by the company last year and the prospects for the coming year, when the road will operate its trains over its own tracks and not use the Baltimore and Ohio between Cumberland and Cherry Run, have stimulated interest in the securities.

This is the first time that the stock has come on the market in any volume, and before the close it gained 1½ points. Prices held about steady. United Railways 4s sold up ⅞. Cotton Duck 5s declined ¼. Continental Trust gained 3¼ points. G. B. S. Brewing common receded ¼. United States Fidelity declined 5 points. Northern Central sold off ½.

The close was dull but firm. Shares, 5,143; bonds, $57,500. Transactions:

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Irregular; Call Money Rates, 4½@5 Per Cent.

Market Closes Moderately Higher After Early Declines—Money Position Abroad.

Although the weekly statement of the Bank of England disclosed a substantial betterment in the institution's reserve position, the present percentage being 43.21 against 41.47 last week, and the discount rate was left standing at 4 per cent., London sent over lower prices for American securities, and again followed the quotations with sales of stock at the opening of the market here. This selling was augmented by the heavy offerings by bearish traders and Western houses, and for the first half hour prices fell away rather sharply. This movement, which to all appearances was largely professional, came to an end well before the close of the first hour of business, and a recovery set in, influenced by the lower rate at which call loans were obtainable, and by the decline in sterling exchange and the announcement that the local banks had gained some $3,200,000 from the Sub-Treasury since Friday last. The improvement was maintained to the close of the market, although more or less irregularity, due in part to the failure of the Amalgamated Copper Company directors to increase the dividend on the company's stock, and in part, also, to the subsequent upturn in sterling exchange, marked the diminishing trading. President Roosevelt's address at Raleigh contained nothing distasteful to the market; on the contrary the moderate tone of the address, especially as regarded the period within which the commission's rates should be put into effect, if plenary power were given, was a matter of favorable comment.

While the closing prices of many stocks represented substantial gains from the low points touched in the forepart of the day, as in the case of Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Canadian Pacific, Reading, and Brooklyn Rapid Transit, all of which were up more than a point from the low, the changes generally from Wednesday's level were confined to small fractions. Brooklyn Rapid Transit was an exception, closing as it did with a gain of 1½ points, and this was true, too, of the equipment company stocks and several other industrial issues. American Locomotive failed to repeat its demonstration of Wednesday, but its place in this respect was well filled by the common stock of the American Car & Foundry Company, which rose 3⅜ points. After that in Brooklyn Rapid Transit the heaviest trading was in United States Steel common, and the support accorded the stock was a steadying influence in the morning session. Amalgamated Copper sold off only moderately on the failure of the directors to raise the dividend, and it may be questioned if there was any serious belief that an increase would be made.

Developments in the money position at home and abroad were the interesting features of the day's news and these were generally favorable. The Bank of England reported the addition of $3,200,000 to its gold holdings and $5,400,000 to its total cash reserve, this resulting in the betterment in its reserve position in spite of an increase of $6,400,000 in loans. The Bank of France reported only the seasonable loss of $815,000 in gold and an addition of $650,000 to its loans. Bar gold declined ¼ penny in the London market and at Berlin discount rates fell ¼ per cent. The early depression in demand sterling yesterday was due to a large supply of cotton bills, and the subsequent recovery and advance followed renewed inquiries for the covering of finance bills. The part the Japanese funds are playing in the exchange situation is still unsettled.

AMALGAMATED UNCHANGED.

Quarterly Dividend Declared Is at the Same Rate as Before.

The Directors of the Amalgamated Copper Company met yesterday and declared the regular quarterly dividend of 1¼ per cent. For several days the Street had been hearing from various sources that the dividend would be at an increased rate, though this expectation was by no means general. The action taken by the Directors, which usually is not announced until after the close of the market, was made known yesterday about 2:30 P. M. The stock was not usually active nor did it fluctuate much. It closed with a net loss of three-eighths of a point at a recovery of five-eighths of a point from the lowest.

The dividend is payable Nov. 27 to holders of record Oct. 26.

The declaration of a $10 dividend on Boston and Montana, rumored on Wednesday, was confirmed yesterday. The declaration is in the form of a regular dividend of $2 a share and an extra dividend of $8 a share. The dividend was made payable immediately. There are very few stockholders, as most of the stock is held by the Amalgamated Copper Company.

LONDON STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—Money was in good demand in the market to-day and supplies were growing scarcer. Discounts were maintained.

Trading on the Stock Exchange was quiet. The fact that the Bank of England's rate of discount was not changed had a favorable influence, but did not stimulate transactions. Consols were slightly firmer. Home rails mostly had a better tone on satisfactory traffic returns.

Americans opened dull on New York selling. The movements were erratic. Prices ruled a shade above parity. The transactions were meagre and the market weakened later owing to lack of local support and closed flat, with some stocks a shade above the lowest quotations of the day. Canadian Pacific fluctuated and improved a fraction at the close.

Japanese Imperial 6s of 1904 were quoted at 101¼.

Bar silver steady at 28⅜d per ounce.

Bar gold, 77s. 9¾d. American eagles, 76s. 4¾d.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Spasms of tremendous activity in one or two stocks at a time, the excited swapping of contracts between traders, the expedient among floor operators of bidding an eighth or a quarter over the market for stock in blocks of 5,000 to 25,000 shares, the abrupt manner in which trading leaves off in one thing and begins in another—all these are signs of a highly professional stock market. They have been present in current speculation for some time. It is the kind of market which once elicited from a cynical broker the comment: "The croupiers are playing with each other." It is surprising, for example, to see activity suddenly spring up in a stock that nobody has been thinking about, continue for perhaps an hour, possibly a day, and then subside as abruptly as it began, with only the specialist left to keep a market for it. While people are still wondering what became of this enthusiasm, it breaks out in another place. Traders complain that to make money in the market under existing conditions, it is necessary to have the intuition for anticipating these extraordinary movements. They are so violent while they last that one who attempts to follow them invariably has to pay high for the stock and he is lucky if the market does not flatten out under him before he can get his profit. Activity on these advances is largely artificial, transactions occurring in lots of 1,000 to 5,000 shares, and the outside trader, especially the commission house client, who wants to buy only 100 or 200 shares is at a disadvantage. On the advance in American Car and Foundry yesterday afternoon there were transactions such as one of 3,500 shares at 40, and immediately another of 2,300 at the same price.

* * *

There have been three peculiar movements this week in stocks which are called specialties. One was in American Locomotive. That was the most sensational of the three. Another was in Amalgamated Copper on Thursday, when it looked as if the whole capital stock was wanted above 86. The bulk of yesterday's reduced trading in American Locomotive was within a range of less than 1 per cent., and the stock closed at a fractional net loss. Amalgamated Copper, after breaking ¾ per cent. in the first two or three transactions, went stale on the level of 84. The most prominent special feature yesterday was Brooklyn Rapid Transit, which advanced more than 2 per cent., and developed an activity of more than 80,000 shares. The same crowd of aggressive professional traders has been prominent in each of these three movements. This is not to say, of course, that the actual leadership has been the same in all three cases, but only that each movement attracted the same following. A fourth movement, that in American Car and Foundry common, might fall within the category. The same houses and traders which had been large buyers of American Locomotive on its advance, bought American Car and Foundry heavily yesterday. It was generally understood, indeed, on the floor, that a crowd that had made a good deal of money in the one stock was making a turn in the other.

* * *

Jacob Field was the most aggressive operator on the long side of Brooklyn Rapid Transit. The stock opened weak, as the whole market did, but it was the first to rally. At 72 Field was reported from the floor to be bidding for 5,000 shares, and at 74 he was again reported to be bidding for a like amount. It was a well-conducted and, no doubt, a successful demonstration. The buying, brokers thought, was not of such origin as would lead one to suppose that it might be sustained. The whole movement, indeed, was to some extent discredited by the fact that "calls" on the stock from the office of Flower & Co., made close to the market for short periods, were freely offered in New Street. When the Flower crowd is really bulling Brooklyn it is not selling "calls" on the stock. It might then offer "puts" as freely as yesterday it offered "calls."

* * *

The particular weakness of Rock Island common and preferred, especially the preferred, was much commented upon yesterday.

* * *

The bear crowd has not been able of late to make its bearish ammunition effective.

* * *

The market opened weak and nervous under pressure of speculative selling in response to an attack on "coppers" which had been launched from Boston. There was no doubt some selling also for the long account. Prices declined rather abruptly in the first fifteen minutes, but it was soon apparent that the bull interests were supporting the market stoutly. The Morgan support was most noticeable in United States Steel common. The heaviest selling of the first hour converged upon that stock. Four houses sold possibly 35,000 shares, a large part of it at 37, but the price was held at that point as if brokers handling the supporting orders had been instructed not to let the stock break through 37. The selling on that price was very heavy. Later the stock rallied to 37½. It closed at 37⅝, unchanged from Thursday's closing quotation. The character and effectiveness of the support given to Steel common was of some moral advantage to the general market. Union Pacific also had been well supported on the level of 131, as it was a few days ago. The market had recovered all around when the President's speech was made public at midday, and no speculative attention whatever was paid to it. The professional bull crowd got control of the boardroom situation in the afternoon and bid prices up, not only in specialties like American Car and Foundry and Pressed Steel Car, but also in such stocks as Union Pacific and Southern Pacific.

* * *

The activity of Field and his following on the bull side had a good deal to do with the recovery in prices after midday. Field's principal achievement was in Brooklyn Rapid Transit, but when that stock had had its turn he went around the room bidding up first one thing and then another. He helped to bid up Southern Pacific, also Union Pacific, and he was in New York Central and elsewhere. A house which has been acting on his orders recently was a large buyer of American Car and Foundry, and Field was supposed to have a hand also in that. The prominence of Field in a professional way on the bull side has been raised as an argument against the market by persons who do not believe in his tactics, and it has been predicted that he will come off badly in the end, but it is extremely doubtful if his speculative position is ever so vulnerable as it appears to be. He turns a big line of stocks with astonishing facility. His specialty is that of making a professional market for professional traders. That is about all that his operations amount to. He turns the same stocks over and over again.

* * *

The response of Amalgamated Copper to the dividend announcement was to decline from 84½ to 83⅞ and to close at 84⅛, showing a net decline of ⅜ per cent. On Wednesday the same operator who yesterday attacked "coppers" made the positive prediction that the dividend would be increased to the rate of 6 per cent. Amalgamated Copper stock was selling above 86 when that prediction was made. It is down 2 points. It is not seriously supposed, of course, that this prediction could have influenced the Directors against increasing the dividend, but the fact remains that they did not increase it, showing the danger of making positive predictions. An attack upon "coppers" at this time would doubtless be extremely unpopular in Boston and all New England, for the reason that a bull speculation in those securities has just got under way.

* * *

There was a Hoadley bull pool in American Locomotive common. It is a question where its operations left off and those of more powerful interests began. It is believed that the Hoadley crowd lost control of the market somewhere in the 50s. The floating supply of the stock is now controlled by perhaps the strongest pool that has ever operated in it. There was some evidence yesterday of quiet liquidation, but the price fell back very little. It declined to 63⅝ in the first half hour, and then recovered to 65¼. After this the activity subsided, and in the afternoon the stock was infrequently quoted.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 19.—Local operators were more interested in the New York list than in the local to-day, and were large buyers in New York of Reading, Erie, United States Steel, American Car and Foundry, and American Locomotive. Rock Island was active here, but the buying was not considered good, most of it originating on the floor of the Exchange. Renewed pressure on United Gas Improvement drove its price down a point to 93.

Philadelphia Electric bonds were also heavy. Bell Telephone was down 1½ and Frankford and Southwark Passenger 1. Cambria Steel advanced fractionally on the statement that it had received a large order for cars from the Pennsylvania. Bonds were very quiet. Total sales, 30,168 shares. Summary:

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Oct. 19.—The local money market is somewhat easier. The usual table of rates, &c., follows:

Call loans, 5½@6 per cent. Time loans, collateral, 4½@5 per cent. Time loans, mercantile paper, 5 per cent. Clearing House loans, 5 per cent. New York funds at par. Clearings, $24,412,255. Balances, $1,565,703. Sub-Treasury debit, $87,181.

The late weakness in yesterday's market resulted in bringing in numerous selling orders throughout the copper share list and opening prices were heavy, but after the first half hour the pressure was removed and prices began to improve. Old Dominion and Isle Royale were the leaders, the former getting on a new high level.

In the afternoon the tone continued to improve, although some little disappointment was seen over the failure to increase the Amalgamated dividend, but it had very little effect on prices, which continued strong until the closing.

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 19.—New York exchange was 15c. premium. Time and call loans, 4@5 per cent.

Moderate activity marked the trading in local securities to-day, but the trend showed no early conspicuous changes. Illinois Brick, recently strengthened by reports of good earnings, was marketed in small amounts at slightly easy prices.

Swift's shares were put out moderately, as they have been by insiders for several weeks. Kansas City Light was easy on small lot sales. Quaker Oats preferred went at 101 to 102. Western Stone is being bought for its next dividend, to-day, going at 30. Boxboard found small pool work. In the afternoon Subway firmed up to 43½, and Quaker Oats preferred sold back to par.

THE OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Narrow Movements in Curb Stocks—Trading Light.

Interborough Rapid Transit Declines to 212—Chicago Subway Rallies Slightly—Small Loss in Marine Preferred.

Trading was very light on the curb yesterday. Even in Chicago Subway the fluctuations were narrow. That stock rallied a small fraction to 42⅞. The copper stocks were represented to the usual extent so far as the number of issues dealt in was concerned, but none of them displayed much activity. United Copper was steady despite the fact that there was no formal announcement of the ending of the contest with Amalgamated interests, which had been promised from Boston on Wednesday. International Mercantile Marine preferred was dull and fractionally lower at the close.

The principal transactions reported yesterday in the outside market, with high, low, and last prices, were as follows:

The reorganization plan for reduction and readjustment of the capital of the American Malting Company went into operation yesterday. Application will be made to list on the Stock Exchange certificates of deposit issued by the Standard Trust Company.

INCORPORATED IN NEW JERSEY.

The Perfecto Lacquer and Varnish Company, Rahway; capital, $25,000. Incorporators—Albert A. Aszman, Richard Aszman, David H. Cox, and Edward D. Gardner.

REPUBLIC STEEL'S NEW HEAD.

S. G. Cooper Succeeds Alexis W. Thompson—Mr. Gates's Interest.

S. G. Cooper was elected President of the Republic Iron and Steel Company in place of Alexis W. Thompson, whose retirement from the Presidency of the company has been rumored for a long time. Charles S. Guthrie was elected Chairman of the Board of Directors.

Mr. Guthrie, with President Cooper, Grant B. Schley, L. C. Hanna, and John W. Gates were named as an Executive Committee. This committee is new, none of the former members of the Executive Committee having been renamed. Yesterday's developments at the meeting of the Directors serve to clear up the uncertainty that has existed in regard to the identity of the controlling interests in the property.

It was definitely stated yesterday that the control of the company is lodged in the hands of a group of men, including E. J. Berwind, Charles S. Guthrie, Grant B. Schley, and several others, including John W. Gates. Mr. Gates, however, is in no sense in individual control of the company. His interest in the property is no larger than that of the other members of the group that have taken over the direction of the company's affairs.

At yesterday's meeting W. H. Hassinger, who had been left off the board at the election held on Wednesday, was reelected a Director. In order to make room for him Charles H. Wacker offered his resignation. It had been expected by some that Mr. Thompson would offer his resignation as a Director, but the fact that he did not do so made necessary the temporary removal of Mr. Hassinger, for whom a place was made yesterday by the withdrawal of Mr. Wacker.

The matter of providing for the accumulated dividends on the preferred stock was referred to the Executive Committee, which is to report to the full board at a later meeting. The financial statement of the company has been prepared, and as soon as it has been approved by the Executive Committee will be made public.

MEAT INSPECTION EXTENSION.

Plan to Aid Independent Packers to Go Into Effect Nov. 1.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—On Nov. 1 Secretary Wilson will try to extend the Federal inspection service to the small and independent packers.

This involves a tremendous effort on the part of the department because of the manifest difficulties in the way of expanding a system that has hitherto been confined to the large concerns engaged in exporting meats. The very small packer, who kills but half a dozen beeves a day, will necessarily be left out. But a great number of those who have applied for inspection will be taken in.

Efforts have been made to get the small packers to group their business so as to provide a number of animals sufficient to justify the furnishing of an inspector and a force of microscopists. This plan has not worked well, and it will be necessary to limit the extension of the service to houses that have in themselves business enough for an inspector.

THE COMMERCIAL WORLD

WHEAT.—A lack of bull support was one of the most notable features in wheat yesterday, and the factor chiefly connected with the decline of ⅛@⅝c per bushel, which took place during the day, the last prices representing about low point of the session. Other influences having more or less effect also were denials that locusts had injured the Argentine crop to any appreciable extent, favorable rains throughout the Winter wheat belt, where drought had been complained of, and increased Western receipts, the latter showing nearly 800,000 bushels more than on the corresponding day last year. The foreign markets were generally easy, with the exception of Liverpool, which closed ⅛@⅝d net higher. At Paris there was a decline of 5@20 points, and at Budapest a drop of 2 points for the day. Broomhall estimated that Argentine shipments on Friday would aggregate 800,000 bushels. The only firmness shown by the market was right at the start, when a lot of buying orders in the local market caused it to open relatively higher than Chicago. Both markets immediately fell off as soon as this demand was supplied, and getting no help from the usual sources, acted weak for the balance of the day. From Minneapolis came encouraging news in the shape of reported good buying orders for cash wheat and large flour sales, latter mostly for domestic account, however, as European bids have been too low. Wheat sales on export account, partly late Wednesday, were fifteen loads. The Minneapolis stock of wheat has increased thus far this week 550,000 bushels. Commission houses were said to have sold upward of 2,000,000 bushels of wheat at Chicago during the day, part of it going to outside parties, who were evidently pinning faith on the reports that the bull leader had designs on 90-cent wheat at Chicago in the near future. Cash wheat in New York closed easy, as follows: No. 2 red, 91⅝c, elevator, and 82⅝c, free on board, afloat; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 94⅞c, and No. 1 Northern, Manitoba, 93⅝c, free on board, afloat.

CORN.—The corn market was inclined to be rather slow all day and in the West remained within a range of about ¼c, while locally the close was ⅛@¼c under the previous night. At first steady on the excessive rains in all big corn States, together with the advance of ⅜@½d at Liverpool, the market gradually sold off with wheat and was heavy during most of the afternoon. Broomhall estimated Argentine shipments at 1,200,000 bushels, and interior receipts were about the same as last year. Taking the business worked late Wednesday, export sales were figured at forty-five loads, all ports. No. 2 corn in the New York market was quoted 61½c, free on board, afloat, this being the only quotation available.

COTTON.—The cotton market was very active and during the middle session had a sharp advance which was only partly lost in the late trading, with the close steady at a net gain of 10 to 15 points. Covering and fresh bull support, promoted by expectations of unsettled and colder weather in the Southwestern belt, talk of an increased spot demand, and predictions for smaller receipts, were factors in the advance.

The opening was firm at an advance of 8 to 12 points in response to firmer cables and a continued good spot demand at the advance of 13 points in the English market. At first there was some hesitation. The weather map showed favorable temperatures in the South and rain of moment appeared only at a couple of points. There was therefore a tendency to regard the upturn as little more than a natural reaction, and there was heavy realizing by recent buyers as well as fresh selling for short account by local professionals. But the market yielded very little, owing to the bullish character of private cables from abroad, and around midday prices had another bulge on the official forecast for cold weather in the Northwest. Around 10.16c for January, or 24 points net higher, and about 50 points up from the low level of the week, profit taking became the feature, and in the late trading the market sold off several points with the close not far from the opening figures.

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 19.—Spot cotton in good demand; sales 10,000 bales; speculation and export, 1,000, American, 9,000; no receipts. Middling upland, 5.40d. Futures opened irregular, 8 points higher on near and 10 up on far months. Closed steady at a net advance of 11@12 points. October and October-November, 5.34; November-December, 5.35; December-January, 5.39; January-February, 5.42; February-March, 5.44; March-April, 5.46; April-May, 5.48; May-June, 5.50; June-July, 5.51; July-August, 5.52. Manchester—Yarns hard to sell; cloths quiet.

COFFEE.—The coffee market was again weak under scattering liquidation, and absence of important support. The opening was 5 points lower in response to somewhat disappointing cables and full primary receipts, while support was also restricted by another decline in the rate of Brazilian exchange. Later the decline was increased to a matter of 10@15 points, and while around this level there seemed to be some support; the market developed no rallying power, and closed steady in tone, but at a net loss of 10@15 points. Sales were reported of about 65,000 bags. There was a decline of 3-16d in the rate of Brazilian exchange, which closed at 15 13-16d. The Brazilian markets continued unchanged, but Rio was reported weak and Santos quiet. Receipts at the two ports were 72,000 bags, against 50,000 bags last year, and while the interior movement as reported for the previous day showed a falling off, Sao Paulo receipts for the day were comparatively heavy at 44,500 bags, against 41,700 bags last year. Of the European markets, Havre closed ¼@⅜ franc lower, but Hamburg was only a partial ¼ pfennig lower. Weather reports from Brazil were regarded as favorable, but it seemed that the declining tendency was less the result of general than of local conditions. Warehouse deliveries are showing a slight improvement, reaching 21,602 bags on Wednesday, against 13,197 bags last year. The market for spot coffee was easy, with quotations on the basis of 8½c for Rio No. 7.

Mother-of-Pearl Held Dutiable at 35 Per Cent.—Other Decisions.

In a decision by T. S. Sharretts, the Board of United States General Appraisers yesterday denied claims filed by the Morris European and American Express Company, Limited, and held that mother-of-pearl slabs are properly dutiable at the rate of 35 per cent. Several claims were made by the importers, one being that the merchandise is entitled to free entry. All of the contentions are overruled and Collector Stranahan's classification upheld.

Gen. Sharretts also wrote a decision for the board sustaining a protest by the Hawaii and South Seas Curio Company and others of Honolulu. It was decided that Tasmanian shells strung on cotton cord cannot be considered "jewelry" with duty at the rate of 60 per cent. Instead the board finds the correct assessment to be 35 per cent.

Other importers' claims sustained by the customs tribunal were those of E. J. Arbib & Co., J. F. White & Co., A. L. Simon & Co., Lichtenstein Millinery Company, A. Klipstein & Co., New York, and C. Bell & Co., San Francisco.

The board overruled claims by F. W. Woolworth & Co., Louis Metzger & Co., Velt, Son & Co., La Manna, Azema & Farnan, the New York Commercial Company, Joseph F. Eastmond, G. W. Sheldon & Co., Alden S. Swan, the Stoltzenberg Company, Islor & Guye, Joseph Wild & Co., T. H. Grossmith, G. Rossano & Brother, New York, and the Forest City Kneipp Cure Sanitarium, Cleveland.

His stock, valued at $410, was seized by a City Marshal under an execution for $380 in favor of N. Natelson. Mr. Landau began business in 1901.

DUPLEX RADIATOR COMPANY.—Schedules in bankruptcy of the Duplex Radiator Company of 229 Broadway and Newton, N. J., show liabilities $14,416 and nominal assets $3,150, consisting of stock $300, machinery $500, both subject to a chattel mortgage of $2,750; office furniture and patterns $200, patents $2,000, accounts $50, cash on deposit in the New Jersey Chancery Court $100. Among the creditors are Garry P. Van Wye, the President, $7,150; Norman H. Thatcher, John Berryman, and Charles F. Linde $3,000; Norman H. Thatcher alone $2,850, and Charles F. Linde alone $1,900.

Appeal Turbine Model Case.

The action of the customs officials in exacting a heavy duty on miniature patterns of turbines for steamships has resulted in the Allis-Chalmers Company filing an appeal with the Board of United States General Appraisers. It is understood that the company imported the turbine patterns to use as models. Collector Stranahan held that the articles came within the meaning of the tariff provision for "manufactures of metal," and demanded duty at the rate of 45 per cent.

SPIRITS COME IN DROVES AND KISS THIS CLASS

No End of Materializations in Thirteenth Street Parlor.

LITTLE PANSY THE FAVORITE

She Passed Away Some Sixty Years Ago, but She Makes Speeches and Chirps Pleasingly.

Some twenty-five earthly beings, men and women, gathered in the long, dim parlor at 120 West Thirteenth Street last evening to commune with the spirits from the Great Beyond. It was the first "public materialization" seance of the First Church of Progressive Spiritualists. Filmy, ghost-like creatures, passed away from earth these hundred years or more, popped out of a black curtain in droves and called for their friends or descendants among the living.

After the spirits appeared there was a lot of kissing and embracing. Airy cerements covered the materialized spirits and nearly enfolded the real flesh-and-blood beings who were the subjects of the fond and clinging embraces. Three solid hours were occupied in the soul-satisfying meetings of the living and the "passed away."

Little Pansy was the star performer. She "passed away" some sixty years ago, but if her own account of it may be believed she is still very much alive. No sooner had the necessary total darkness enveloped the long parlor than Little Pansy flitted out from the black curtain.

"How are you, good friends?" she asked in a cheery, pipy voice. She was about four feet high.

"God bless you, Pansy dear! Very well, thank you, little Pansy. How are you to-night, darling?" was the sort of reply she got from the twenty-five or more substantial, matter-of-face-looking men and women who lined the walls.

Gray-haired women, serious young men with glasses, girls with blond hair and soulful eyes, middle-aged business men with the dry goods store or the lawyer's office in their manner hung on the words of Little Pansy as if they were the last words of wisdom ever to be heard on this earth. As she called each one by name he replied with an I-am-the-chosen-one fervor of appreciation and thankfulness. They laughed at her jokes—for Little Pansy was a good joker—as though all humor was to be wiped out of the world at 11 o'clock.

But at last Little Pansy retired behind the curtain, and the other spirits began to appear. There was no end to them. As fast as one had glided noiselessly forth and saluted the Rev. Hugh H. Moore, two or three more followed, and together they formed a galaxy of spirits in the crespuscular obscurity at the south end of the parlor. "Crespuscular" means "of a twilight nature," it was explained.

"Mrs. Bede," or "Mrs. Jones," or "Mrs. Smith" the pastor called out. Then some stout women went forward. There came to those at the north end the sound of kissing and sighs of delight. The men were favored just as often by the spirits, and embraced with just as much ardor.

"I have just been talking to my sister. She passed away fourteen years ago," calmly remarked a young man as he resumed his seat by THE TIMES reporter at the far end of the room from the spirits.

"Did you say she died fourteen years ago?" asked the reporter, innocent of his ill-choice of words.

"I said she passed away fourteen years ago," answered the young man, with gentle reproof in his voice. "She is still alive. Why, she just joshed me to beat the dickens," he added by way of emphasis. "They can josh a fellow just like you and I can."

There was a little green spot light which cast a very dim radiance on the white spirit-garments. Some unseen hand turned the light up and down as the occasion demanded—spirits are sensitive to light and can't stand much of it. Little Pansy's voice was heard every now and then, always pipy and cheery, first telling the faithful how to live on this earth and then advising the organist how to tap the keys.

There seemingly wasn't anything that Little Pansy didn't know. As the séance had begun with her, so it wound up with a little speech by her, in which she said that nobody had so much incentive to lead a good life as a spiritualist, because only a spiritualist fully realizes what the after life is.

Everybody who went in paid a dollar. Most of the crowd were members of the regular "materialization class," but there were two or three of the uninitiated. There is to be another séance to-night.

CURB BROKERS KEPT DODGING.

Steam Roller Made Them Skip Nimbly While Trading.

Almost under the feet of the curb brokers new asphalt pavement was laid in Broad Street yesterday. It was amusing to see a man trying to sell a hundred shares of Chicago Subway and dodge the huge street roller at the same moment.

The brokers were not discommoded, though, until just before the close of operations. When they go down town this morning a finished street surface, white and smooth, will be ready for them. The rope pen has been temporarily abandoned.

"KID" McCOY WEDS AGAIN.

His Bride is Mrs. Ellis, for Whom He Forsook the Prize Ring.

Norman Selby, otherwise "Kid" McCoy, the ex-pugilist, was married last evening to Lillian Estelle Earle Ellis, the young widow of Edward S. Ellis of the Schenectady locomotive building Ellises. From her husband she inherited a large fortune.

The wedding took place in a private parlor in the Algonquin Hotel at 6 o'clock. It had been expected for some months, but there were certain tangles in which a former wife of McCoy figured, which had to be straightened out first. The last obstacle was removed a few days ago. McCoy announced his engagement last May, when he formally forsook the prizering that he might devote his entire time to Mrs. Ellis and the study of poetry.

"I'm through with everything brutal," he said, when he had admitted that he was to wed again. "I'm enjoying myself as I never did before. When I'm not with my sweetheart I'm reading the best poets. My Chaucer, my Longfellow, and my Browning are never-ending sources of delight to me."

McCoy hinted then that he hoped some day to be a poet himself. As proof that he had made some progress in rhyming he recited this before the ceremony last night:

> Let dogs delight to growl and fight,
> But let men be above them.
> 'Tis better to have a gal for a pal
> Who really knows she loves him.

At the wedding the Rev. John L. Lee of the Westminster Presbyterian Church officiated. Bob Dunlop, proprietor of the Dunlop Hotel, was best man, and Mrs. Robert Burns was matron of honor. Others present were Mr. and Mrs. Homer Selby, Mr. and Mrs. Barry Regan, Mrs. Hickey, and Marguerite Mason. After the ceremony the bridal party dined at the Hotel Cumberland and later occupied a box at the Hudson Theatre.

McCoy left the box long enough to confirm the report of the wedding.

"It's true," he said. "We were married at 6 o'clock."

"Will you quit the ring?" he was asked.

"The ring I slipped on my wife's finger will be the last one I'll fool with."

McCoy met his bride three years ago, when he was proprietor of a sanitarium on Saratoga Lake. He had another wife then. "Ed" Ellis was one of his patients and Miss Earle was one of Ellis's friends. After Ellis left the sanitarium he married Miss Earle. About that time McCoy got a divorce from his wife, and sued a man named Thompson for $100,000 for alienation.

The fighter then won the affections of Miss Indianola Arnold, a showgirl in Lew Fields's "It Happened in Nordland." They soon separated, and their marriage was annulled in Providence last week.

WILL FIGHT FOR CANTEEN.

Mr. Proctor to Introduce a Bill Repealing Prohibitory Law.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—Another attempt will be made at the approaching session of Congress to bring about the repeal of the law of 1901 prohibiting the sale of beer at army post exchanges. Senator Proctor, who will be Chairman of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, will introduce a bill restoring the canteen.

Senator Proctor has been collecting data on the subject, and recently has received from the Surgeon General's office a statistical representation of the "curve of drunkenness" in the army, which shows clearly the effect of stopping the sale of beer at the posts. In 1899 and 1900, the two years just preceding the abolition of the beer-selling feature of the canteen, the admission to military hospitals of cases of alcoholism was but a fraction more than eighteen per thousand. In 1901 the admissions were nearly twenty-four a thousand, and last year nearly twenty-eight. The increase has been steady since the new law went into effect.

DON'T SHOOT, SAYS FULLER.

All's Fair in Politics, and Culkin Makes a Great Court Clerk.

There was a sort of "don't shoot" expression all day yesterday on the face of William Fuller, the former Chief Clerk of Special Sessions, who was reduced to a deputy clerkship that Leader Murphy of Tammany might get the higher job for Alderman Charles W. Culkin. Mr. Fuller seemed to be badly scared because Mr. Jerome at the Carnegie Hall meeting referred to Fuller as a much wronged man and to Culkin as chiefly qualified for his official post by having been a bartender. After several conferences with friends and well-wishers, Mr. Fuller issued a statement yesterday afternoon. The substance of it was:

> I never expected to be Chief Clerk all my life. The Republicans appointed me, and kept me for ten years in the place, and it was inevitable I should be removed sooner or later. Mr. Culkin is a fine man, and his selection for his present position has not caused the morals of the service to deteriorate one particle. I am amazed at the celerity with which he has mastered the details of the office.

At the time of Fuller's deposal it was understood that he would have been dropped entirely but for the outcry raised on his behalf by Mr. Jerome.

MORRILL SHOOTING SUSPECT.

Bridgeport Police Arrest a Man Recently Released from Jail.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., Oct. 19.—At the request of the Pinkerton Agency the Bridgeport police arrested yesterday Charles Fagan, who says he was released from the New Haven jail on Sept. 15 after a term which began June 8 for a variety of trivial charges. The Bridgeport police said to-night that the Pinkertons suspect him of being implicated in the shooting of Mrs. Antoinette C. Morrill, daughter of Edmund C. Converse of New York, which occurred while a burglary was being committed a few days before Fagan says he was released from jail.

Fagan professes ignorance of the whole affair, and denies ever having been in Greenwich.

E. C. Converse said that Fagan was one of several men the detectives were looking for. "I do not think it would be prudent for me to tell why Fagan is under suspicion," he added.

MAY BE LOCKED IN CAR.

Missing Boy Believed to be Imprisoned on Train Bound West.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 19.—Somewhere along the line of the Pennsylvania Railroad between this city and the Western grain fields is a box car in which, the police believe, eight-year-old Louis Dumback of 21 Beck Street is locked.

The lad left his home last Tuesday and was last seen hiding in the box car at New Swanson Street and Washington Avenue. The car was sealed and sent West for a load of grain, and it is believed that the lad went with it. If he did he will probably be dead when the car reaches its destination.

Louis has some chickens, and with two playmates went to the car to get some grain for the fowls. According to one of the boys, Leo Fisher of Swanson and Norfolk Streets, a railroad detective came along while Louis was inside the car. The lad said he saw the detective close the car and seal it, but that he was too frightened to tell what had happened.

FOOLED FISCHER-HANSEN.

Thief He Freed and Got Into a Job Robs His Employer.

Carl Fischer-Hansen volunteered last Friday as counsel for John H. Sluden, a young man from Alabama, who had pleaded guilty in General Sessions to a charge of stealing a pocketbook from a woman in Central Park. By promising to secure employment for the man, Hansen persuaded Judge Foster to suspend his sentence. Then the lawyer got a job for his protégé with Robert Cobban, a carpenter at 967 Columbus Avenue.

Yesterday Mr. Fischer-Hansen admitted mournfully that Sluden had disappeared with $17 of his employer's money and that the police were looking for him. If he is found, he will probably get a double sentence.

BLACK SHEEP, BROTHER SAYS,

And Advises the Jailing of Edward Brown, the Pistol Hold-Up Man.

In the Tombs Court yesterday was seen the rare spectacle of a man refusing to press a complaint against a prisoner while a brother of the prisoner was urging him to do so. Edward Brown was the prisoner. He is the man who forced his way last Wednesday into the office of Lawyer Wilberforce Sully at 20 Broadway and demanded money at the point of a loaded revolver.

Brown belongs to a good family. His brothers are Capt. A. W. Brown of the United States Army and Pierre Marshall Brown and Albert Winton Brown, both lawyers, with offices at 180 Broadway. When Mr. Sully told Magistrate Finn that he knew the young man's family well and that he would not make a complaint under any circumstances, Pierre M. Brown appealed to him on behalf of the family to change his mind. Mr. Brown said that his brother had always been the black sheep of the family and that there was reason, besides, to think him mentally deranged. Therefore Mr. Brown thought it would be best for all concerned to have the young man kept in custody.

"He has done so many things to blacken the name and annoy his family," Mr. Brown said, "that none of us cares whether he goes to jail or not."

Mr. Sully remained obdurate. The detectives then declared their intention to make a charge against Brown for carrying concealed weapons. Magistrate Finn held the young man for trial before Special Sessions on that charge, fixing the bail at $500.

One thing about the prisoner that impressed several of the elder men present in the courtroom was the remarkable resemblance he bears to the portraits of Guiteau, the murderer of President Garfield. Detective Sergeant Armstrong, who was one of the men that arrested Guiteau, was the first one to notice the likeness.

City Urged to Buy Mount Kisco Lands.

Mayor McClellan has received a letter from the City Club relative to a public hearing to be given to-day by the Board of Estimate in the matter of acquiring certain parcels of land at Mount Kisco, to prevent further pollution of the water supply of the city. The City Club in the letter puts itself on record as in favor of taking the property, and urges the Mayor to have the Board take immediate action.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Prominent Corner on Upper Broadway Bought for Improvement—Sale on Park Place—New Owners for Large Holdings in Bronx.

The plot at the southwest corner of Broadway and 116th Street, 100 by 100, has been sold by the Atlantic Realty to Jacob B. Shale, President of the Publishers' Press Association. A new corporation, to be known as the Manaton Company, will be organized within a few days, and will take title to the plot on Nov. 1. Mr. Shale, who will be President of the company, said yesterday that the property will be improved with either a nine-story or a twelve-story apartment house. This corner is one of the most attractive of the remaining vacant plots along upper Broadway. Not only is it at a Subway station, but the fact that the three other corners at this point are owned by Barnard College and Columbia University guarantees desirable surroundings for any new structure on this site, practically for all time.

TUCK JEROME'S NAME AWAY ON THE BALLOT

That's What the Bosses Would Have the Election Board Do.

AND MAYBE IT CAN BE DONE

Making the Name Hard to Find Would Suit Their Purpose—Law Allows Much Latitude.

The fight of the bosses against Jerome is to be carried into the Board of Elections. That is bi-partisan, John R. Voorhis and John Maguire, Democrats, and Charles B. Page and Michael J. Dady, Republicans, being its members. These four Commissioners will have the placing of all tickets entitled to a place on the ballot. The law compels the placing of party tickets in the order of their vote at the last preceding Gubernatorial election. With all other tickets, the Commissioners may do about as they please.

The leaders in both the big parties know the law relating to ballot places, and there is every indication that all the pressure they can command will be brought to bear upon the board to put Jerome's name in as inconspicuous a place as possible. The men who control in both Republican and Democratic organizations are very much in earnest about their opposition to Jerome, and the word has been passed to do "anything to put Jerome down and out." Making it hard for the voter to find the Jerome ticket on the ballot will help.

If the present plan is adhered to, the ballot to be used on Nov. 7 will be 24¼ by 14½ inches in size, and will contain ten columns. In Article IV., Section 81, of the election law, these words occur:

"All ballots shall be printed in black ink on clear, white book paper, free from ground wood, 500 sheets of which, 25x38 inches in size, shall weigh 60 pounds."

The Republican ticket will be in the first column, the Democratic ticket next, the Socialist ticket next, and the Prohibitionist ticket in the fourth column. Last year the Social Democratic Party, now the Socialist Party, polled 36,259 votes for Governor, and the Prohibitionists 20,-568. All other tickets on the ballot last year which contained the names of candidates for State offices polled fewer than 10,000 votes, and therefore, under the law, need not be recognized as a party organization when the ballot for 1906 is made up.

The Socialist-Labor Party, emblem of the arm and hammer, polled 8,976 votes last year for Governor. It will probably have the fifth column.

Many other questions, however, have not been decided yet. "Where will the Municipal Ownership ticket be placed?" "Where will Jerome be placed?" "Where will all the other independent candidates be placed?" become the chief questions for the Board of Elections to answer. It is improbable that a decision will be made before next week. Meanwhile the pile drivers of the organizations opposed to Jerome will be kept going against the Board of Elections. As the Municipal Ownership ticket will be long enough to occupy practically an entire column, there is not the interest in its placing among the Republican and Democratic bosses as there is in that of the Jerome ticket. That can be tucked away almost anywhere.

There will be one or more columns for "independent nominations." To be placed at the top of that column would be advantageous to Jerome; to be placed away down or perhaps in the middle of the second would be decidedly disadvantageous. Preceding the column marked "independent nominations," it is probable that the full Municipal Ownership ticket will be put. Although it is technically an independent ticket it will carry nominees for all offices and will get a column by itself.

The Greater New York Democracy has put up a ticket in Richmond, but the placing of it will in no way affect Jerome's place on the ballot, for of necessity the Richmond candidates of that organization and Jerome will not be on the same ballot.

There are several "independent nominations" for Alderman and Assemblyman in various districts. The ballots for such districts could be printed placing such "independent nominations" above that of Jerome. Regarding "independent nominations" the election law says:

In the case of "independent nominations" the ballot shall be so arranged that at the right of the last column for nominations designated as "party nominations" the several tickets of the names of the candidates independently nominated shall be printed in one or more columns, according to the space required, having above each of the tickets the political or other name selected to designate such independent nominations. * * * The independent tickets occupying the same column shall be separated from each other by a solid black line one-eighth of an inch wide. At the top of the column and above the first emblem in each of such columns, for independent nominations, shall be printed in type known as great primer Roman condensed capitals the words "independent nominations."

Under the law, the Board of Elections may group as many "independent" nominations as it pleases in one column or more. The placing of a black line one-eighth of an inch wide is the only provision to be observed for the separation of the independents.

ON THE JEROME TICKET.

Assemblyman Wainwright of Westchester Has That Honor.

Assemblyman Mayhew Wainwright, who is running for re-election in the Second District of Westchester County, which includes a part of the Bronx, has the distinction of being the only candidate in the whole of New York County whose name will appear on the ticket with Jerome.

Mr. Wainwright is a close personal friend of the District Attorney, and when the Canfield bill was up handled that measure for him in the Assembly. It is said that Mr. Jerome's consent for Mr. Wainwright's name to go on his ticket was because of his gratitude for the passage of this measure. Mr. Wainwright is the Republican nominee, and in order that his name could appear on the Jerome ticket he had to get 1,500 signatures to his petition.

PLEDGES BY CANDIDATE BELL.

He Says He'll Urge More Roads for the Bronx—His Tax Plan.

Hal Bell, Republican candidate for Borough President in the Bronx, opened his campaign last night with a speech before the Union Republican Club, Boston Road and 135th Street. Mr. Bell spoke of the issues in the Bronx. He said:

"I advocate the exemption from taxation of homes occupied by the owners to the extent of $3,000 on each home. Such loss of taxes could easily be met by stopping the waste of public money that now obtains in the prosecution of all public work under the present administration. Another method would be to tax the personal property in the State of non-residents, the same as the property of residents.

"I promise to assist in getting new lines of rapid transit between the borough and adjacent territory, and will insist upon the immediate commencement of determined and projected rapid transit lines, both subway and elevated, and the establishment of still additional rapid transit lines.

"I shall seek to compel the Union Railway to give proper service to the public and the elevated roads to give consideration to our citizens and their needs. I shall also strive for the erection of more public schools in the Bronx."

STIRS UP HAFFEN.

The Borough President Resents O'Gorman's Political Circular.

Coroner William O'Gorman of the Bronx, who is trying to wrest the Bronx Presidency from Haffen, issued a statement yesterday in which he charges an astounding system of the juggling of accounts in the Bronx. The statement goes on to say that the system is the most peculiar one disclosed "since the days of Tweed."

There is nothing in the statement to show direct fraud. Facts and figures are set forth at great length, dug out by an obviously expert accountant, to show that Peter is robbed to pay Paul.

"The system of bookkeeping followed in Haffen's department," the statement says, "if investigated by the Mayor's Commissioner of Accounts, would show that funds appropriated for other purposes are used to reduce the apparent cost of supervision of improvements. The system also discloses the intent or design by deceiving the taxpayer, for political reasons, into believing in the boasted economy of the administration under Mr. Haffen. Each year appropriations are obtained from the general tax fund purely to assist in this scheme or deception."

President Haffen said last night:

"This thing is ludicrous. The Commissioners of Accounts were in the Borough Hall for several months during the Strong administration, and again under Low. They found the affairs in an absolutely correct condition.

"I cannot understand why any man who has any evidence tending to show that my office is not honestly administered, does not lay the facts before the proper tribunal.

"I shall hold any man responsible for statements made regarding the honesty of my office or my administration of it."

HEARD IN THE CAMPAIGN.

Lingual Troubles of Candidate Gass—Hearst Interviews—A Jury Poll.

At Tammany Hall yesterday somebody told Alderman Frank Gass, the nominee for Register, that he had not been quite correct in speaking of the Mayor as "der great statesman, Charles P. McClellan."

"Mine Gott!" exclaimed the Alderman, "did I say dot? Vy, I got der mix up mit mine Mayor and mine old Senator. Mine Gott!"

Mr. Gass comes from Unionport, in the Bronx, which is in the Westchester Senate district, once represented by Senator Charles P. McClelland, Republican, just now in the insurance limelight.

***

A reporter for a Brooklyn newspaper asked William R. Hearst yesterday for an interview on a certain subject. Mr. Hearst declined to give the interview exclusively, but said he would be glad to give it to all the Brooklyn newspapers.

"Don't you want it?" Mr. Hearst asked a Standard-Union reporter.

"My office wants all the interviews it can get with you," replied the reporter, "and we shall be glad to print them—at regular advertising rates."

***

The heat and fervor of the campaign have found their way into the juryroom. On Tuesday twelve good men and true were sitting in judgment in a damage suit. The plaintiff had fallen from a car and injured his ear drums. He sued for $2,000. There was a wide difference of opinion as to the size of the damages which should be awarded. One juror wanted to give $2,000, another $250, the amount of his doctor's bill. An agreement seemed beyond the realm of possibility.

"Oh, well, let's take a straw vote on the election," suggested one of the jurors.

The suggestion was adopted. It resulted in seven ballots for McClellan, four for Hearst, and one for Ivins.

Then the jurors got down to business again, and awarded the plaintiff $500 damages.

LAWYERS SUE FOR $50,000.

Coudert Brothers Attach the Philippine Sugar Estates Development Co.

Justice McCall in the Supreme Court issued an attachment yesterday against the property in this State of the Philippine Sugar Estates Development Company, Limited, in an action to recover $50,000 for legal services brought by the law firm of Coudert Brothers. The affairs of the sugar company were the subject of an investigation by a Congressional committee, and the plaintiffs were employed to defend the company's rights in the Philippines. The United States Government had refused to recognize the company's right to dispose of certain real estate in the Philippines, but finally did so, and purchased the company's holdings for $3,671,657.

Coudert Brothers, who acted as counsel for the sugar company in the fight, contend that they were not paid for their legal services, and got out the attachment yesterday in the suit they brought to recover their fee, which they say was to be $100,000 in Mexican money.

Bishop Arnett of A. M. E. Church Ill.

Bishop Benjamin W. Arnett of the New York Diocese of the African Methodist Episcopal Church is critically ill at his home, at Wilberforce University, in Ohio. MRS. HOADLEY ROBBED BY A JEWEL THIEF

Gems Worth $10,000 Taken from Her Room in the Buckingham.

WAITER AND BOY ARRESTED

The Robber Worked While Mr. Leiter's Associate and His Wife Were at the Theatre.

The apartments of George W. Hoadley in the Hotel Buckingham were entered on Tuesday night and Mrs. Hoadley's jewels, valued at $10,000, were stolen. The robbery was made known yesterday morning when Detective Sergeants Oppenheim and Collins arrested John York, a waiter employed in the Buckingham, and Albert Schultz, a bellboy. Schultz worked there until about a week ago.

Mr. Hoadley is associated in business with his brother, Joseph H. Hoadley, and Joseph Leiter of Chicago. His apartments are on the sixth floor of the hotel. On Tuesday night Mr. and Mrs. Hoadley went to the theatre. Soon after they returned Mrs. Hoadley missed her jewels. The rooms had been thoroughly ransacked.

The detectives were sure that the door had been opened with a pass key. On Wednesday the detectives ascertained that Albert Schultz, a bellboy, who had been dismissed about a week before the robbery, had been seen about the hotel on several occasions. He was wearing a false mustache, and was in communication with York. On the night of the robbery he was seen coming from the sixth floor.

Yesterday morning the detectives made an early visit to York's room. They found Schultz there and arrested both men. The prisoners protested that they had done nothing wrong. They had but little money and no pawntickets. In the Yorkville Court yesterday afternoon Magistrate Walsh, at the request of the detectives, remanded the prisoners until this morning. They are held as suspicious persons.

The detectives say that Schultz was arrested on Feb. 19 with two other bellboys in the Gallatin Hotel and charged with stealing jewelry from guests. The other two bellboys were sent to Elmira. Schultz was released for lack of evidence.

This is a partial list of the jewels stolen:

String of fifty-seven pearls, value $3,000.
Dog collar, set with pearls and diamonds, $300.
Crescent pin of pearls and diamonds, $800.
Ring with two pearls and a diamond, $600.
Black pearl ring, with small diamond, $150.
Topaz ring, $50.
Ring with pearl and two diamonds, $150.
Marquise diamond ring, $700.
Brooch with pearl drop, $35.
String of gold beads, $35.
Gold buckle fob, $50.
Three pearl studs, $25.
Pearl scarfpin, in the form of an eagle, with diamond eyes, $200.
Gold chain necklace, $35.
Gold pin, $60.
Gold stickpin, $25.
Scarfpin, $50.
Guard ring, $50.
Gold watch, $125.

THREE DAYLIGHT BURGLARIES.

Thieves Get $7,000 Worth of Jewels Near Fifty-third St. and Fifth Av.

Detectives from Central Office and the East Fifty-third Street Police Station were kept busy last night trying to find burglars who looted three houses in the neighborhood of Fifth Avenue and Fifty-third Street yesterday, taking jewelry and other valuables amounting to about $7,000.

The police got wind of the workings of the gang when Mrs. Simon Herman of 40 West Fifty-second Street notified them that her home had been robbed. Mrs. Herman with her mother and sister were on the first floor of their home at luncheon about 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon when a noise was heard on the floor above. Mrs. Herman ran into the hall and saw two men rapidly disappearing upstairs to the top floor.

Mrs. Herman screamed "Burglars!" and "Help!" at the top of her voice. The maids downstairs heard Mrs. Herman's cry and they also began to scream. Nobody, however, ran for assistance. In the meantime the burglars were running to the roof, and as Mrs. Herman saw them disappear she ran to the front door, down the steps and to Fifth Avenue, where she saw a mounted policeman. He called four other patrolmen and they went to the house on a run, but by the time they had arrived the burglars had escaped.

An investigation showed that they had entered the house by the skylight and had left it by way of the scuttle, which had been opened on the inside. The policemen scoured the adjoining roofs, but failed to find the men. A ladder was found upon the roof.

An examination of the premises showed that the burglars had ransacked the third and fourth floors of the house and had turned things upside down generally, even taking the beds apart in the search for plunder. The loss included a Swiss watch valued at $1,500, a gold antique chain, a pocketbook with $25, a pair of pearl and gold opera glasses, half a dozen stickpins, and several rings, in all valued at $5,000. The Herman home is two blocks from the Buckingham, where the Hoadley robbery occurred.

While the police of the Fifty-third Street Station were hunting for the burglars who had plundered Mrs. Herman's house, they were notified by Peter Johnstone of 118 East Fifty-third Street that his apartments on the fifth floor of the house at that number had been entered in a similar manner, turned topsy-turvy, and relieved of three gold watches, one gold scarfpin, a horseshoe pin, with pearls, one pearl scarfpin, and an opal ring, in all valued at $1,000.

Then came a complaint from Thomas Brown of 120 East Fifty-third Street, who said that while he had been absent from his apartments thieves had entered through the scuttle, ransacked the place, and stolen one diamond star pin, one diamond ring, one gold locket and chain, one gold bar pin, one gold brooch with seven pearls, one plain gold scarfpin, and a gold watch, in all valued at $1,800.

Ambler Law Holds, Delany Says.

Corporation Counsel Delany informed Police Commissioner McAdoo yesterday that the police can legally go ahead and make arrests for violations of the Ambler excise law, regardless of proceedings attacking the constitutionality of the law. The law, Mr. Delany said, is in effect until it is repealed. Mr. McAdoo ordered the police to make an arrest in case of every violation.

GETS A COURT ORDER TO LET HIM PARADE

Old Guardsman's Fight to Celebrate Yorktown Day.

MAJOR BRIGGS BARRED HIM

The Commandant Restrained by Justice McCall's Order—Outcome of a Factional Row.

The victory which practically ended the American Revolution on Oct. 19, 1781, the surrender of Yorktown by Lord Cornwallis, was celebrated yesterday by the Old Guard of the City of New York, but while the members were thinking about it as they marched proudly through Fifth Avenue, there was one man, Private James O'Neill, who, as he marched in line, felt as proud as Gen. Washington did 124 years ago.

The reason was that O'Neill won a legal battle yesterday in the Supreme Court. The commandant of the Old Guard, Major S. Ellis Briggs, had issued an official order to the effect that Private O'Neill must not parade, but O'Neill vowed he would parade, and while he was shining up the buttons on his lace-trimmed uniform, preparing to wage war upon Major Briggs, his attorney, Paul Armitage, was fortifying himself with legal papers in his office at 280 Broadway.

The row had been on in the Old Guard for months. Major Briggs was reported as having declared his intention of resigning, he had come out with a statement that he would not resign, and the opposition forces about the sametime appeared with a candidate for Major Briggs's place as commander of the Guard. Then came the report that Major Briggs would not permit any "revolutionist" to parade on Yorktown day. They declared they would turn out in spite of such talk. O'Neill's name was mentioned as one of the men who would be shut out of the parade.

Early yesterday morning O'Neill received a mysterious looking envelope. Upon tearing it apart he almost exploded with rage, for he found the following order:

Old Guard of the City of New York, Armory Building, Broadway and 49th Street, New York, Oct. 16, 1905.

SPECIAL ORDER NO. 6.

In compliance with Article VI. of the constitution and by-laws the following members are hereby placed upon the roll of associate members for continuous neglect of duty:

E. FELLOWS JENKINS, who has not paraded in a year.
JAMES O'NEILL, who has made but one parade in two years.
W. D. MANN, (Col. Mann,) who has made but one parade in six years.
CHARLES A. STADLER, who has made but one parade in four years.

Associate members cannot parade and are not eligible for election to any military office.

By order of Major S. ELLIS BRIGGS.

"Ha!" shouted O'Neill. "Here is Capt. Stadler mentioned, and Capt. Stadler is the opponent of Major Briggs for command of the Old Guard."

O'Neill decided then and there that he would march in the parade in spite of everything. He hurried to his lawyer's office. The lawyer drew up an affidavit setting forth that it was false that O'Neill made only one Old Guard parade in two years, adding that he had paraded fully equipped with said Old Guard, pursuant to orders regularly issued by the commandant of the Old Guard, on May 10, 1904, and on Jan. 26, 1905.

Unless the writ of prohibition was issued his counsel told Justice McCall that O'Neill would be deprived of the pleasure of parading, and then the board of officers would have a chance to put him on the "disabled list," or, in other words, on the list of associate members, and he never could appear in uniform at another Old Guard ball.

After reading the affidavit, Justice McCall signed an order "commanding and directing the said S. Ellis Briggs, said officers, and other persons acting under orders by virtue of his authority, command, and order, and each of them, to desist and refrain from any act or proceeding to deprive said James O'Neill from exercising any and all rights as a full member of the Old Guard, and particularly from preventing him from parading with the said Old Guard on Oct. 19, 1905, until the hearing before this court under this order returnable on the 2d day of November, at 10:30 o'clock in the morning."

It was exactly 11:28 o'clock yesterday when Lawyer Armitage got the order signed, and at 11:24 he was telephoning the news to O'Neill. The latter was in the armory adjusting the last button of his dress uniform coat when he got the news.

He was soon reinforced by a battalion of Major Briggs's opponents, who had gathered at the armory to celebrate the anniversary of the surrender of Cornwallis, and they went forth and paraded.

DRAMA IN A DIAMOND SHOP.

Detectives Play Button, Button, and the Necklace Turns Up.

One of the young women in the diamond cutting and polishing works of William Sheer at 542 Fifth Avenue, reported yesterday morning soon after she went to work that a diamond necklace, valued at $3,000, which she had been repairing on the previous day, was missing.

At once the whole force of workers became anxious. Mr. Sheer ordered the doors of his shops closed, and sent to the police to notify them of his loss. To make sure that the robbery should be attended to, he also called in the aid of Pinkertons.

Before 10 o'clock the establishment swarmed with detectives, who put the employes through a severe examination and searched in every nook and cranny of the workrooms, but no trace of the missing jewels could be found. The zeal displayed by the rival detectives in searching keyholes and cracks in the floor and walls for the necklace gave the onlookers the impression that the crime sleuths must have studied the robbery of the diamond ring committed by the famous Jackdaw of Rheims.

"The detectives were still searching at a quarter after twelve," said Mr. Sheer, "when the young woman who had reported the loss of the diamonds walked into my office and said, 'I have found the necklace, Mr. Sheer, in my pocketbook, where I must have placed it in mistake for my rings.' The girl said that she was in the habit of wrapping up her rings in a piece of tissue paper and putting them in a drawer until she went home. In her hurry on Wednesday night she took the wrong package. This morning when she came to work and could not find the diamonds the girl thought that they had been stolen. When she took out her purse to pay for her luncheon, she opened the package and found the necklace. The police wished me to charge her with the robbery, but I refused, because I believe that it was a mistake. If the girl had wanted to steal the diamonds she would not have brought them back."

BOTH OPPOSE PRENTICE.

Republicans and Democrats Remember His Stand on Mortgage Tax Bill.

One of the liveliest Assembly contests in Greater New York is in progress in the Twenty-fifth District, where Assemblyman Ezra Prentice is being opposed by Democrats and Republicans alike because of his stand in the last Legislature in favor of the Mortgage Tax bill.

Tammany has nominated to oppose him Augustus T. Docharty, once Register of the county and Secretary of the Dock Department under the old board. This is the hotel district, including the Fifth Avenue Hotel, Hoffman House, Waldorf-Astoria, and Holland House in its boundaries. There has been a heavy falling off in the registration there, and the vote will be fully 1,000 below the figures of 1904, and nearly 1,800 below last year. This loss works to the disadvantage of the Republican candidate, as the Tammany vote is almost entirely on the rolls. Many stock brokers live in the Twenty-fifth, and they are opposing Prentice also, because he stood for the passage of the stock transfer tax law.

POOR JOHNNY AHEARN, SAYS JEROME, REPLYING

Was Driven to Suppress the Facts by "That Cruel Hand."

MURPHY SAID, "YOU MUST"

Jerome's Version of the Ahearn Interview—Slip of Paper Settled the Convention, He Says.

More than 2,000 persons crowded into Zeltner's Morrisania Hall in the Bronx last night to hear District Attorney Jerome's promised reply to Charles Murphy's proofs that he had sent an emissary to negotiate for the Tammany Hall nomination, and to the statement made by John Ahearn at Tammany Hall.

Mr. Jerome gave his version of what happened between himself and "little Johnny Ahearn" and made fun of J. Sergeant Cram, in a Tuxedo coat, trying to choke Mr. Murphy off from further statements. And every now and then the audience put in as a refrain:

"Where did he get it?"

Mr. Jerome's speech was as follows:

"It was only such a little question, so few words in it—'Where did you get it?' [Laughter and applause.] Where came the automobile from? Did somebody send it to you in a registered letter? Only such a little question. And it calls forth a column in the newspaper from the great pantata of them all.

"Now, I said I would answer the gentleman from Good Ground this evening. The only trouble is you won't be able to keep him talking. It will be like Devery in the last campaign. They will fall on him and suppress him after to-night; he won't say anything more. And now I will read these charges against myself and have a word to say about them, and submit it to an American audience to say what it thinks about them. I read that the great one of Good Ground says: 'Jerome sent a confidential man to me on two or three occasions in his own behalf.' I find that the confidential man, one John Ahearn, says: 'I took upon myself to ask him if he would accept the nomination of District Attorney at the hands of Tammany Hall.'

"My gracious! Were there an indictment in the criminal courts and there was such a variance between allegation and proof we would throw that indictment out. [Laughter and applause.] He goes on and says that he will produce the proof. My reply was that I never sent any one to him, but that I would not say that he had not sent any one to me. He says that on two or three occasions some one came to Good Ground. Who? Ahearn is only one person; who are the others? Why not remove the seal of secrecy? I will respect his confidence; I will not tell what the man said to me nor what I said to him, but will he take that lid off, as he did some others? [Laughter and applause.]

"Let him name these other two or three that came to Good Ground, and what they said. Let him name these confidential agents that he said came from me, and what I said to them. Oh, I should like that nice little story to be told. Let him talk some more, if J. Sergeant Cram will let him. [Laughter.] You do not understand the politics of this town. After you get a place in the country, and an automobile, and a liveried chauffeur, you have got to have your man's man—you have got to have somebody who does the Tuxedo act, stands back of you and guides you in the genteel amenities of life. And J. Seargeant Cram won't let him talk. Believe me, you won't get any more from him. He will cork him so tight that he will almost choke.

"But let me say that there is not a single word of truth that I ever sent a man to him—let any one assert to the contrary. [Voices: "We never thought so."] Let me say to you that when he says I even agreed to join the Tammany Hall General Committee, he told that which was not true. I never did.

"But, mind you, I should have no shame in joining the Tammany Hall General Committee. There is no man whose memory I reverence and love more than that of my father. He was a member of that committee. I believe in organization, but I don't believe in despotism. [Applause.]

"But when it is played up against me that I agreed to do this—I don't like to use the word 'lie'—there is no good in being harsh. But I will say that the statement is not true. [Applause.] No man ever got a pledge out of me for anything, or anything approaching the promise of a pledge.

"Then he goes on—why, it always seems to me that he is very sensitive about this mention of Good Ground. Here I am, nothing but a miserable District Attorney running for a county office, and yet because I say, 'Where did you get it?' the leader of Tammany Hall gets out in this attack, and if I have to characterize it, I say mendacious attack.

"Now, when he is told he must give the proof, what is his proof? That is a tough proposition, and that is why I wanted there should be a good many Irishmen here to-night. [Cry of "They are here!"] Johnnie Ahearn is a decent little fellow, and Johnnie Ahearn for a good many years has been my friend, and you know it is tough to see a decent little fellow have the screws put to him by that fellow until he can stand it no more but had to go to the front. [Applause.]

Tells What Ahearn Said.

"Now, let me tell you what did happen at this first alleged interview when Ahearn says he took it upon himself to ask me if I would accept a Tammany Hall nomination for District Attorney. Some months ago Ahearn came to the office. I have always been glad to see him. I am glad to see him now. He hasn't done the square thing, and he hasn't done altogether the truthful thing; he steered

DEVERY CLUB FOR M'CLELLAN.

Also for Jerome—Ex-Chief Checks a Stampede to Hearst.

William S. Devery attended a meeting of the William S. Devery Association last night at Eighth Avenue and Twenty-eighth Street, nipped an attempt to stampede for Hearst the 300 members present, and finally persuaded everybody except a few dissenting truckmen and longshoremen to indorse the Democratic ticket with two exceptions. He substituted Jerome for Osborne and indorsed William E. Ryan, the Municipal League candidate for the Assembly in the Ninth Assembly District.

Mr. Devery's speech was characteristic. He waited until several of the speakers present had made speeches for Mr. Hearst, and smiled as the members shouted for the candidate of the Municipal League. Then he took the floor.

"Now I know very well how you men feel," said Mr. Devery. "You ain't the only ones in this town that's deluded. You think Hearst is another Henry George. But you take it from me that he's the biggest fakir that ever came down the pike. Henry George was a man, a real man. But this fellow Hearst is to the bad.

"What's more, I want this organization to get on a winner. We've been on a dead one long enough. Tammany Hall's goin' to be in power for four years, and that's a long time to be out in the cold. To get anything you've got to be reg'lar. You've got to get in right.

"Last year we followed Hearst and gave him the biggest majority any candidate for Congress ever pulled out of this district. What he didn't do for the district in Congress was good and plenty. He did the district dirt. He appointed two candidates for Annapolis and West Point, and what were they? Fifth Avenue dudes—that's what they were! Did he come over to Tenth Avenue and take two boys—the sons of some poor longshoreman or policeman? Not on your life. Hearst le a fakir.

"Don't get the notion that this man Hearst is a friend of the workingman. Fergit it! He's just a political fakir and can't be trusted. You've got to stick together and get on a winner, boys. Who can tell what may happen to me, and when I'm gone—

"Aw, Chief, you ain't agoin' to die," shouted a husky 'longshoreman.

"That's all right," responded Mr. Devery, "I appreciate that, but you'll want somebody to do something for you. So I say let's get on a winner, and McClellan's the winner this time."

Ambrose W. Becker, the Chairman, called for a vote then, and there was a thunderous chorus of "Ayes" for indorsement of the Tammany ticket.

"We ain't stuck on McClellan, but we're with the Chief through thick and thin," said one member afterward.

RUSSIAN RAILWAY STRIKE.

Traffic on Some Lines Stopped—Police to Fire to Kill.

MOSCOW, Oct. 20.—The union of railway employes has issued a call for a general strike.

The employes of the Moscow and Kazan Railroad struck work to-day and traffic on the road is interrupted.

The strikers later induced a stoppage of work on the Yaroslav and Archangel Railroad. They attempted to hold a meeting in the streets, but were dispersed by Cossacks and police.

The engineers on the Moscow and St. Petersburg Railroad struck to-night.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 20.—The Governor of Odessa to-day issued an order to the police instructing them that in the event of disturbances they are to fire directly into the mobs without any preliminary volleys in the air.

This order, it is expected, will have a deterrent effect on proposed gatherings for the purpose of disorder.

A meeting of members of the revolutionary party, held in a Jewish school at Minsk yesterday for the purpose of discussing candidates for the National Assembly, was dispersed by Cossacks and police. Workmen, in retaliation, attacked the Cossacks with sticks and in the conflict a hundred persons were slightly, and twenty severely, injured. Demonstrations in the streets of Minsk continue.

FEW NEW FEVER CASES.

Only 98 Persons Remain Under Treatment in New Orleans.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 20.—Four new cases of yellow fever were reported here to-day. Ninety-eight cases are under treatment.

For the third day in succession no deaths have been recorded. A cool spell began here this afternoon, but as yet there are no indications of frost.

In taking the new cases in groups of five days one is able to see how much progress has been made in eradicating the fever. The highest number for five days was in the period ended Aug. 16, when there were 338 cases. The figures have steadily declined until for the five days ended to-day there were only 38 cases and 4 deaths. On Oct. 20, 1878, there were 42 deaths.

Six new cases were reported in Natchez, Miss., yesterday, and one to-day. At Vicksburg there were eight new cases yesteray an one to-ay. There was one death at Hamburg yesterday.

PENSACOLA, Fla., Oct. 20.—Five new cases of yellow fever and two deaths were reported in the twenty-four hours ending at noon to-day.

Woman Pastor Installed.

PASSAIC, Oct. 20.—The Rev. Elizabeth Padgham was formally installed last night as pastor of the Unitarian Church of Our Father at Rutherford. She is a native of Syracuse, N. Y., and was graduated from Smith College in 1898. Later she entered the Theological Seminary at Meadville. She was subsequently called to Unity Church at Perry, Iowa.

CABINET MEMBERS TALK DESPITE LOEB LETTER

Taft Going to Canal to See Where the Money Has Gone, He Says.

WILL MAKE FACTS PUBLIC

He Promises a Statement on Return—Bonaparte, Ignoring Edict, Discusses Civil Service Order.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—Two Cabinet officers—Secretary Taft of the War Department and Secretary Bonaparte of the Navy—violated to-day the injunction of President Roosevelt, conveyed in the now famous Loeb letter, not to discuss Administration policies with newspaper men.

When Secretary Taft received press correspondents this afternoon, for the first time in several days, he proceeeded to talk without hesitation of the Panama Canal as if he did not consider that a matter under the han of secrecy. Mr. Taft had kept himself in seclusion for several days, preparing his Ohio speech. He left here to-night for Akron, where he is to make a political address to-morrow night. He will return on Monday.

The Secretary said he would go to Norfolk by boat next week Friday, and on Saturday morning board the cruiser Columbia in Hampton Roads and go on to Colon, where he expected to arrive on Nov. 2. Col. Edwards of the Insular Bureau, Gen. John P. Story, retired, President of the Fortifications Board; Col. Black of the Engineers, Major George Thales, Recorder of the Fortifications Board, and W. W. Mischler, Secretary Taft's stenographer, will comprise the party.

Secretary Taft said he would take quarters on shore and see all there was to see along the canal zone. After a week on the Isthmus, the party will sail for home on Nov. 9.

The purpose in going to Panama, Mr. Taft said, was, first, to see what actually had been done since he was there a year ago. He also intended to know just where the money had gone that had been expended for canal account. He desired to be able, when he returned, to tell the public precisely the status of work on the canal.

After seeing just what had been done and the difficulties in the way of active construction, he said, he hoped to be able to deal with administrative questions concerning the canal effectively and satisfactorily, as well from the standpoint of the engineer as that of the business man.

Mr. Bonaparte commented on the President's order amending the Civil Service rules as follows:

"In my department I do not expect that the practical effect of the change in the rules will be at all serious. You can say most positively that I will not allow political reasons to enter in any way in the matter either of appointments or removals from the service."

Mr. Bonaparte takes the view expressed by other Cabinet officers who have discussed the Civil Service order, but in deference to the Loeb letter have requested that their names be not used. Several members of the Cabinet seem to be chafing under the restrictions imposed by the Loeb letter. One had suggested at a Cabinet meeting that all matters discussed at such meetings be given to the press. His suggestion had been taken under consideration since he had received no intimation of any objection until the Loeb letter came.

Other persons, however, take a humorous view of the letter. A well-known railroad man for six months has been sending to the Washington correspondents elaborately prepared literature in opposition to the Administration's railroad rate policy. The press correspondents to-day received from him the following, marked "Confidential":

"My Dear Sir: There is no truth in the rumor that this office will stop sending you arguments against rate legislation and give them exclusively to the press associations."

SHIPPERS HAVE NO CHOICE.

Must Ship by Armour Refrigerators on Atlantic Coast Line.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—The existence of exclusive contracts between railroads and private car lines, by which the latter assume the business of refrigerating perishable freight, was brought out to-day in the hearings before the Inter-State Commerce Commission.

It was developed by the testimony of H. M. Emerson, traffic manager of the Atlantic Coast Line, that the shippers would be compelled under the contract with the Armour Car Lines to use cars of this company exclusively, or the railroad would not transport their freight. At the same time, he said, the schedules of the road would permit the use of other private cars. The apparent inconsistency is a matter that the legal department of the road would have to solve if brought into the controversy.

LEAGUE TO ROB STORES.

Lawyer Says Salesmen and Saleswomen Conspire—Four Plead Guilty.

Three saleswomen and one salesman, formerly employed by a Fourteenth Street dry goods store, pleaded guilty in Special Sessions Court yesterday to petit larceny and were remanded for sentence on Oct. 25. The prisoners were Maggie Gorman of 32 King Street, Carrie Carroll of Brooklyn, Laura O'Keefe of 1,312 Washington Street, Hoboken, and Daniel J. Delaney of 536 Washington Street, Hoboken.

Lawyer George Gordon Battle, who assisted in the prosecution, said that this firm had lost hundreds if not thousands of dollars through the petty stealing of its clerks. There seemed to be a league of saleswomen and salesmen employed in the big stores, said Mr. Battle, to rob their employers.

ROUT POLICE WITH AMMONIA.

Walsh Besieges a Harlem Poolroom Instead of Raiding It.

Police Inspector Walsh resorted to new tactics yesterday in making trouble for a poolroom in East 107th Street. Instead of raiding it he put ten of his men in front of the place. A state of siege was established, and no one was allowed to enter.

Harry Jacobs, one of the alleged proprietors, went to the Harlem Court and asked for a warrant for Inspector Walsh, charging him with interfering with the cigar store business on the ground floor. Magistrate Barlow refused the warrant, saying he could do nothing as long as Inspector Walsh was not violating the law.

After failing to drive the police away by court proceedings, the cigar store managers adopted more strenuous measures. Four large bottles of ammonia were broken. The fumes drove the police from the store into the street. The occupants said that when the fumes of this ammonia died away they would break more bottles.

SUBWAY STATIONS DARK.

Only a Few and for a Few Minutes Only—Cable Wire Had Burned Out.

The main cable which supplies electric light to all stations on the Lenox Avenue line of the Subway and the main line stations between Ninety-sixth and Seventy-second Streets burned out.

For a few minutes until the emergency lights could be turned on there was total darkness in the stations. Then the four emergency lights, supplied by current from the third rail, relieved the gloom at each of the darkened stations.

A gang of men was put to work at once to find the trouble, and just before midnight it was found that the cable had burned through in the Harlem River tunnel, near Mott Avenue. The work of repair was immediately begun, but at midnight the cable was still out of commission.

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 20.—The Bullock Electric Company of Cincinnati has been absorbed by the Allis-Chalmers Company of Milwaukee, and the General Electric Company has purchased the majority of the Allis-Chalmers common stock. According to reports here, E. C. Converse of Pittsburg, as a result of the deal, has been made a Director in all three companies.

Only a few weeks ago the capital stock of the Bullock Company was increased to $3,000,000 to enlarge the plants. The Allis-Chalmers Company, a rival of the General Electric, leased the Bullock Company in March, 1904. The price at which the General Electric obtained control, it is reported, was $25 a share common stock.

SHOTS IN BROADWAY CHASE.

Policeman Fires Twice and Catches Two Alleged Pickpockets.

A hundred persons on Broadway between Thirty-sixth and Thirty-seventh Streets applauded a policeman who was chasing two young men up the street about midnight last night.

"Catch 'em, old man. Give it to 'em!" cried the loungers. They were enjoying themselves thoroughly, when, suddenly, the policeman drew his revolver.

"Look out," was the cry; "he's going to shoot." The crowd disappeared as if by magic. Left with a free field, Patrolman Murphy leveled his pistol at the two figures in front of him and fired twice. The men stopped and surrendered.

Murphy says he saw the two men and one other picking pockets in a Sixth Avenue car. When he gave the alarm they crawled out of an open window. Murphy ran out of the rear door. The pickpockets ran down Sixth Avenue, and at Thirty-sixth Street turned into Broadway and started north. One of the men escaped. It was then that the crowd saw the chase. The prisoners said they were James Kearn of 212 East Thirteenth Street and George Smith of 315 West Forty-fourth Street.

SHIPS AND LIVES LOST ON THE GREAT LAKES

Fierce Storm Hurls Eleven Vessels to Destruction.

AT LEAST 12 PERSONS DEAD

Schooner and Barge Go Down with All Hands—Another Crew Also May Have Perished.

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—A storm which last night and to-day swept over northern Lake Michigan, Lake Huron, and Lake Erie, was one of the most severe in recent years.

As far as returns are obtainable to-night eleven vessels have been completely wrecked and twelve to fifteen others more or less severely damaged. Twelve lives are known to have been lost, and as the gale on southern Lake Huron and Lake Erie is still blowing fiercely to-night it is feared that other losses of life and property will be reported within the next twenty-four hours.

Among the vessels lost were the steamer Jossph S. Fay, which went ashore near Rogers City, Mich., and was broken to pieces by the waves, Mate Joseph Syze being drowned; the schooner Minnedosa, which foundered two and one-half miles off Harbor Beach in Lake Huron, carrying down the entire crew of eight men; a schooner, supposed to be either the Tasmania or Aahland of the Corrigan fleet, which sunk two and one-half miles southwest of the Southeast Shoal Lightship on Lake Erie, and carried a crew of eight men, of whom nothing is known, and the barge Minnedosa, which was lost with all hands.

The Minnedosa was coming down from Fort William, Canada, bound for some Lake Ontario port with a cargo of wheat. She was in tow of the steamer West Mount, which was also towing the barge Melrose. The tow lines broke and the Melrose and West Mount were separated from the Minnedosa. They managed to make harbor at Harbor Beach late in the afternoon and reported that they had seen the Minnedosa go down. She was in command of Capt. Phillips, who had his wife aboard. The names of the other members of the crew are not known.

The schooner Mauntenee struck a rock eighteen miles west of Erie, Penn., early this morning and, pounded by the terrific seas, commenced breaking up. The waves were so high that it was impossible to launch the lifeboat, and one of the seamen whose name is unknown, performed the feat of swimming ashore with a line. A breeches buoy was soon rigged up and the entire crew together with the cook, Mrs. Kate Daly, was brought safely to shore. The boat was without cargo and was bound from Buffalo to Detroit.

The gale on Lake Michigan was the worst this year. The boats around Chicago were comparatively safe as the gale was off shore. The east shore of Lake Michigan suffered severely. Wharf property was swept away at St. Joseph, South Haven, Holland, Grand Haven, and Muskegon. The total damage is $50,000. Much Summer resort property along the west shore of Lake Michigan was damaged.

The storm did not work as much havoc on Lake Superior as on the lower lakes, but two accidents occurred at Grand Marais, Mich., where the steamer Barth, towing the schooners Nirvana and Galatea, endeavored to make the port for shelter. Both schooners missed the entrance and drifted westward in the lake. The Nirvana went down about a half mile off shore and her crew of seven men was rescued by the life saving crew. The Galatea went ashore, but is resting on sand and will probably weather the storm. Her crew of seven men was also taken off.

WOMAN GRABS HIGHWAYMAN.

Uses Jiu-Jitsu to Capture Negro Who Tries to Rob Her.

While inspecting the books in a friend's library six months ago Miss Mary Steckler of 161 West Sixty-third Street saw a work treating of the Japanese art of self-defense, jiu jitsu. Miss Steckler read the book carefully, and practiced some of the grips and holds described. Last night Miss Steckler had an opportunity to test what she had learned, and she afterward told the police of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station that she thought every woman should learn jiu-jitsu.

Miss Steckler was walking in Central Park West near Sixty-third Street about 10 o'clock last night when she was attacked by a negro, who grabbed at her pocketbook. Miss Steckler didn't scream and then faint. Instead she showed fight and seized her assailant. He pushed her against the stone fence and growled:

"Give me that pocketbook; if you don't I'll kill you."

"I'll do no such thing," replied Miss Steckler. "I'll hand you over to the police." Then she called for help, meantime holding the negro so that he could not strike her.

Patrolman Donohue of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station heard her and arrested the negro.

At Sixty-fifth Street and Broadway a McClellan political meeting was going on, and as Donahue, his prisoner, and Miss Steckler marched through the crowd Miss Steckler was asked for details. She told her story to half a dozen men, who quickly repeated it. Immediately there was a rush for the negro.

"Lynch him! Kill him!" yelled the mob, and fifty men made a rush for Donahue and his prisoner. Just then, however, four other policemen ran up and the crowd was beaten off. At the police station the man gave the name of Harold Parker of 226 West Sixty-first Street. Miss Steckler was commended for her bravery.

"It's a wonder you didn't faint when this man attacked you," said the desk Sergeant.

"Not at all," she replied, coolly "I wouldn't run from any man of that kind who lives."

There were no trains running to the capital, but in consultation with railroad officers the Governor devised a way around, taking the Burlington to Mexico, Mo., where he found the locomotive waiting. After looking into the case, Gov. Folk commuted Bailey's sentence to life imprisonment.

CITY'S REDEMPTION THE ISSUE, IVINS SAYS

Must Be Saved from Organized Appetite for Plunder.

WILL ATTACK GAS MONOPOLY

He Tells Ratification Meeting That It Can Be Smashed—Seth Low's Appeal.

William M. Ivins, the Republican candidate for Mayor, opened his campaign last night at Carnegie Hall in a meeting held under the auspices of the Republican County Committee and presided over by ex-Mayor Seth Low.

The capacity of the hall was not tested by the crowd present. At 8:15, when Chairman Low came on the platform, there were some vacant boxes, more than a few vacant seats in the parquet, and a considerable number of empty chairs in the top gallery.

When Mr. Ivins entered the hall, shortly after 8 o'clock, he received an enthusiastic though brief greeting. The demonstration when he was introduced by ex-Mayor Low, was much more boisterous and lasted for a full five minutes.

Mr. Ivins began his speech by explaining why he decided to take the Republican nomination for the Mayoralty. It was, he said, in order that there might be an effective opposition to Tammany Hall. He said that if Mr. Hearst polled 75,000 votes Ivins would be the next Mayor of the city.

Mr. Ivins aroused great enthusiasm when, with reference to the possibility of Patrick Francis McGowan becoming Mayor through the resignation of Mayor McClellan at the end of a year to run for Governor, he said:

Will McClellan Stay?

"Seven times a night, at seven meetings a night, from now until the end of the campaign I shall put the question to Mayor McClellan, 'Do you intend to keep your contract with the people of the City of New York, if elected, by serving out your full term?'

Mr. Ivins evoked applause when he said that if he was elected Mayor he would give up every business he had in order to devote his time to the service of the people.

"If you elect McClellan," he said, "you have no guarantee that he will serve, and if you elect Hearst you will elect a man who will use the Mayoralty as a mere advertisement for a yellow newspaper."

Mr. Ivins said the people of New York ought not to intrust the carrying out of the principle of municipal ownership to Hearst and his followers because Mr. Hearst was "the prophet of confiscation." On the other hand, they could not afford to trust to the Tammany Hall organization, which had "reduced graft to a science and a philosophy."

Mr. Ivins's mother, his wife and children and some of his grandchildren were in one of the boxes.

After his introductory remarks. Mr. Ivins said that, owing to the necessity of his putting his position clearly before the people, he would depart from his usual custom and would read what he had to say about the municipal problems now confronting the city. He read as follows:

"I conceive that the real, the fundamental, issue of the campaign is the redemption of the city from Tammany Hall, from that soulless, brutal, omnivorous thing which represents the organized appetite for plunder, which knows no civic pride, and which is best and perfectly illustrated in the persons of Mr. Murphy and Mr. McCarren. It is not long ago that the latter, speaking for himself, said, with the cynicism of the trained one to society: 'This talk about tainted money makes me tired; I want all of it I can get. The trouble with it ain't the paint, but that it ain't enough.'

"My campaign is fundamentally against a new gospel of dishonor and corruption known as the theory of honest graft. Fortunately, it has been formulated by a boss grafter, Plunkitt of Tammany Hall, and has been officially indorsed by Murphy of the same, in a commendatory preface. This is the decalogue, which I quote from the book:

Plunkitt's Theory Made Plain.

"There is an honest graft, and I am an example of how it works. I might sum up the whole thing by sayin': 'I seen my opportunities and I took 'em.'

"Just let me explain by examples. My party's in power in this city, and it's going to undertake a lot of public improvements. Well, I'm tipped off, say, that they're going to lay out a new park at a certain place.

"I see my opportunity and I take it. I go to that place and I buy up all the land I can in the neighborhood. Then the board of this or that makes its plan public, and there is a rush to get my land, which nobody cared particular for before.

"Ain't it perfectly honest to charge a good price and make a profit on my investment and foresight? Of course, it is. Well, that's honest graft.

"I've told you how I got rich by honest graft. Now, let me tell you that most politicians who are accused of robbin' the city get rich the same way.

"They didn't steal a dollar from the City Treasury. They just seen their opportunities and took them. That is why, when a reform administration comes in and spends a half million dollars in tryin' to find the public robberies they talked about in the campaign, they don't find them.

"The books are always all right. The money in the City Treasury is all right. Everything is all right. All they can show is that the Tammany heads of departments looked after their friends, within the law, and gave them what opportunities they could to make honest graft.

"It is to defeat the possibility of offering such opportunities to honest grafters that I stand in this fight. I hope to keep clearly before the public throughout the campaign the great fundamental issues of efficient, honest, intelligent, and economical administration in each and every one of our great departments, every one of which, on some side, vitally touches the existence of the social organism, and every one of which, in some way, directly or indirectly, proximately or remotely, makes for or against our lives, our health, our happiness, the lives, the health, the happiness of our wives and children and the suffering wards of the community.

Mayor's Promise and Performance.

"I propose as the campaign progresses to take up each department in its turn and to show you the difference between Mayor McClellan's promise and his performance. The Mayor's engaging personality and tradition of ancestral greatness cannot through conspiracy of silence on the part of easy going and socially self-satisfied persons be permitted to earn for the Mayor the tradition of capacity and accomplishment.

"I unhesitatingly denounce the administration as a sham, a poor, ugly, beggarly humbug, a desert of the dust of broken promises and hopes betrayed.

"An effort has been made by the subtle process of suggestion to benumb the public mind into acquiescent acceptance of the theory that Mayor McClellan has made a good Mayor. Do not deceive yourselves; he is a subtle politician, whose culture and whose manners are of no value to Tammany Hall, except as a cover to its iniquities, and Mayor McClellan has committed a greater wrong than any active wrong in office in passively lending his great name as a shibboleth to the system. The Mayor says he is prepared to defend and justify his administration. We should all welcome this manly attitude, and we shall have a campaign of education as well as of edification.

Efforts to Cloud the Issue.

"Now an effort is being made to distract attention from what I conceive to be the main issue, namely, honest and efficient administration in every department of the Municipal Government, and to substitute for this the name of municipal ownership. It is true, however, that under existing circumstances and at the present time, the two issues are so closely bound together as to be largely inseparable. I am convinced that the time has come when, from the academic point of view, municipal ownership is no longer an open question.

"The community has suffered so long and so terribly through the misdeeds of the great public service corporations that it has reached the end of its patience. We are a conservative people, and we move with exceptional slowness on lines that look to the dwarfing of the individual and to the magnification of the State, and we move with even more exceptional slowness on lines that in any way suggest the State interference with the sacred right of the individual to his honestly earned wealth.

"The community has, therefore, been slow in coming to its conclusions with regard to municipal ownership and operation of the great instrumentalities commonly known as public utility franchises, such as those for gas, electric light, and transportation. We have waited for years, studying closely the results of municipal ownership in the great European cities, and, reading these results, together with the criminal history of our municipal service corporations in this country, the public, I believe, has finally made up its mind upon several points, some of which have already been expressed in terms of legislation.

What the City Should Keep.

"First, we believe that these tremendously great sources of wealth, which are themselves created by the community, should be reserved for and belong to the community. We believe that corporations whose franchises have lapsed or are subject to forfeiture should be rigidly compelled to live up to the utmost limit of the letter and spirit of their contracts with the public, and should be called to an immediate accounting.

"We believe that no public utility franchise should ever be granted in perpetuity, and I think the majority of the community believes that those which have already been granted in perpetuity should, so soon as it is practicable and when the city has the means to that end, be acquired for the city upon fair terms and at an honest price in the strictest conformity with the Constitution and the law, not only, but in strictest conformity with the moral dictate that no man shall be deprived of his property for public uses except after full and honest payment therefor.

"I desire to deceive no one, least of all myself, and I am unwilling to be a party to leading any one into the belief that there is a possibility of an immediate acquisition and operation of the greatest of the public utilities franchises, namely, the city subways. I am equally incapable of any desire to blind even the most hopeful of my fellow-citizens to the fact that the problem is one of the greatest and most serious from the point of view of practicability and of the attainment of the best results that has ever yet been presented to our people.

To Avoid Rashness or Injustice.
